Heroes will never die

Two city parades honor veterans

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Two colorful parades to honor fallen veterans of Newton stepped off over the long Memorial Day weekend as thousands of area residents paused to reflect on lost loved ones and fallen heroes in history.

Many of the heroes of wars since the turn of the century are still living and hundreds of people took to the streets Sunday in Nonantum and Monday near City Hall to honor the veterans.

The Sunday parade, sponsored by the Nonantum Children's Christmas Party Association, included dozens of marching units and solemn ceremonies to honor veterans of all wars. Monday's parade, the official event of the city, was dampened by heavy rains but contained a like measure of honor for the city's war dead.

Although Newton's sons and daughters turned out in force to serve in the most recent wars, the ranks of those who fought so hard in World War I, "the first great war," have thinned considerably. A young man who was of draft age in 1917 would be 84 now.

The effect of the gradual disappearance of the WW I veteran is twofold. For those who knew him, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder." For those who never did, it often means, "Out of sight, out of mind."

Even with more than 65 years gone by the chronicles of heroism in the trenches of France and the skies over Germany still evoke a patriotic spirit in many. There was Sgt. Alvin York capturing hundreds of the enemy single-handedly. There was the air ace Eddie Rickenbacker, who went on a one-man crusade to rid the European skies of Huns. They are still remembered in legend and song.

But what of the others who "gave the last full measure of devotion?" What of the 100 men from Newton who went to Europe in 1917, who served their country with distinction and never returned from "over there?"

Elliot Adams Chapin, a Newton Centre resident and a graduate of Newton High School, was rejected by the U.S. Aviation Service because of a minor defect in one eye. He left Harvard in his junior year and went to Canada, where they welcomed him into the British Royal Flying Corps in August, 1917.

By the next spring, Chapin was flying a bomber over German territory, harassing enemy lines of communication, railways, ammunition dumps and airfields. On June 27, returning from a successful bombing run in northern France, Chapin's plane fell prey to a pack of Fokker scouts.

After a desperate fight, Chapin's fuel tank was hit. His plane exploded at 1,300 feet.

As his plane went down behind enemy lines, Chapin, with the casual style to which so many young men aspired in those days, was seen to turn to his navigator and shake hands with him.

David Endicott Putnam, a Newton High School graduate, was a direct descendant of the legendary Revolutionary War hero Gen. Israel "Old Put" Putnam. Writing of the younger Putnam, Newton Graphic editor J.C. Brimblecom said of his WW I heroics, "Happening in a time crowded with deeds that would have amazed antiquity, they take their place without special display in the annals of a new age. The spirit behind them remains unchanged."

Putnam left Harvard as a freshman to join the aviation service, but he was rejected because of his youth. He got a job on a cattle ship and travelled to France, where he immediately joined the Foreign Legion's elite airborne fighting corps, the Lafayette Escadrille.

He was commissioned in the U.S. Aviation Service after a year in the French corps, and he went on to win the American Distinguished Service Cross, the French Legion of Honor, the Medaille Militaire and the famous Croix de Guerre.

Putnam also won the title of "American Ace of Aces" for his airborne fighting prowess.

Albert Edgar Angier

'Lay me down and look after the other men,' Angier said just before he died.

His record of bringing down five German planes in one day was never matched by an American. He was finally credited with downing a total of 34 enemy planes in combat.

His tragic end came when he was attacked by eight German Fokkers. He shot down one of them, but two others got behind him and sent his biplane crashing to the earth on Sept. 12, 1918.

State may pay for Needham St. overhaul

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — If Newton and Needham pay for design work to relieve frustrating Needham Street traffic, the state may pick-up the tab for road construction, a move which could avoid a financial face-off between local industries and Newton city officials.

"I would say a very hesitant yes," said State Public Works Commissioner Robert Tierney on Friday, when asked if the state would commit itself to revamping the road that carries nearly 30,000 commuters daily and services this area's largest industrial tax base.

Commissioner Tierney stated much will depend on a "clean design" and the amount of highway money available.

However, last week Mayor Theodore Mann suggested industries in the area should pay for two-thirds of the design plans.

"We are very encouraged by the willingness of business to make financial contributions, along with the city, to achieve the first giant step," said Mayor Mann on Thursday, suggesting the need for corporate money.

Two of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce Needham Street task force members, John Fox of GTE Sylvania and Itek economic development vice-president Stanley Golembe, would not favor such a plan.

"My feeling is all of us are taxpayers and I don't believe many corporations will underwrite a road study," said Fox, a member of the task force for six years. GTE employs 3,000 and is the largest employer in both communities, added Fox.

"I don't consider it the responsibility of private business to build a state highway, it's the responsibility of the state and local government," said Golembe.

Chamber of Commerce president Lawrence Goldsmith, who attended a meeting with the mayor on the subject early last week said, "I'm excited about it personally, but I don't know what position the chamber will take."

The traffic jams on Needham Street may force some industries to leave the area.

"Itek has been here for over 20 years. If it (traffic) gets any worse we will move," said Itek vice-president for economic development Golembe on Thursday. Itek employs 120 people, he added.

Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce executive director Lewis Songer said, "At least two companies have moved out in the last two years because of the traffic."

"Major companies like GTE Sylvania are concerned and say it (the daily commuter crunch) is becoming an increasing consideration of their future plans," said Needham Town Planning Director Russell Burke.

Mayor Mann is 'very encouraged by the willingness of business to make financial contributions' but two industry leaders scoff at the idea of private funding for roadwork.

Preliminary road plans call for a 70-foot, often five lane roadway, according to City Traffic Engineer David Tannozzini.

"The concept the task force developed calls for two through lanes in each direction and where necessary, a center lane for turns," said Tannozzini. Since there is a great need for left turns, the fifth lane will be present for most of the road, he added.

Cambridge Street in Boston, without the raised median, is how Tannozzini believes the improved roadway will look.

Needham Street is about 50-feet wide and has a 60-foot right of way. This makes a 10-foot land taking necessary to complete the planned 70-foot width.

A 150 year-old bridge near the intersection of Oak Street and Needham Street would be widened from 29 feet to about 50 feet, said Tannozzini. The last time any work was done to the stone-arched bridge was in 1897, he added.

City kitty shortfall has officials concerned

NEWTON — Unpaid 1982 property taxes continue to promise the city's financial picture might look bleak on June 30, the end of the fiscal year, but unexpected revenues might brighten it up by then according to City Comptroller Larry Marino.

Addressing the aldermanic Finance Committee, Marino reiterated his prediction the city will probably have no money in its "free cash" account on June 30.

In his last report to the committee the comptroller predicted the city would lose its highly touted AAA bond rating if it shows no free cash for the second year in a row.

Mayor Theodore Mann said last week that a drop in the city's bond rating "would show up in the marketability and the interest paid" on bonds issued in the future.

Marino said some other sources of revenue were underestimated at the beginning of the fiscal year. He guessed that fees for building permits might come in at $150,000 to $200,000 over the original $410,000 estimate, thanks to some large developments like the Druker Corp. project at Newton Corner.

Court fines, Marino predicted, might exceed original estimates by more than $50,000. Fines for moving traffic violations make up the bulk of the revenues, he said. "We are 50-percent over the estimate now, with two months to go in the year," he said.

Motor vehicle excise taxes could come in at more than $150,000 over the estimated total for the year, according to Marino.

Parking ticket revenues, which have been flooding into the city treasurer's office since computer lists of scofflaws were released to police last Tuesday, are expected to fall short of estimates, Marino added. Revenues originally pegged at $400,000 might only amount to $360,000, he said.

Marino told the committee he hoped the unexpected revenues would make up for some shortfalls in other departments. The Water/Sewer Department, he estimated, would actually collect only $4.7 million of the $5.1 million it was expected to bring in during the year.

Jumpin' Jedi, the lines were long

By Andrew Caffrey
Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — First it was "Star Wars," then "The Empire Strikes Back." Now, it's "The Return of The Lines."

No, wait. It's "The Return of The Jedi."

But, like it or not, lines are an integral part of the fabulously successful trio of George Lucas' space war movies.

And lines there were on the movie's opening at the General Cinema at the Chestnut Hill Mall.

One hour before the 7:30 p.m. showing of the third and final chapter of Luke Skywalker's odyssey through space, the lines were stretched over 200 feet out and into the mall parking lot. And most of them weren't going anywhere for a while after cinema manager Izzy Strier announced minutes later the showing was sold out last week.

But, make no mistake. These people take their devotion to Luke, the evil Darth Vadar, Hans Solo and Princess Leia seriously.

Take the case of the four Boston College students. They went so far as to turn down the last seats in the room with a 35mm projecter, and instead opted to wait three hours to see "Jedi" in all its $32.5 million glory in 70mm Dolby.

Then again, these are your ordinary "Star Wars" fans.

Youngster buys a ticket on first day of 'Jedi' screening.

'Jedi' opening drew true fans

James Cahill and Aimee Lapenna, with some relief help from Gordon Farkough and Beth Rudzinski, were well prepared for the three-hour wait. They had cocktails and popcorn to pass the time.

And from their position — second in line, right behind the guys with the corned-beef sandwiches — they were going to see it in 70mm Dolby.

Lapenna said she and her friends had waited weeks for the movie's opening, and well, if they can wait that long, they can wait another three hours.

But there were a lucky 800 who did get to the 7:30 showing, but the cinema manager said they had been lining up outside since 5 a.m. to get tickets to what many feel is the last word in cinema special effects and big-screen mythology.

Two of them were Seth, 8, and Josh, 5, who stood with their parents Marla and Henry Margolis, at the edge of the mass of fans pushing toward the theater doors.

While the two little guys said they had to "half-drag" their folks to the movie, the older ones unabashedly admitted to being fanatics over the whole "Star Wars" package.

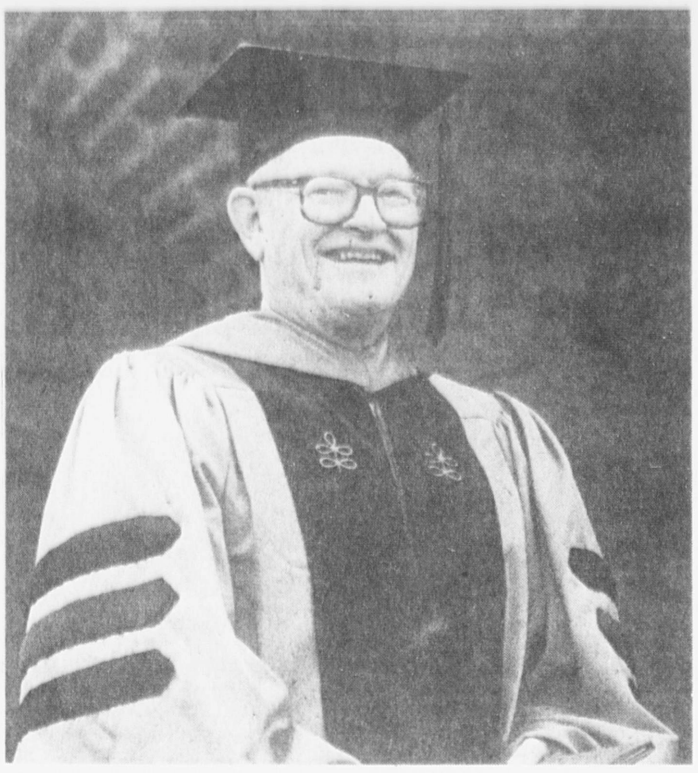
While Henry Margolis said the whole thing was "really great," Marla admitted to having canceled family plans to see the film.

But she did give way some to the kids.

"They are really good fantasy films for the kids," she said, continuing on to describe the hundreds of dollars in "Star Wars" toys in the house.

Young Brian MacDonald had to "nicely persuade" grandmother Mary Powers and aunt Janet Powers of Watertown to stand in line and see the film.

As Brian safely headed toward the ticket counter for the 7:30 show, he mused that it was time for Darth Vadar, the evil warlord of all that is space, to die.



New graduate

Dr. Lot B. Page, chief of medicine at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, finally received his bachelor of arts degree recently from Middlebury College in Vermont.

After 40 years Dr. Page earns undergrad degree

MIDDLEBURY, VT. — In the robes of a Harvard doctor and with a lifetime of dinstinguished achievements as a researcher, teacher and administrator in the field of medicine, Dr. Lot B. Page finally received his bachelor of arts degree from Middlebury College May 22 as a member of the Class of '83.

The presentation took place at commencement ceremonies at the college and fulfilled a 40-year dream for the current Newton-Wellesley Hospital chief of medicine.

Dr. Page's lack of an undergraduate degree came to light when the editor of the Middlebury College magazine heard of a symposium in Boston in 1981 to honor Dr. Page's contributions to research on hypertension and his fifteenth anniversary as chief of medicine.

The phone to Dr. Page revealed that he had been called to active military service at the end of his sophomore year in 1943. He was never sent overseas but was assigned to an engineering program at The Citadel in South Carolina. Retested at the end of that program, he was assigned to a premed program at the University of Missouri and then to the Washington University Medical School.

Following the war he transferred to Harvard Medical School. At Harvard, he submitted his transcripts to Middlebury and asked that he be considered for a bachelor's degree.

"They wrote back telling me they would be happy to grant me my degree provided I pay back my scholarship money," Dr. Page said. "I was going to medical school and working to pay my way. There was no way that I could pay anything so I forgot about the whole incident."

As a result of the 1981 phone call Dr. Page was invited to resubmit his transcripts and last November, following a review, Dr. Page was notified by Middlebury that "the reams of red tape and bureaucratic procedures, for which institutions of higher education are famed, have finally been ground through." On May 22 he was awarded his bachelor's degree.

Auburndale Yard study

Home purchase by city okayed

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — An aldermanic committee raced through its lengthy agenda recommending the city accept a controversial Christina Street home and establish a citizen's reuse committee for the Auburndale Yard.

Gables developer Alan Green was told by Alderman Paul Coletti Thursday before the Administration and Planning Committee he has done a "fantastic job" in bringing the home up-to-par for the city.

Developers are required by ordinance to give 10 percent of new developments to low income housing, but the Christina Street home was considered substandard by the legislators.

"There were some things I wish I was able to catch earlier," said Green during the meeting.

Alderman Coletti, one of the chief objectors to the condition of the newly constructed home, seemed satisfied it could be used as public housing.

"At this point I think (city housing director) Frank Quinn can be trusted with closing the deal," said Coletti.

Quinn had also objected to the condition of the home and said it did not meet his standards.

Administration and Planning Committee Chairman Robert Tennant said, "Certainly there's a need for housing in the city."

Green said he is spending a "substantial amount to fix it up," but did not know the total cost.

Among the items being fixed or replaced at the home are: new shingles to replace masonite siding, insulating basement walls, landscaping, a wood fence, two coats of asphault on the driveway and storm doors.

Turning their attention to the defunct Auburndale public work's yard on Auburndale Avenue the committee approved the appointment of seven local residents to the 14-member citizens' reuse committee.

Fearing adverse impact on the Elliot Street public works yard, Alderman Coletti said he would follow the citizen's committee closely.

"I will watch every meeting to see if there will be any impact on Elliot Street (another city yard)," said Coletti. A number of aldermen outside of Ward 4, where the Auburndale Yard is located, want public works' activities in other yards to remain low-key.

> 'Certainly there's a need for housing in the city.'
> Ald. Robert Tennant

"At every meeting I've had with my constituents in Upper Falls, two things strike a bad cord - TV towers and the Elliot Street Yard - and I'm going to make sure they aren't adversely affected," said Coletti.

"Commissioner Sulik said there will not be any increased activity," said Alderman Tennant.

Ward 4 Alderman Carol Ann Shea said her reason for wanting to speed-up the reuse process is "there is a possibility for funding housing on the site."

Going before the Board of Aldermen for approval will be Jean Cole of 106 Pine St., Auburndale Community Association president Polly Bryson, Charlotte Brown of 52 Stratford Rd, lawyer Peter Bella of 170 Auburndale Ave., direct abutter George Connolly of 15 Edgewood Rd, Robert Davis of 48 Auburndale Ave. and direct abutter Mary Maglecocco of 79 Auburndale Ave.

Seven other citizens will be appointed the mayor.

Crafts, collectibles fair slated June 4

NEWTON — The Newton Needham Mental Health Association is sponsoring a "Crafts and Collectibles Day" Saturday, June 4, 10-2, on the grounds of the Grace Episcopal Church, 64 Eldredge St., Newton Corner. Featured will be white elephants, crafts, and a raffle (raffle tickets sold at the fair). Help support the work of the Association and buy something interesting for yourself at the same time. Rain date June 11.

The Mewton Needham Mental Health Association operates the Newton and Needham Guidance Clinics which provide outpatient mental health services to Newton and Needham children and their families.

Man arraigned on rape of BC student

NEWTON — A 52-year-old Boston man was arraigned Tuesday in Brighton District Court on a charge of raping a Boston College coed in the Boston portion of the Chestnut Hill Resevoir, police said.

Newton police sped to the area after the rape was reported about 2 a.m. Sunday. Newton Sgt. Rupert G. Baker found the suspect's car and notified MDC police. MDC police, who had jurisdiction, staked out the car, and arrested Albert Hager when he returned to it, Newton police said.

Hager, formerly of Worcester Square in Boston's South End, has been living out of his car, police reportedly said. Police reportedly said the victim identified Hager by his car and a jogging suit he was wearing.

Police reportedly gave the following account of the incident. The woman was unable to sleep after having studied late, so she went for a walk about 2 a.m. She noticed a car following her and went out of sight of the road opposite 62 Beacon St. in Newton.

Suddenly, she was attack by a man who pulled off her clothes below the waist and raped her. She was still carrying those clothes a short time later when witnesses in a passing car saw and talked with her and phoned police.

Police arrested Hager less than an hour later. Reportedly, he did not resist arrest.

In addition to the rape charge, Hager faces arraignment on charges of committing indecent acts and assault and battery with a knife.

Time running out for Jobs Bill alterations

NEWTON — A recent public hearing yielded no change in the destination of $486,000 in federal money under the new emergency jobs bills.

The Planning and Development Board held the meeting to obtain citizens' input on how the money should be spent, and officials announced that unless they make any changes before June 1, the programs slated to receive money will remain intact.

Primary among the projects due to receive the federal money are two public works projects, $336,000 will go to repaving 49 streets in Nonantum, Newton Corner and Upper Falls. The remaining funds will be divided between human service and school programs.

The money, under federal guidelines, must be targeted to programs affecting low and moderate income level families, and, under rules of the Community Block Grant Program, local governments are urged to give preference to activities that alleviate unemployment in the city.

These three areas (Nonantum, Newton Corner, and Upper Falls) have the highest concentration of low and moderate income level families, said Senior Community Develpment Planner Stephen Gartrell.

Edward Dailey, Vice-Chairman of the Planning Board, said the "primary objective (of the repavement project) was to prevent layoffs." The project wouldy employ 11 Publiic Works employees who might otherwise lose their jobs because of the city's new private trash contract.

But, Richard McGrath, Chairman of the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee, said the decision to put so much money towards the repavement project was a "political" one because the city's main concern was to prevent layoffs.

"They had to allocate the money because of the 11 positions, 11 positions dictated by the mayor. It was a political decision," he charged.

McGrath, who said he had nothing against paving city streets, argued that the there were other projects which had higher priorities than the public works projects.

Human services programs, operated by private, non-profit community organizations, received $75,000 of the jobs money, and McGrath said those programs had the highest priority.

Some of the programs slated to receive money benefit mentally handicapped people, senior citizens and youths with a history of trouble with the law.

"Those are the people who are most vulnerable to economic hard times," McGrath said.

He asked the Planning Board if there was any flexibility in the allocation of the public works money because he wanted to see more of that money redirected into more human service programs.

Dailey said the public works allocation was a "pretty firm" figure.

McGrath said the Planning Board, although doing a good job, had "little flexibility" in deciding where the funds were spent.

He gave as an example the seeming lack of adjustment to other projects the money in the public works projects, which also include rehabilitation of some public buildings, at an allocation of $44,622, and the prevention of two layoffs.

"Therefore human service programs are left with a residual amount, and all the organizations will have to compete for the money," he said.

Benefiting the most from the repavement project, he said, will be the company that provides the materials for the repavement. The materials make up most of the costs of such a project, he continued.

Dailey said the time constraints made it tough for the board to equitably allocate the money. He said the Community Development staff was presented with "a gross lack of information from Washington (the Housing and Urban Development Department, responsible for adminstering the money)."

On April 26, Shorr said, her department was informed by Washington that July 1 was the deadline for submission of project proposals for federal approval. The projects still have to be approved by Mayor Theodore Mann and the Board of Aldermen.

Dailey said the board and the development office was presented with a proposal to use all the money for public works projects.

"Frankly, that was not the best use of the money," he said. The board identified issues in the commmunity, he continued, that needed to be funded, and made human service programs a priority. He also said the board saw "a funding crisis" in the school department because of the mayor's cut from the Fiscal Year 1894 school budget, and allocated $75,000 toward school programs.

Teacher files suit claiming board is forcing her to leave

By Gary Dorion
Middlesex County News Service

Cambridge — A 56 year-old junior high school teacher, alleging the Newton School Board unjustifiably is forcing her out of a job, filed suit last week against school officials and the city in an effort to block her impending termination.

The suit claims that Sylvia M. Blair, 16 Rosewood Dr., Stoughton is being singled out for dismissal because she has been in the system for 18 years and makes a relatively large salary.

According to court documents the school board, on May 3, sent a letter to Blair stating, "Your layoff and dismissal is proposed due to severe budgetary consideration and declining enrollment. It is not a reflection of your teaching ability." The letter stated the committee will act on Blair's dismissal on June 27 at Bigelow Jr. High School.

Filed in Middlesex Superior Court, the suit seeks a preliminary injunction against the school board and the city enjoining them from dismissing Blair for school year 1983-84, prior to a hearing. The suit claims Blair is qualified as a business education teacher for secondary level teaching but that the school committee has only considered her as a junior high typing teacher in proposing her layoff and dismissal.

Filed by attorney Roberta Fitzsimmons, the complaint claims the assistant director of personnel in the Newton school system on several occasions tried to induce Blair to "voluntarily retire."

In February, 1982, the assistant director informed Blair he would recommend she not be rehired for school year 1982-83, the suit claims. But Blair filed a grievance and before the grievance was completed her termination notice was withdrawn and she was retained as a business education teacher, according to the complaint.

Attorney Fitzsimmons stated the school system "would save almost as much money as if it fired two entry level teachers" if Blair was forced out of her position. Citing Massachusetts law, Fitzsimmons stated "No tenured teacher may be dismissed so long as there is a non-tenured teacher who holds a job which a tenured teacher is qaulified to perform."

Fitzsimmons added that non-tenured teachers hold jobs in the Newton school system in areas where Blair is certified.

According to the complaint the assistant personnel director told Blair "There was no place for her in the Newton School system..." It is also alleged the assistant director warned her that if she did not accept early retirement, she would be dismissed at the end of the current school year but if she did retire, he could arrange for her to continue in the group medical insurance plan for an additional two years and to credit an additional two years of service to her retirement fund.

Fitzsimmons and Blair alleged the school board's "assertion" that Blair is being dismissed solely for budgetary considerations is a "sham and subterfuge." They also claim the school committee has refused to consider Blair's certification as a business education teacher in secondary education.

The school board's May 3 letter to Blair says the superintendent will reccommend Blair's "layoff" in June, pursuant to the provisions of the teachers collective bargaining agreement. The letter added, however that the State Supreme Judicial Court recently ruled teachers are not entitled to a notice and a hearing under Mass. General Laws, where dismissal is caused by economic factors (Boston Teachers Union, Local 66 vs. the Boston School Committee. 1982.)

"Unlike prior years then, the Committee does not intend to offer hearings to individual teachers prior to the vote of the Committee regarding layoffs," the committee's letter stated.

The letter went on to state that, if Blair waived her rights to appeals, the effective date of her dismissal would be at the end of a two-year recall period, unless she was recalled. If Blair refused to sign the waiver, school officials stated her dissmissal would be effective prior to the commencement of the 1983-84 school year.

The school committee and the city have 20 days with which to respond to the complaint, once officially notified.

Sewer smoke tests underway in city

NEWTON — The City of Newton has received a federal and state grant of $135,000, to continue with the next phase of the sewer improvement program. These funds will be used to identify areas where groundwater and rainwater are leaking into the city's sanitary sewers.

In some parts of the city, this leakage is so severe that during heavy rains, sewage backs up into homes or overflows to the Charles River, according to city officials.

Coffin & Richardson, the city's wastewater consultant, has already initiated the proposed work. They are currently taking nighttime flow measurements in five areas of the city to locate groundwater infiltration.

On May 16, the consultants began a smoke testing program which will be conducted during daylight hours and which will continue until June 17. Smoke testing will help to locate defects in the sewers which allow rainwater to enter the sanitary sewer system instead of the storm drainage system.

Paul Giunta, city engineer, said the work of the consultant will consist of blowing white smoke into sewer manholes which are located in the streets and then observing the surrounding area for signs of leakage.

Giunta recommended that if residents observe smoke leaking into or around their homes, they should not be alarmed. The smoke is non-toxic and non-staining and simple ventilation of the home will quickly dissipate the smoke.

Residents are advised by Giunta to ensure that handicapped persons, persons with severe respiratory problems, and animals are not confined in rooms which may experience smoke leaking from plumbing fixtures.

Giunta emphasized that smoke entering a dwelling indicates a defect in the plumbing and that homeowners should correct this defect as quickly as possible to protect their own health and safety. If smoke is observed, residents should notify the representative of the Newton Engineering Department, who will be at the testing site, so that the source of the smoke may be pinpointed and an immediate evaluation made.

Residents on streets to be smoke tested will be receiving notices which will be hand delivered to their homes several days prior to testing. In addition, the daily smoke testing schedule will be announced on WNTN radio, AM 1550, between 6:30 and 9 a.m.

Home Start program offered

CHESTNUT HILL — Home Start, the educational parent-and-child Jewish living program for families with young children will again be offered in 1983-84 by the Bureau of Jewish Education to the Greater Boston Community.

Designed to re-establish the home as the focal point for Jewish values, Home Start helps the young child within her or his family, regardless of schooling, religious background or synagogue affiliation.

Since Judaism is heavily home-centered, the program was born out of the conviction that the home is critical in Jewish Education and that parents are the best teachers in the early years.

The family preparing together to observe the coming Jewish holiday is the main ingredient of this project's educational process. In advance of selected holidays, subscribing families receive attractive packets. (For 1983-84, the fall holidays, Pesah, and Shabbat.)

Before eahc holiday, three packets are sent to each family about one week apart, making nine mailings for one year. The packets contain stories and story books to read to the children (or recorded narrations), handicrafts for parents and children, simple recipes and cooking tips, games, recorded songs, and background and historical information.

The holiday materials are tailored to the age of the child (3-4 and 5-7) and to meet the needs of families of Conservative, Orthodox or Reform orientation.

Subscriptions to the Home Start Program are $22 per child for one year. The deadline for receipt of subscriptions and checks is June 1.

Persons and organizations interested in subscribing to the program or learning more about it should contact the Bureau at 277-3100.

Hasia Richman if program coordinator.

Chilly, but true test for heroes

Faith in the intelligence of America's youth was restored last week when they put a true hero and a medical genius above a man who just happens to be in the White House.

Some 4500 elementary school students nationwide picked Lenny Skutnik as the top "Real American Hero" in an essay contest over Dr. Jonas Salk, second, and President Ronald Reagan, third.

Skutnik gained national acclaim last year when he leaped into the ice-filled Potomac River at the site of an airplane crash to rescue a woman from the plane.

His daring rescue, captured by a Washington, D.C. cameraman, took him from obscurity into the limelight reserved for a select few true heroes.

Dr. Salk invented the anti-polio vaccine, something which it was nice to see today's grade school kids have not taken lightly.

Too often, it seems, the man in the Oval Office tends to place high in the minds of those sought out for opinion polls. That is natural since one can't watch the evening news or pick up a daily newspaper without seeing the president's mug.

But being in the White House hardly makes one a hero. In at least this case, a selfless leap into the freezing Potomac is the true test for the greatest American hero.

Remove tunnel tolls entirely?

Evidently the experimental one-way toll system for the Callahan-Sumner Tunnels and the Mystic River Bridge is working out well. It was an idea first greeted with skepticism because anything new seldom wins immediate acceptance, particularly where political credit might be involved, but no amount of objection developed.

The backup on traffic at both ends has been serious, what with the jockeying to get into converging lanes and the fishing through pockets for change on the way to booths. No one is going to wipe out the problems of converging vehicles, so great is the volume, but acceleration that provides for a positive speedup on one end has to be a big plus.

One of our editorial colleagues posed an interesting thought the other day. If one-way tolls were to provide significant relief for half of the traffic at peak periods, why wouldn't it be desirable to assure a total reduction of the problem by wiping out of tolls for the tunnels and bridge entirely?

Accompanying this proposition is an observation that the original concept after liquidating the bond issues floated by Massport for construction was to convert the tunnels and bridge into free access roadways. A closer financial analysis would have to be made to determine the justification for withdrawing sustaining funds, noting maintenance and repair costs.

On the practical side, it has to be pointed out that once established toll roads just go on forever yielding additional funds and ways are found to spend them. So, if it is to be no-toll use for these major traffic conduits, alternative support funding has to be a consideration. Still, the idea is not without more than passing interest.

Try to remember their faces

By Richard Lodge

Veterans and their families around the country gathered together to sort through memories, recall faces and shed a few tears on Monday, Memorial Day.

It is an obligation, a tradition, each year offering the kids a treat as solemn-faced former soldiers march by, with their simple ceremonies and ribbons of battles long past.

In this week's Graphic we looked back at the lives and heroic deeds of Newton veterans of World War I, chronicled in the book "Newton War Memorial." The focus is on a few men who gave their lives in dramatic acts of courage, acts which have marked every war since men first organized to take up arms against other men.

Yet the book, published "lest we forget," as the coversheet reads, also detailed the lives and deaths of many Newton veterans in WWI who died in ways less dramatic but no less important.

There was Gardner C. Abbott, who enlisted April 14, 1917, as a seaman and died less than a year later of pneumonia at the Chelsea Naval Hospital.

Frederick D. Day of Auburndale, one of the first Newton men to go overseas, contracted spinal meningitis and died at Chaumont, France, Jan. 22, 1918.

Valentine E. Ferris of Newton died at Ft. McHenry, Maryland, on Oct. 11, 1918 of pneumonia. And Karl C. McKenney, stricken with influenza aboard a transport ship on the way to France, died at Brest on Oct. 30, 1918.

Through all the memories of war, the needless deaths and grieving families of World War I and II come scenes and thoughts recorded over and over by soldiers through the years. And it is those images of war which seem never to change, whether the front is a blackened forest at Chateau-Thierry, a muddy beach at Iwo Jima, or a stump-covered hill outside Khe Sanh.

Army Private 1st Class Richard A. Likely, son of Police Lt. and Mrs. John Likely of Auburndale, was yet another young man gone off to war back in October, 1970 when he sat down to write a letter home.

"I am writing this letter to tell people how Vietnam is, in the eyes of a soldier over here," Likely wrote in a letter published that year.

"First I would like to say that Vietnam is an experience you have to go through to understand," he wrote. "No one can write to you their feelings of happiness at a job well done, or fear during a firefight, or sorrow when your best buddy gets killed. You have to be here to know what it is like."

> Pfc. Richard Likely, Vietnam, 1970

In his letter home, six months before he was killed at age 20 by a booby trap, Pfc. Likely described this far-off country and its people.

Vietnam, he wrote, is "a beautiful country, the hills are so green, when not raining the sky is so blue, birds fluttering all around and flowers of every color growing wild."

And, as untold numbers of soldiers had done before him, Likely observed and recorded the view around him.

"The children are a world in themselves," he wrote. "When you ride by a village, children chase the tanks, yelling 'chop chop'(food). You stop and give them crackers or candy and they smile a universal smile."

But when the world of soothing jungle green and quiet shade turned again to the business of killing, "you wave goodbye and move back into the war," Likely wrote. "Sometimes it's hard to remember there is a war going on, but you see war's battered faces everywhere; burned out villages, blown up bridges, bodies lifeless as coal.

"Still you push on, and when it's all over, you're glad you were there.

"Vietnam is something different to everyone," he wrote. "But this is how it is to me, one lonely soldier, fighting for peace."

Like Donald W. Curry, Warren K. Daley, Philip Washburn Davis, John L. Reilly and scores of others 50 years before, Richard Likely died for what he thought was right. Lest we forget.

Wake up liberals, media

To the editor;

Recently, (3 months only): Britain expelled 5 Russian envoys, France expelled 47 Russian envoys, U.S.A. expelled 4 Russian envoys, Iran expelled 18 Russian envoys, Italy expelled 6 Russian envoys, Sweden expelled 2 Russian envoys, Norway expelled 2 Russian envoys, Spain expelled 3 Russian envoys, Canada expelled 2 Russian envoys, Netherlands expelled 2 Russian envoys, Switzerland expelled 3 Russian envoys, Norway and Switzerland discovered and evidenced Russian subs in restricted military harbors and fiords, Brazil expelled a large aircraft loaded with a huge cache of Russian arms (labeled medical supplies) on a fuel stop destined for El Salvador.

These so-called "envoys, diplomats, trade delegates" were all caught spying! Stealing secrets, bribing sensitive personnel, fomenting revolution/unrest and absconding national techniques, technial data, and knowledge.

Additionally, throughout the world, nearly three dozen nations contain Russian troops of varying quantities. Most, not via poplace invitation (Afghanistan, Poland, Lithuania, Cuba and Ethiopia) to name only a few.

Wake up liberals, liberal news media, politicians and pseudo-intellectuals. Think for a change (it won't hurt) what the above facts denote! It is not peace.

Please note, the above are only recent and only the ones caught!

'Library family' writes thank you to city officials

To the editor;

Our "Library family" would like to publicly thank the Fire Department, the Police Department and the Building Department for their prompt, capable and completely professional performance during the recent fire at the Newtonville Branch Library.

Assistant Fire Chief Edward Murphy was on top of the situation at all times as were Police Sgt. Robert McDonald, Building Commissioner James Cameron and Charles Quirk and Richard Corbett of the Building Department.

Without their expertise and exemplary performance the harrowing night could have become an even worse disaster.

Goldberg-Zoino and Associates Inc., a geotechnical and geohydrogical consulting engineering firm, in Newton Upper Falls, announced the promotion of Nicholas A. Campagna Jr. of Norwood to the position of associate.

Since joining the firm in 1976, Campagna has handled a wide variety of geotechnical engineering projects including deep and shallow foundations for low- and high-rise buildings, wastewater treatment plants, pumping stations, schools, hospitals, parking garages, and bridges; safety inspections of over 75 dams in New England; design and construction of earth dams and dikes; liquefaction studies of six Corps of Engineers earth dams; geotechnical design and construction aspects of underground utilities under-drainage design; and flexible pavement design.

Goldbert-Zoino and Associates Inc. has also promoted three geotechnical engineers and a groundwater hydrologist to the position of associate: Nichoals A. Campagna, P.E.; Richard F. Flanagan, P.E.; Mathew A. DiPilato, P.E. and Dr. Lawrence Feldman.

Flanagan, chief engineer for the Buffalo, N.Y. office, joined the firm in 1976. Advancing through staff engineer to his present position, he has had responsibility for the geotechnical requirements of civil works such as tunnels, earth dams, highways, bridges, buildings and utilities.

DiPilato has handled a wide variety of geotechnical engineering projects since joining the firm in 1977, including deep and shallow foundations, slope stability and projection problems; seepage, dewatering and groundwater control projects; earth dams; cut-and-cover tunnels; excavation support systems; rock and soil achors; on-site sewage disposal systems; wastewater treatment plants and sewer projects; hydropower; and major earthwork projects.

Dr. Feldman has been a senior hydrogeologist with GZA since 1979. In his four years with the firm, he has managed projects involving almost every facet of groundwater hydrology, from town-wide water resource studies to major groundwater contamination problems.

Much of Feldman's recent work has been directed toward the evaluation and resolution of groundwater contamination issues at industrial facilities.

Prior to joining GZA, he had served in the Mass. Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. His duties there included both the technical review of projects under the Mass. Environmental Policy Act, and the formulation of state and federal water policy.

Newton resident Norma Trust Sherman was a guest recently on "Daytime" WSBK-TV (Channel 38).

Sherman, owner and director of The Galleries, Ltd. in Wellesley, discussed and displayed artworks from her exhibition "Art About Boston -Old and New."

Jerry Sack, a Newton resident, was recently selected as the fourth member of WCVB-TV's "Good Sport Hall of Fame," and was profiled on the sports segment of "NewsCenter 5 at Six."

He was also the focus of promotional announcements on Channel 5 throughout the following week, courtesy of Purity Supreme.

Sack started a baseball league four years ago with the objective of reaching 13 and 14-year-old athletes who, for any number of reasons, might not play on their school junior varsity or varsity baseball teams.

Another important aim of this Newton-based league was to create and enhance ties between young teens and adults. Along with his commitment to the baseball league, Sack has volunteered many hours to the Newton Community Basketball Program.

The National Water Safety Congress has presented its National Award to A. Newell Garden of West Newton "in recognition for outstanding efforts and accomplishments in prevention of water-related accidents and drownings throughout the nation."

Garden, who is director of public relations for Raytheon Company, has been active in boating safety for many years. He is a founder and director of the New England Safe Boating Council, vice chairman of the National Safe Boating Council, and chairman of the National Boating Safety Advisory Council, whose 21 members are appointed by the Secretary of Transportation to advise the secretary and the commandant of the Coast Guard in boating safety matters.

Coldwell Banker leased 5,600 square feet of office space recently at One Gateway Center, Newton, to Universal Network Communications Company.

Thirty Massachusetts residents who were awarded Choke-Saver medals by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts recently, also received a commendation from President Ronald Reagan for their prompt action in saving the lives of choking victims.

The recipients, including Newtonite Robert Matheson, were honored for successfully performing the Heimlich Maneuver on victims of choking accidents. Conferring the medals on honorees was Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, creator of the life-saving rescue technique. The awards ceremony was held at Lantana in Randolph.

President Reagan's congratulatory telegram cited the winners for learning the Heimlich Maneuver. "Your action will definitely encourage other individuals to learn and perform this life-saving technique," the President said.

Susan Kushner of Newton has been recognized by Boston Edison Company as an "outstanding reporter" for her contributions to the company's employee magazine, "Edison Life."

Kushner, who works in the Company's Revenue Accounting Department, was one of 13 employees honored for their efforts in the company's internal communications program. The reporters submit news items of interest concerning their division and fellow employees as well as ideas for other employee communications.

Kushner and the other recipients were honored recently at the company's annual reporter awards luncheon.

James M. Carroll, a 1979 graduate of Newton South High School, recently organized and implemented a nationally televised speech on nuclear armaments by Senator Edward M. Kennedy.

The presentation was before 900 people at American University in Washington, D.C. Sen. Kennedy accepted the invitation to speak at the symposium on armaments and disarmament in commemoration of President John F. Kennedy's address on disarmament delivered at A.U. on June 10, 1963.

Carroll is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Carroll of Boylston St., Newton, and was chosen to serve as director of the Kennedy Political Union at American University. He is an honors students in political science and will graduate in May.

Steven A. Forest of Newton Explorer Post 300 recently received his stripe and diploma from Newton Police Lt. John I. Likely and Sgt. Mark Speigal, the post advisor.

Forest was among 13 young men and women who recently graduated from a two-month Law Enforcement Academy course for Explorer Scouts given by the Security Police at Hanscom Air Force Base. The Hanscom law agency sponsors its own Explorer Post on base. Scouts from Newton, Melrose and Stoneham attended the program.

Elizabeth K. Speliotes, also of Explorer Post 300, was recognized for being tops in her class.

A scholastic achievement certificate was presented to her by Maj. Glenn S. Crawley, Chief of Security Police at Hanscom Air Force Base.

Robert L. Riemer of Newton was recently elected President of the Jewish Big Brother/Big Sister Association at the 64th annual joint meeting. In his acceptance remarks he called upon men of all ages to join the Association by becoming Big Brothers to boys from single parent homes.

Riemer noted that the demand for the Agency's services has increased in recent years and that 40 boys anxiously await the companionship of a Big Brother.

Riemer has been an active Big Brother for over 15 years and has most recently served as an agency vice president and coordinator of its Annual Fall Breakfast.

Riemer, president of Pickwick Associates, recently headed the Newton Campaign for the Combined Jewish Philanthropies. He has been a coach for Newton Youth Soccer and was appointed by Mayor Mann as a fence reviewer for the city.

Besides being a member of Temple Emanuel, the Corporate Board of Jewish Family and Children's Services, he was recently elected to the Board of Directors of the Jewish Community Center in Newton. He is married and the father of two children.

Mayor continues new library push

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The drive for a new, central library continues at a seemingly inexorable pace with Mayor Theodore Mann's suggestion that city voters might get a chance to make their wishes known on next November's ballot.

Mann said Tuesday that the Library Trustees were considering a referendum question which would ask for voters' approval of a Proposition 2½ override to would allow the city to float a $10-$12 million bond issue to pay for the library.

While some aldermen and School Committee members have marvelled that the mayor could cut the School Department budget by $750,000 and still talk about building a $12 million library, the administration has never swerved from its course.

Mann called the present central library, at Newton Corner, "inadequate," and said that "large sums of money" would be needed to bring it up to date. He added that he would rather see that money put into a new, central facility at the corner of Homer and Walnut Streets. "I would rather see motion forward," he commented.

The mayor estimated the new library might add as much as 40¢ to the property tax rate for the next 15 years, until the bonds are paid off. He added that the city's standing in the bond market, even if predictions that it might lose its AAA bond rating after the end of this fiscal year come true, would make the bonds easily marketable. If the rating dropped to AA, Mann said the difference to the city "would be insignificant."

The mayor indicated that the Library Trustees have yet to decide on selling off some of the city's branch libraries to help finance the new, central facility. He did say that certain branches close to the Homer and Walnut Street site would not be needed.

Mann added that, if some branch libraries could be sold, they could prove to be "important sources of income for the city."

The mayor emphasized that the plans for a new library are still in the infantile stage. If the financing question ever gets on the ballot, he said he wants to be sure "the public is fully aware of the entire package."

Library Trustee Michael Lipoff met with Election Commissioner Alan Licarie Tuesday afternoon to discuss the machinery involved in presenting voters with a referendum question like the one the mayor proposed. Lipoff echoed Mann's caution that the financing plan was still just one of many options being considered at this time.

Licarie said the question of overriding Proposition 2½ to finance the library would need the approval of the mayor two-thirds of the Board of Aldermen to make it to the ballot.

Asbestos questions surface

By Andrew Caffrey
Staff Writer

NEWTON — School Committe members and department officials have become concerned over a city asbestos consultant's seeming different assessment of one area containing asbestos in Newton North High School.

At issue is a section of the fourth floor ceiling that previously had been identified by consultant Dr. Charles Spooner as not needing removal because the asbestos there was in low concentrations, and the area was not subject to damage from vandalism.

In the past, the city has followed Spooner's recommendations to remove the asbestos materials in the lower levels of the building, but now school officials want to know why Spooner hasn't recommended the same for the fourth floor.

"I don't understand what the distinction is on the fourth floor," Support Services Director Roy Cornelius said at Monday night's School Committee meeting. "Now he (Spooner) says there's something there," whereas before school officials had been left with the impression there was little or no asbestos there, he added.

School Committee member Ann Berwick also questioned Spooner's different policy toward the fourth floor, saying she thought the whole situation was "pretty muddy."

"I want to know Spooner's policy. Why does he view the fourth floor differently? What's changed his thinking?," she said.

Ward 2 member Katherine Jones pushed to have her committee vote to have the asbestos there removed.

"I would feel much more comfortable if the School Committee's policy is to remove the asbestos," she said.

The committee instead voted 5-2, with Jones and Susan Silbey against, to have Spooner come in and explain his policy at its June 13 meeting.

Silbey disagreed, and moved to have the asbestos there removed. But the committee did not take up a vote on the motion.

Building Commissioner James Cameron then told the committee that if the city were to remove the asbestos on the fourth floor, any work on the area would not be completed until July, 1984 because of the amount of asbestos abatement already scheduled for this summer. The city still has to contain or remove asbestos in the lower levels and stairwells of North High, which is scheduled to be completed by the end of this July.

Mayor Theodore Mann said "we all have a concern with the current asbestos. We don't want to take chances. Sooner or later we're probably going to have to do something."

But he reminded the committee members of the costs of such a project, and said the money for it is not in the city coffers.

"We will have to plan to get that money in the Fiscal Year 1985 budget. We would then start the year with a minus" in the city's budget, he said.

In a 1979 report to the city, Spooner said the area "appears to be clear of asbestos except for isolated cases where amounts up to 35 percent or so are present."

Spooner had said the asbestos there "is likely the result of equipment contamination or there may have been contaimination during the manufacture of the spray material (fire-proof insulation)," which would indicate it is in very low levels, and sporadicaly distributed.

However, Cornelius said he took this to mean there was little or no asbestos present in the ceilings, and it did not present a danger to staff or students. The area is also covered by a drop ceiling, he said.

Then, as now, Spooner advised the area be monitored to ensure none of the fireproofing suffers damage.

But, in a recent letter to Cameron, Spooner said the area should be monitored and "that any further action be deferred until such time as definite deterioration of the material can be demonstrated."

Spooner also noted there was "some areas where the deterioration of the fireproofing has occured," which was probably due to work on the building's roof.

Cornelius said this seemed to indicate Spooner had a "change in perception" of the seriousness of the situation there.

He was concerned that Spooner now thinks there is a possibility that some of the asbestos in the ceiling could become loose, and students and staff would be exposed to it.

North High Principal Marya Levenson said the fourth floor area contains classrooms and other rooms used for "direct instruction."

Library's Outreach Program seeks to help housebound

NEWTON — Over the years the Newton Free Library's Outreach Program for temporarily or permanently housebound Newton residents has become an important part of the Newton Free Library's service to the community.

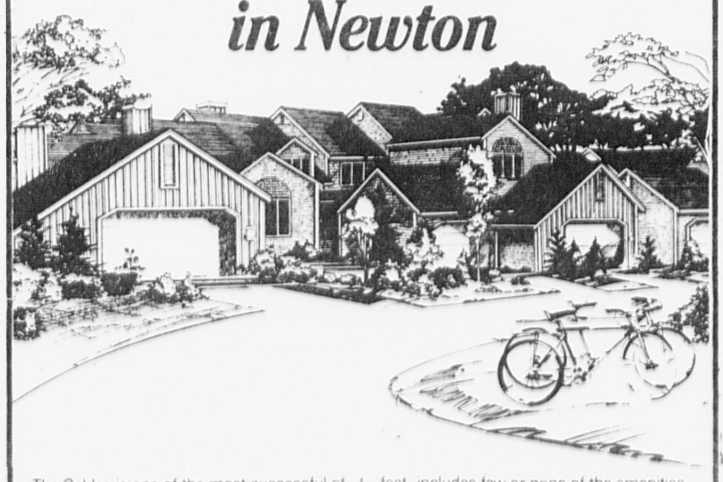
Housebound Newton residents may request fiction or non-fiction; large print books, paperbacks, or hard cover editions. Nonbook materials such as records, cassettes, magazines and 8mm silent films can also be borrowed.

People using the Outreach Services find the helpful friendly staff at the Library and the program "inspiring," "important," "necessary" and "one of the best things that has happened to us."

To register for this popular service which brings books and materials to Newton residents who, because of age, illness or physical handicap, are unable to visit the library, call 552-7145 and ask for Anna Hartogh, the Social Services Librarian. She can discuss reading interests, offer suggestions and arrange dates and times for book delivery.

A Better Choice Than Ever...

The Gables in Newton



The Gables is one of the most successful of the long string of exceptional communities built by The Green Company. Phase III, announced just last fall, is selling so rapidly that we are underway with the additional two and three bedroom homes in the fourth and final phase. So, right now you have a better choice than ever at Newton's choicest location—The Gables, directly adjoining the Charles River Country Club.

The five distinctive styles range from a three bedroom, 3100 square foot home at $400,000 to a 1900 square foot two-bedroom at just $265,000. Exceptional values when you consider that today's average, yet very expensive, three bedroom home offers less than 1200 square feet, includes few or none of the amenities and certainly not the location of The Gables.

Homes feature unusual touches like soaring cathedral and Bermuda ceilings, a wonderful flow between rooms, unexpected fireplaces in kitchens and master bedrooms, attached two-car garages with direct indoor access, large very private deck and/or courtyard areas, and full basements. There's a private clubhouse overlooking a sunning area, swimming pool, whirlpool, and two tennis courts.

Models are open every day from 9 to 5 at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets, Newton. Telephone (617) 969-0200 for an appointment.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher L. Walsh

ChunCha Thoma Kyung weds Christopher Walsh

WABAN — ChunCha Thoma Kyung of Northampton became the bride of Christopher L. Walsh of Northampton on April 23 in a double ring ceremony at Union Church of Waban.

Officiating was the groom's father, the Rev. Dr. Dwight R. Walsh.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Oksun Kim of Chicago, Ill., and Mr. Tesup Kyung of Seoul, South Korea. The groom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Walsh of Waban.

The altar was decorated with forsythia, ivy, rose buds and candles for the wedding. The bride wore a gown of white lace over satin and carried a single white rose. She wore a coronet of white roses in her hair.

Miss Alison Walsh of Allston, the groom's sister, was maid of honor.

Best man was William MacKay of West Medford. Peter L. Walsh and Philip H. Walsh, brothers of the groom, served as ushers.

A reception was held at the home of the groom's parents.

The bride attended schools in Seoul, South Korea.

Her husband, a graduate of Murray Road Annex of Newton North High School, received his bachelor's degree from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He is pursuing his graduate degree at Westfield State College and is employed as a mental health coordinator for Northampton State Hospital.

The couple is living in Northampton.

Area families sought to host students from France, Spain

Area families are being sought to host teenagers from France and Spain this summer.

David Phelan, central New England coordinator for Nacel Cultural Exchanges, a non-profit French-American enterprise, noted that the exchange prompts many teens in the host families to go to Europe the following summer, as well as being a stimulating experience for the entire family.

Visiting teenagers will stay for four weeks from July 14 to Aug. 11.

All students have had from four to seven years of English and range in age from 14 to 18 years. Single parent families and families with teenagers are encouraged to apply.

Those American teenagers who would like to spend a month living with a family in Europe this summer can participate in the program for $770 in France and $799 in Spain, air fare included. Dates for France are June 30-July 28 and July 28-Aug. 26. The dates for Spain are being set.

Visitors are placed in families according to age and interest.

Interested famlies should contact David and Anita Phelan by writing Box 422, Marlboro, MA 01752 or calling 617-481-6516.

Karen Mead is Likely scholar

NEWTON — Karen Mead of Auburndale recently received a scholarship award from the Richard A. Likely Memorial Fund, established in memory of the Newton man killed in action in Vietnam in 1971.

Mead is majoring in interior design at Fisher Junior College and has just completed her first year. She is working in the profession this summer.

Richard A. Likely was the son of Police Lt. and Mrs. John Likely of Auburndale and graduated from Newton North in 1968. He attended Newton Junior College for one year and enlisted in the US Army. He was killed in Vietnam by a booby trap April 27, 1971.

The relatives and friends of Richard established a memorial foundation in his name and have contributed toward its funding. The money is on deposit at the Mutual Bank for Savings and the annual scholarship award is derived from interest on the account.

Anyone under 21 who needs assistance in furthering his or her education in any area is eligible to apply. Contributions are being accepted to the fund: Richard A. Likely Foundation, Gill Sampson, president, 44 Newell Road, Auburndale, 02166. Contributions may be mailed directly to the Bank For Savings, 40 Austin Street, Newtonville.

Applications are now being accepted and may be submitted to Mrs. Sampson until June 25.

Drama on Dr. King is June 9-10

NEWTONVILLE — "I Have a Dream," a music drama dedicated to the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., will be presented at the Newton Arts Center on Thursday and Friday, June 9 and 10, at 8 p.m.

Written by Patricia Schneider and Florence Turner shortly after the assassination of Dr. King, this, "the original black oratorio," contains choral and solo musical numbers, dramatic speeches, narration and choreography. The cast, orchestra, and stage crew of this performance are comprised of students from Newton South High School and Charles E. Brown Junior High.

A sharing of efforts, talents and hopes has gone into this student production of "I Have a Dream." under the direction of Florence Turner and Bessie Lyman, it was performed last February at Newton South High School, through the cooperation of faculty, administration and parent volunteers from the Newton Public Schools, the Newton Metco Program and Myrtle Baptist Church.

The two June performances are sponsored in part by Newton Arts Center's 1983 "200 Club." Tickets are now available at the Arts Center, 61 Washington Park, Newtonville, or by calling the center at 964-3424 ($4 general admission; $2.50 for students and senior citizens).

All ticket proceeds will benefit a college scholarship fund for those qualified Newton High School seniors who best exemplify the ideals held by Dr. King.

Heroes are remembered

Brimblecom wrote of Putnam's tragic demise, "It was a splendid death in the midst of combat, certainly the ending he would have chosen for himself, but the loss was a bitter one to every member of the Lafayette Flying Corps."

At the 1920 Harvard commencement, Putnam was awarded a posthumous Bachelor of Science degree in recognition of his exceptional military service.

Albert Edgar Angier, born in Waban, went to Newton High School and also dropped out of Harvard to enter the service. He won a posthumous Distinguished Service Cross for exceptional bravery under fire.

While he was in Army Officers Training School, Angier was offered a choice between staying stateside and receiving a commission in the near future and going overseas as a private not knowing when, if ever, he would be commissioned.

Angier volunteered for overseas service at once.

He received his commission several months later, and he was soon promoted to First Lieutenant after risking his life to rescue men who were wounded in the midst of a violent artillery attack.

On Sept. 14, 1918, Angier's commanding officer was wounded and the young man from Newton took over during an extremely dangerous charge on a well defended German position at Revillon. A machine gunner was hit. Angier picked the gun up and continued to advance, encouraging his men all the while.

He was wounded several times before he fell. His sergeant, who had been following close behind him during the charge, stopped and took him in his arms.

"Lay me down and look after the other men," Angier said just before he died.

A "war degree" of Bachelor of Arts was conferred on Angier during the same 1920 Harvard commencement at which Putnam received his posthumous degree.

Chapin, Putnam, Angier and the dozens of young men from Newton who gave their all for their country on the battlefield and in army hospitals are the heroes for which Memorial Day was created.

Memorial Day was for the young men from Newton, of whom it may be said, "They gave the last full measure of devotion."

(Our appreciation to J.C. Brimblecom, former editor of The Newton Graphic, for his chronicle of Newton's role in the war effort, Newton War Memorial.)

North seniors gather for final fling together

NEWTONVILLE — Rock and roll blaired through the balloon-filled cafeteria, where several hundred North High School seniors jammed togather last Friday — presumably for the last time — during a final bash for the graduating class of 1983.

For two hours, music by the band Trilogy, whose members are North students, could be heard in the school's Main Street and entertained the jubilant crowd. Colorful, ribbon-tied balloons bounced in the air as younger students served trays of pizza and icecream to the graduating seniors, who scribbled away in black-covered yearbooks.

"It's fun," said senior Lenny Kolodny of Friday's bash. "It's a good way to end the school year because because not everyone can afford to go to the prom."

Friday was a chance for students to talk about the upcoming graduation, parties, the prom and vacation plans. Most said they were excited about finishing high school but would probably miss old friends.

"The kids" are what Lenny Kolodny, an aspiring doctor, liked best about North. "It's a friendly school."

Asked to describe her three years at North, Jane Parsons of West Newton said, "What an experience! I learned a lot - not only from teachers, but also from my friends."

Parsons, 17, who will head to Framingham State College this fall, said the best advice she received at North came from counselor Larry Allen. "He said I should believe in myself and that I can do anything I want as long as I do."

The school bash "gives me chance to say goodbye to all my friends," said Lauren Burrell of Boston, an aspiring dancer. "A lot of them I'll probably never see again."

David Green, 17, who hopes to be "a corporate lawyer with a big office and a big desk," said the kids are what he enjoyed most at North. A student council member, Green urged younger students to "study hard."

Student Lenny Kolodny also had some advice to underclassmen who may envy the jubilant seniors: "Make the most of your high school years because they go by so fast."

Complete with party headgear, Newton North seniors enjoyed a final fling at school Friday before graduation day.

Newton Police reports

2 hurt in scuffle with thief

CHESTNUT HILL - Two General Cinema employees were hurt during a struggle last week with an apparent car thief, police said.

The suspect was arrested by police in the parking lot behind the cinema at the Chestnut Hill Mall and charged with attempted larceny of a motor vehicle and assault and battery with intent to rob, records state.

The suspect, a 16-year-old Roxbury girl, faces charges in District court.

According to police, a female cinema employee was drinking coffee in her car behind the cinema when she observed three young black youths wandering in the lot. The female suspect approached the employee's car and made threatening remarks to the woman, police said.

Police said the employee threw her coffee in the suspect's face and the suspect in turn punched the woman in the mouth. The woman then started screaming and ran back into the cinema. She alerted a male employee and called police.

Police said the male employee observed the girl inside the car and attempting to start the engine. The two other suspects apparently had already fled from the scene. The man struggled with the girl, who bit him, a police report states. Police arrived at the scene moments later and arrested the girl.

Silverware stolen in break

NEWTON — Sterling silverware and assorted women's jewelry were reported stolen following a break sometime Wednesday night into a Wesses Road home, police said.

Intruders gained entrance into the house by forcing open a first floor window, according to police.

Attempted auto thefts

NEWTON - Several attempted auto thefts were reported last week, police said.

Attempted thefts of cars occurred at the Holiday Inn parking lot on Grove Street, the Star Market parking lot on Boylston Street, the Woodland MBTA station off Washington Street, on Hammond Pond Parkway and Commonwealth Avenue in Chestnut Hill, police said.

Police said the cars' windows were broken and the ingnition damaged in attempts to steal the cars.

Woman hurt in chase

NEWTON CENTRE — A woman was hurt when she fell in an attempt to catch a man who snatched her pocketbook Wednesday in front of the Heartland grocery store, police said.

According to police, the woman was about to enter the Beacon Street store about 8 p.m. when a young white male ripped the purse straps from her shoulder. The woman chased the suspect and fell on the cement. She declined medical treament, police said.

The purse-snatcher left the scene in a brown car and drove east on Beacon Street, police said.

Police described the suspect as about five-feet-nine-inches, 155 pounds and having blond hair. He was wearing light-colored chino trousers and a short-sleeve orange shirt.

Car stereo reported stolen

NEWTONVILLE — A stereo was reported stolen from a car parked on Prescot Street Saturday night and early Sunday morning, police said.

Police said the stereo, valued at $200, was taken from an AMC Hornet.

Camping gear is stolen

AUBURNDALE - Camping equipment was stolen last Monday from a Subaru truck parked in the Holiday Inn parking lot on Grove Street, police said.

Two sleeping bags, two pairs of hiking shoes, a tent, tools and bags were reported stolen when thieves broke into the truck overnight in an unknown manner, police said.

Burglars take color TV

LOWER FALLS — A color television set was reported stolen in a break Wednesday into a Cornell Street house, police said.

The burglars entered the house sometime during the morning, police reported. Two suspicious men inside a gray sedan were seen driving from in front of the house a witness told police.

Radios taken from autos

NEWTON — Radios were reported stolen Thursday from two cars, police said.

A radio valued at more than $500 was reported stolen Thursday morning from a Volkswagon parked on George Street, police said.

A Blaupunkt radio valued at $750 was stolen from a car on Sunset Road, police said.

3 cars reported stolen

NEWTON - Three cars were reported stolen late last Monday, police said.

A 1976 Oldsmobile was stolen from the Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge parking garage. A 1982 Buick owned by a Florida resident was stolen from Commonwealth Avenue in Chestnut Hill, where thieves attempted to steal another car. A Ford Mustang was taken from the Woodland MBTA station.

Harding St. home entered

WEST NEWTON — A Harding Street home was burglarized sometime last weekend, police said Monday.

Burglars gained entrance into the house by forcing a door. Intruders ransacked the home and stole cash, assorted jewelry, sterling silverware and Hummels, police said.

South cast

Members of the cast at Newton South High rehearse "I have a dream," planned for the Newton Arts Center in Newtonville on Thursday and Friday, June 9 and 10 at 8 p.m. The two performances of the musical drama are dedicated to the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and are sponsored in part by the NAC's 200 Club. Tickets, $4 general admission; $2.50 for students and seniors, are available by calling 964-3424.

School collaboration

Patricia Kempton, faculty advisor, and Florence Turner, director and co-author of "I have a dream" are shown with the student cast from South High and Brown Junior High. The performances, on June 9 and 10, begin at 8- p.m. at the Newton Arts Center.

Rowland speaks to the VNA

WELLESLEY — Keeping the elderly at home and out of nursing homes is beneficial to the elderly person as well as the taxpayer said Secretary of Elder Affairs Richard H. Rowland, Ph.D., earlier this month at the 85th annual meeting of the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Visiting Nurse Association.

"It is beneficial for taxpayers as well as more humane. Seventy-five percent of the patients in nursing homes in this Commonwealth are publicly-aided," Rowland, of Newton, said.

Rowland said some families are caring for their elderly family members at home for about 40 percent of the cost it takes to care for them in nursing homes. These people are saving the state money which they should be recognized for in terms of aid.

"We have to look at the eligibility issue and not just follow the Medicaid dollar," Rowland said. "There's a big gap in services for the middle-class people who have to spend-down resources until they are eligible."

Rowland called today's middle-class "the sandwich generation" because they are caught in the middle with new pressures of a society where older people are living longer than ever, while the birth rate declines, and tuition costs rapidly rise.

"Sometimes out of frustration, people go to nursing homes," Rowland said. Families with elderly members may feel they cannot afford the time and money to keep them at home. But with programs such as Respite Care, which offers alternatives to institutional care for the elderly, more people will happily stay in their homes.

In addition to welcoming Rowland to the annual meeting, the VNA introduced the new executive director, Anne Cain, for the Newton-Wellesley-Weston area.

A special award was presented to Mrs. Worthing L. West who is retiring from the board, but will remain on as an honorary member. Five year pins were awarded to Audrey Batting, RN, BA, and David Marinelli, BS, RPT.

1st interviews completed for top school jobs

NEWTON — Initial rounds of interviews were completed last week as the School Department moves to fill three central staff positions under Superintendent John Strand's reorganization plan.

The positions are Director of Secondary Education, Director of Elementary Education and Assistant Superintendent of Program. The latter is not a new position, but is being vacated by Norman Colb, who is leaving for a school superintendent's job in New York state.

Strand said he received over 300 applications for the jobs, but invited only 38 for the three-part interview process. Four of the applicants are from within the Newton school system.

Strand will consult next with a selection committee, made up of school personel and members of the Parent-Teacher Association(PTA), who also interviewed the candidates. Besides discussing the applicants, they will be reviewing written tests Strand gave the candidates.

Three people for each position will be invited back, and they will be publicly interviewed by the School Committee June 8, 14 and 15.

Strand then will make one final recommendation for each job, and the School Committee will vote on the recommendations June 27.

The applicants are very competitive, Strand said, and the final choice might not go to the ones with the best qualifications, but to those who best fit the needs of the positions.

"The top candidates have different strengths. We have to pause and ask 'exactly what we are looking for in this job.' What we see in a candidate sometimes expands the idea of the job," he said.

One of those interviewed has come from as far as Madrid, Spain, Strand said, where he is headmaster of a private school. While the majority of the applicants are from New England, he has also received queries from California, Wisconsin and Missouri.

He has interviewed 14 people for the Assistant Superintendent's job, 13 for the Secondary Education and 11 for the Elementary Education Directors' job.

The salary range for the jobs is from $40,000 to $45,000, commensurete with experience, he added.

Strand has pared down his central staff administration from nine to seven positions to more efficently run the School Department, he has said. The two new Education Directors will answer directly to Strand, and they will be responsible for the administration of education at their respective levels.

Backman knocks cuts in human service funds

BOSTON — The Senate Chairman of the legislature's Joint Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs has called on his colleagues to avoid further cuts in human services since "Governor Dukakis' budget propsoals for F.Y. '84 are already inadequate to meet these pressing problems."

A 50-page packet delivered to each senator by Sen. Backman detailed a "host of weaknesses" in current programs including failure to aid 6,000 children in the state's foster care system, 10,000 "unserved" retarded citizens, 8,000 individuals who recently lost federal disability benefits and 34,000 low-income families whose medical benefits and cash grants have been cut.

All told, Sen. Backman concluded that programs in the Human Services and Elder Affairs secretariats were underfunded by at least $200 million in the Dukakis Administration's budget proposal. This is in addition to an unexpected revenue shortfall of more than $100 million now recognized by the Governor and Ways and Means Committees.

Among the specific funding shortfalls in House 1 cited were:

• "Bookkeeping tricks" such as paying only 50 weeks of bills next year along with unspeified cost controls in the Medicaid program totalling $75 million.

• Setting aside no money to cover the legislative homelessness package which has already passed the Senate.

• Failure to fund Office For Children licensors required to maintain the quality of the state's child care facilities.

• No approach for a personal needs allowance income for elderly and disabled residents of nursing homes.

• Balancing the homecare budget by paying workers less than the minimum legal wage specified by the state's Rate Setting Commission.

• Inadequate requests for legal assistance and vocational training for individuals whose Social Security Disability benefits have recently been cut.

• Reductions in aid provided to retarded young people once they turn 22 and lost eligibility for Chapter 766 special education services.

Highlands gear up for Village Day

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — The 8th Annual Newton Highlands Village Day, "The Highlands Fling," which includes crafts, two moon walks, games and entertainment, a 3-mile mini-marathon, and specials in local stores, will be held on Saturday, June 11 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. (Rain Date June 18).

The day-long event will also feature a hayride, merry-go-round, silent auction, tea garden, bicycle parade and much more. On Friday evening, June 10, the fun starts with a square dance in the Hyde School gym and the weekend of activity closes with a house tour of several Highlands area homes on June 12.

Newton Highlands, located at the interesection of Walnut and Lincoln Streets in Newton, is easily reached by MBTA or by car from Route 9 or 128. On Village Day, Lincoln will be closed from Walnut to Bowdoin Street between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Village Day, which is sponsored by the Newton Highlands Neighborhood Area Council, has no admission fee. General information about the day is available from Kay Barret, chairperson of the event, at 964-0369. People interested in renting a craft or food booth should contact Dick Young at 527-0560.

Commissioners push to keep courthouse control

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Middlesex County Commissioners have taken a strong stand against the popular movement to hand over many of the responsibilities of county government to the state, especially the control of county courthouses.

In a letter to Mayor Theodore Mann, chairman of the Middlesex County Advisory Board, County Commissioner Thomas Larkin said recent reforms in county government have made it into an well-administered, efficient machine. To transfer county courthouses to the relatively inefficient state administration would be a mistake, he said.

Mayor Mann has complained in the past that Newton shoulders an unfair burden in its annual payments to Middlesex County. The assessment is unfair, according to Mann, when compared to what other cities and towns pay or to what the city receives in return for what it pays.

Larkin said he and his fellow commissioners, including Newton resident Bill Schmidt, think any suggestion of the state's taking over the courthouses "is absurd, in the face of the current state revenue and expenditure crisis. We believe recent county reforms are permanent, and, as a consequence, county government is easily more cost efficient, less complicated, more accountable and more accessible than state government."

Larkin predicted a state takeover of the county courthouses "will cause an increase in the state budget of at least $30 million. We assume the estimate will increase as hidden costs shake down."

One of the hidden costs Larkin cited, besides insurance, debt service and health and retirement benefits, is "the proven propensity of state government to be more blated than local and county government."

As proof of the county's being more fiscally responsible than the state, Larkin pointed out, "The Middlesex county budget, unlike the state budget, went down in 1984. The county assessment has been reduced almost 20-percent since 1981."

As further proof, Larkin said, "The judiciary budget has skyrocketed since the state took control, as a function of 'court reform.' In 1978, the statewide cost of court operations approximated $80 million. Governor Dukakis is recommending over $200 million for the judiciary in fiscal year 1984."

Larkin further complained that the state has not been able to keep up with rent payments on the courthouses it has leased from the county. He said he contacted Governor Dukakis about the problem. "He is sympathetic, but realistically does not see how the FY 1984 state operating budget can be increased," Larkin said.

Pointing out that Dukakis has included more than $12.5 million for all court rental agreements during the coming year, Larkin commented, "The state owes Middlesex alone more than that."

The county commissioners, according to Larkin, now are lobbying the legislature to address the problem of overdue courthouse rents in the FY 1984 Capital Outlay budget. "If all these efforts fail, we will consider legal action to secure our rent," Larkin concluded.

DeNucci urges club to retain dedication

NEWTON — A strong commitment to excellence and an undying belief in success will get members of the Newton Boys club what they seek in life, Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci told them last Tuesday night.

The Newton democrat, who spoke to the club at its 29th annual awards dinner, said if the youths want success in sports, and in their life pursuits, they must have "tremendous dedication," and live a "good, clean life."

"Stay away from cigarettes, dope and alcohol. Dedicate yourself and you will reap the rewards. I know what I'm talking about, I've been there," the former world-ranked boxer said.

He told the 180 youths and their parents in attendence at Newton Catholic High School on Washington Street to make "the commitment to yourself to be the best, and it will be unlimited where you go."

The Chairman of the House Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, himself a former member of the club, and now on the Board of Directors, told the kids to "bring a little bit of the Boys Club with you wherever you go in life."

He also advised them to give back to the club what they received from it.

Women's League will meet June 7

NEWTON — A New England branch meeting of the Women's League for Conservative Judaism will be held June 7 at Temple Shalom in Milton.

Sisterhood programs will be previewed during the meeting. Registration will be held at 9:15 a.m. and the program ends at 2:15 p.m. Lunch will also be served.

Local sisterhoods participating are Temple Emanuel, COngregation Mishkan Tefila, Temple Emeth and Temple Reyim. All sisterhood members are welcome.

Call Harriet Walter at 1-784-8024 for reservations.

Berwick won't run for 4th school term

NEWTON — School Committee member Ann Berwick, citing personal reasons, has decided not to run for a fourth consecutive term.

The Ward 6 member said she felt "six years was enough" on the board, and now she will try to practice law.

She recently passed the bar exam in Massachusetts, and is presently looking for a job, she said. She has, in the past, been a lawyer in the state of Washington.

Among the many accomplishments she was proud of as member of the board, she listed the choice of Dr. John Strand as the new school superintendent as near the top.

The Newton Centre representative served as chairperson of the committee from 1979 to 1981.

Berwick is the only school board member who has not taken out nomination papers.

We know of one woman who wanted to convert her skinny galley kitchen into a kitchen large enough for two cooks. Since stretching the undersized space would require stretching her budget and making significant structural changes, the woman adopted a novel approach. She transformed the adjoining bedroom into the kitchen of her dreams. Since the galley kitchen and bedroom shared a common plumbing wall, plumbing was no problem. The only structural change necessary was a passageway from the new kitchen to the dining room. The old galley is now a pantry/laundry room and the new kitchen, of tile, butcher block and oak cabinets, is a dream come true.
Have you dreamt of a kitchen area that would allow for the preparation of dinner for the entire family while minimizing the "steps" you have to take. Whether you want to increase or decrease the size, enlarge or alter the shape or style of cabinets or have other "dreams" let all this become a reality with a call to CHARL MARC KITCHEN & BATH CENTER, 4174 Washington St., Roslindale. When you see our cabinets you will discover that we open the door onto a new kitchen. Tel. 325-9400. Showroom daily 9-5, Wed. & Fri. eves. 7-9.

ARE YOU LIVING WITH A THIEF?

Eleven million Americans are. Even worse, five million of them don't know it. Because they've got diabetes, which steals your energy and can even take years from your life. With its complications, diabetes is the third leading cause of death by disease in the country.

Sometimes there are warning signs such as excessive thirst, chronic fatigue, itchy skin and changes in weight. But more often there are no noticeable symptoms. So if you're over 40 and overweight, or if you have a relative with diabetes, consult your doctor. And make sure you watch DIABETES: UPDATE '83 on Cable Health Network. It's an eight-hour informathon with a toll-free number (1-800-232-4242) with doctors standing by to answer your questions. And information that could save your life.

DIABETES: UPDATE '83 is produced in cooperation with the American Diabetes Association.

Cape man pleads guilty to mail fraud charges in Newton

By Gary Dorion
Middlesex County News Service

BOSTON — An East Dennis man charged by the U.S. Attorney's office in a $100,000 mail fraud in Newton has pleaded guilty and is to be sentenced before U.S. District Judge David Nelson, June 30.

Roger V. Myette, who lived in Naples, Fla. during the period related to the charges admitted to using the mail system to defraud Ocean Spray Cranberries Inc., of Plymouth, from January of 1968 to Ocotber of 1980. Myette waived indictment by a federal grand jury last April and pleaded guilty during his recent arraignment.

According to the charges outlined in court records by U.S. Attorney Maurice R. Flynn III, Myette fraudulently acted as an insurance agent for Continental Assurance Co., Chicago, Ill. and National Life Insurance Co., Montpelier, Vt., to sell insurance products to Ocean Spray Inc.

Flynn said Thursday he will recommend Myette serve three months of a one year prison term, the balance to be suspended, and that the judge impose a three-year probation period. The penalty for mail fraud is a maximum of five years in a federal prison and a $1,000 fine. Flynn also said he will reccomend that Myette pay Ocean Spray Inc. full restitution of over $100,000.

Presently, Myette is unemployed, according to Flynn.

Court records indicate Ocean Spray Cranberries Inc. purchased the insurance for the benefit of some of its executives but that Myette failed to remit over $100,000 in insurance premium payments from the company to the appropriate insurance companies. Instead, Myette converted the payments to his personal use, the records charge.

As part of the scheme, Myette used the postal system and a Newton address to defraud the company and he caused an automatic payment premiums provision to be activated for various Ocean Spray policies, thereby concealing his theft of the premium payments for those policies.

Myette admitted to mailing one Ocean Spray check for $4,808 addressed to himself and forwarded to a Newton post office box.

4 new school programs due from Fed fund

NEWTON — The School Department received confirmation it will receive $75,000 in federal emergency jobs money.

After Community Development Director Diane Shorr confirmed the city will receive $486,000 from the federal governement, she announced at a public hearing the school department will get $75,000 for four programs affecting students with academic difficulty.

The programs, according to a memo from Norman Colb, assistant superintendent of program, will "be of considerable value to students of low and moderate income," one of the federal criteria for the money.

The programs will include:

- A primary intervention reading program at the elementary level for students with serious reading deficiences.
- An alternative junior high school program that will assists students who have a history of "academic difficulty and/or anti-social behavior," the memo says.
- Two mathematic basic skills projects, one each at the elementary and junior high school levels for students with poor math aptitudes.

The programs are expected to relieve some of the anticipated 13 layoffs the School Department might have to make to meet Mayor Theodore Mann's $776,138 cut from the Fiscal Year 1984 school budget.

'Urban' show of photos at library

NEWTON CORNER — "To me the city is a fantasy place that twinkles," says photographer Larry Maglott, whose one-man show of black and white photographs are on view in the Newton Free Library Gallery, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, June 2-June 30. There will be a reception Monday, June 6, 7:30-9 p.m.

"I've been making black and white photographs of Boston since I moved here in '76," esplains Maglott. Perhaps because I come from the midwest, a place of horizons, I see the city in terms of vertical compositions, compositions that fill the frame."

He photographs a clean city; rain on a pavement, the edges of buildings as they cut into the sky, patterns on the sidewalk of the city, parking lots, signs and telephone wires, "the visual noise" will not be found in his photographs.

Maglott's 'urban outlook' depicts the shapes of the city; its buildings, roads, wet streets, the railroad station, - from the uncommon views and angles and light that reflects and glows.

Maglott works in both fine arts and commercial photography.

Main library hours are Monday-Thursday, 9-9; Friday 9-6. Call 552-7145 for more information.

Norwood cops pole vault title

CHESTNUT HILL — The pole vault requires unique athlete with ability to blend a combination of many talents. Bill Norwood, Andy Kramer and John Harrison put it all together Saturday to sweep the top three spots in the pole vault at the EMass Class A boys track and field championships at Boston College.

Norwood and Harrison are from Newton North, while Kramer was the top performer for Waltham High. Norwood won the event by reaching the winning height of 12 feet on his first jump. Kramer jumped 12 feet also, but it took him two jumps. Norwood and Kramer tried at 12 feet six inches, but fell short. Harrison, a junior, earned third spot with a vault of 11 feet six inches.

A junior, Norwood missed part of the spring season with a shoulder injury. He didn't compete in the Suburban League meet to be ready for the state meet. His preparation paid off.

"Bill has been bothered by minor injuries all season long," said second-year Newton North track coach Mark Lech. "In the pole vault a an injury is magnified. We knew Bill had a good chance at winning and he put in the work."

An all-around athlete, Norwood was a starting defensive back on the football and a gymnast. "I think the pole vault requires the most versatile athletic ability," said Lech. "You have to be a good runner, strong and have the agility to master the technique."

Kramer, who struggled in the Suburban League meet with a fourth-place finish, vowed he'd improve in the Class A state meet and he did. The junior matched his personal best leap of 12 feet and just missed at 12 feet six inches.

"I feel great for Andy," said Waltham coach Greg Kasabian. "He was just off in the league meet and finished fourth. He said he'd get revenge and he did. He's just a fierce competitor.

"The pole vault requires great athletic skills and Andy has proven his ability," Kasabian said. "He can throw the shot 40 feet, has run in the high and low hurdles. He's really looking forward to another shot in Saturday's state meet."

Andy is an All-Suburban League center halfback in soccer and also played a role on the basketball team. As a sophomore, Kramer placed seventh in the state meet with a vault of 11 feet six inches.

North's Harrison took over in the pole vault when Norwood was injured and he improved dramatically. His previous best vault was 10 feet and he upped that to 11 feet six inches in his first Class A competition.

"It was a great effort by John," said Lech. "He started out under control. He hit 11 feet and 11 feet six inches with no problem on his first jump. He ran into trouble at 12 feet with two near misses. He's come a long way and I think he'll be heard from in the state meet."

Newton North finished seventh overall with 24 total points. Senior Paul Passavant was third in the 800 meters for the Tigers in a personal best time of 1:57.0. Passavant had never broken two minutes in his career. "We always knew Paul had the ability to break two minutes," said Lech. "He just had to feel what it was like to be running that fast. He ran a good race coming from sixth place on the last turn and holding off two runners for third place."

Senior John Drew finished sixth in the high hurdles in 15.6, which was just one second off his personal best time.

Lion nine sinks Weston to gain spot in tourney

NEWTON — In a game both teams had been pointing to as crucial for the past two weeks, Newton South tallied three unearned runs in the first inning en route to a 4-2 triumph over rival Weston Saturday in a Dual County League battle at the Upper Falls Playground.

The victory lifted Newton South's record to 11-4 in the league, while the loss dropped Weston to 9-6 on the season. The Lions must win their final two games of the season to clinch second place, but the triumph over Weston assured the Lions of a tourney berth. Weston cannot lose again this season for any shot at the tourney.

Mark Paglia, who hadn't pitched since May 19th, turned in a gutty seven-inning, five-hit, 10-strikeout performance to pilot the Lions. Paglia improved his record to 2-1 on the season. He was helped by two double play balls in the fifth and seventh innings.

Weston's left-hander John Cleary suffered his first loss of the season, after six-straight wins. Cleary, who has one of the top ERAs in the DCL, ran into some bad luck against the Lions.

In the top of the first inning Weston had the first two batters reach base with singles. Paglia got the next three hitters to end the threat and set the tone for the contest.

The Lions picked up three runs in the bottom of the first inning without the benefit of a hit through the infield. Joe Spagnuolo, who had his 10-game hitting streak halted with a zero for two contest, walked. Jerry Marcus laid down a bunt, which was fielded by Cleary, who threw wide of firstbase. Spagnuolo ended up on third, while Marcus held at first, but he quickly stole second.

The second Weston error of the inning led to the first Lion run. Wildcat catcher Marshall Tarbox tried to pick-off Spagnolo at third, but his throw went into left field allowing Spagnuolo to score.

Cleary bore down and got the next two hitters out, but he walked Evan Kushner.

Adam Rosman hit ground ball to third, which was misplayed to score Marcus with the third run. The Lions scored their fourth run of the contest in the second inning. Marcus, who has 10 hits in his last 16 plate appearances, ripped a single and stole second. Paglia drove Marcus in with a double to center field.

The Lions then held on to the lead. Weston scored single runs in the fourth and seventh innings. Mike Murray's short fly to right eluded the grasp of three Lions to drive in Weston's first run. In the seventh, the Wildcats put some pressure on Paglia.

Murray hit a grounder to third, but the throw was wide of the bag. Murray went to second on the play and he scored on Jackie Cort's single. Rick Hall then hit a grounder back-to-the-mound. Paglia fielded the ball got Cort at second and Marcus fired a throw to nab Hall at first. Paglia ended the threat and the game with a strikeout.

The summary:

NEWTON SOUTH(4)-Spagnuolo 2-0; Marcus 3-2; Paglia 3-1; Nicoletti 2-0; Kushner 2-0; Rosman 3-1; Stoller 3-2; Wenning 3-1; Bracken 2-0; Murray 1-0. Tot. 24-7.

WESTON(2)-Murray 4-2; Cort 4-2; R. Hall 2-0; Durkin 4-0; Tarbox 3-0; Potter 3-1; Cahill 3-0; J. Hall 2-0; Dubois 2-0. Tot. 27-5.

North, South City Series LLB finalists

NEWTON — Bruce Lyndsay doubled home the winning run in the eighth inning as the South Tigers shaded the Central Phillies, 3-2, Sunday at Lyons Field to advance into the championship round of the Newton Little League City Series.

Ty Rawls led off in the eighth with a two-bagger and was in scoring position when Lyndsay delivered his clutch clout. In the sixth inning, the Phils had the potential winning run on third base with one out. Righty Ethan Kline was brought in to relieve starter Gavin Dreyer. He walked one batter, then struck out the next two batters.

Robie Wilkinson had two hits for the Phils while Steve Leonard pitched the entire game for the losers.

The South Tigers will meet the North Indians Friday, 5:30 p.m., at Lyons Field.

The North Indians won a pair of games over the weekend. On Saturday, they ousted the West Orioles behind the two-hit pitching of Paul Leone, who fanned 12. Catcher George Maxcey drove in five runs on two homers. On Sunday, Angelo Tomiano handled the pitching chores in a 5-4 win over Newton East.

North still has positive attitude

NEWTON — The Newton North baseball team's debut as league spoilers was spoiled by Quincy, which edged the Lions, 5-4, Thursday at Ferguson Field.

Despite the setback, which comes right on the heels of Wednesday's tough 12-8 loss to Waltham (which eliminated Newton from any postseason action), Tiger coach Dick Walker had nothing but praise for his troops.

"We made our run at second place," Walker said, adding, "but last night was just a heartbreaker."

But instead of getting down, Walker said, the veteran starters on the team thought it would be a good idea to get some playing time for other members of the team.

"The idea was a team effort," Walker said. "It's indicative of the positive attitude that has been such a factor on this team."

One positive factor Thursday was the pitching of David Boule, whose only bad inning, Quincy's three-run second, kept him from earning the victory in the well-pitched game.

Impressive on the offensive side was designated hitter Kevin Sabbag, who picked up three hits in his varsity debut.

"We had everybody playing," Walker said. "With some of the kids, we know what they're capable of, but we just haven't had the chance to use them."

With the score tied at one in the top of the second, senior Joe Conti connected for an RBI single to put the Presidents on top. Paul Cedroni followed with a two-run double to widen the gap to three.

Cedroni, John Balzano and Willie Cullen led Quincy with two hits each, while the pitching of Mike Notarangelo (eight hits, six strikeouts, only two walks) kept the Tigers at bay most of the way.

Another Joe Conti, this one a sophomore, drove in the eventual winning run in the fourth with a single.

Newton rallied to close the margin to a single run, but Notarangelo held on for the complete game.

Waltham 12, Newton North 8

It was a battle for survival and in the end the side with the last chance survived.

Junior catcher Steve Giusti belted a grand-slam homer to culminate a six-run bottom of the seventh inning explosion to lead the Waltham High baseball team to a gutty 12-8 victory over arch-rival Newton North Wednesday night in a Suburban League contest at Jake Dennis Field.

Righthander Bill Fennelly pitched two and two-thirds innings of one-run relief to keep the game close. Fennelly improved his record to 2-1 on the year. More importantly, Fennelly, who hadn't been to the plate all season, came through with the clutch hit of the seventh inning.

Newton North reliever Joe King came on in the third inning and after a shakey start settled down to pitch well. The Tigers had built up an 8-6 lead going into the seventh inning and King's job was to hold the lead.

Sophomore Dan DiVito led off and ripped a line shot to left, but North's Chris Pachus was right there to snag the drive. Hawk hopes sagged. Keith Vanderlinden picked up Waltham's spirits by driving a long double off the fence in center field.

Ed Sweet hit a bloop single just inside the left field line and the Hawks had runners on first and second with one out. Up stepped Fennelly, who had smacked a line single his first time up.

Fennelly jumped all over a King pitch and drilled high off the fence in left field. Lee Wilcox and Joe Kohler, who were pinch-runners, both scored on the play to tie the contest. The Tigers then walked Jeff Fisher intentionally to put men on first and second for a double-play ball.

King's first pitch to Tom Hardiman was wide of the mark and it got by catcher Ed Natale moving the runners over. Hardiman was walked intentionally to load the bases and bring up Giusti. The outfield was playing in, but it didn't matter. Giusti powered a drive over the right-center field fence to put an exclamation point to one of the most exciting high school games of the Suburban League season.

The Tigers made the Hawks sweat this one out. The Tigers moved into a 7-6 lead in the fifth inning. After one out, Will Hays smacked a solo homer to center field off Waltham's second pitcher Gino DiStefano to tie the score at 6-6. Fritz Phillips, who had four hits in five trips to the plate, drove in the seventh Tiger run with a base hit to right field.

The Tigers stretched the lead in the top of the seventh inning with a two-out rally. Chris Pachus singled. Dave Boule drove Pachus in with a double down the left field line. It was all the Tigers would get off Fennelly in the seventh inning.

Tiger stickmen return to basics

NEWTON — In 1982, Newton North's lacrosse team was defeated by Weymouth North in the season's final game. The loss knocked the Tigers out of contention for a state playoff berth.

Times have changed.

For one thing, Newton North has already sewn up a tourney bid with a 6-0 North Division record (12-2 overall). Also, on Thursday, the Tigers demolished Weymouth North, 16-2, at Newton.

"We just went back to the basics," Tiger coach Rick Clark explained after the victory. "All the things we didn't do against Concord-Carlisle (an 8-3 loss Wednesday). We were picking up the ground balls and finding the open man."

Most importantly, Clark said, Newton North "didn't wallow in the loss."

The game was over before the first period had ended, as the Tigers exploded for a 6-0 lead. Actually it was Tim Brandon who exploded. The senior captain accounted for six of Newton's first seven goals.

"We told him what he was doing wrong," Clark said, "and he just went out and did what we told him."

By the end of the first half, the Tigers were up 12-0. Aside from Brandon's half-dozen, Tim Mulvey picked up a pair and Tom Ryan, John Callahan, Paul Boudreau and Tom Whiting each scored once before intermission.

John MacDonnell and Phil Mastroianni each scored twice in the second half to account for all of Newton's scoring.

With the regular season almost history (only one non-league game remains, Framingham North at Newton Tuesday), Clark and his staff have their sights trained on the playoffs, which should begin around Saturday, June 4.

As has been the case all season, Clark will be counting heavily on his tri-captains to lead the squad to playoff success.

The offensive leader is Mulvey, who scored 25 goals this season, but played only one half of many of the one-sided contests. "He's 6-2, 220, with awesome speed," Clark said. "He's got to be double covered."

Also a spark on offense is Brandon, whose six-goal performance Thursday showed what he is capable of.

Backing everything up is the player Clark calls "the best in the state," goalie Ed Cohen. Not only does Cohen make the saves, but he is usually the catalyst of the fast-break with his 70-yard outlet passes.

The key to winning, Clark said, is to control the ground balls. "If you get the ground balls, you get possession. When you get possession, you get the goals."

He added, "We know we can pass and dodge, we just have to control the ball and force our opponents to play defense."

"I'm sure we'll get what we need," Clark concluded.

Newton North lacrosse coach Rick Clark isn't pleased with his team's most recent loss, but he hopes his squad has learned a valuable lesson.

The once-beaten Tigers went at it with once-beaten Concord-Carlisle and came out on the short end of an 8-3 score Tuesday in a non-league contest at the Newton North athletic field.

This game against Concord, however, was a sort of preview of what's ahead in the state tourney. The Patriots, Tigers and Lincoln-Sudbury figure to be the top three seeded teams and Newton North's only losses have been to Concord and Lincoln.

"We've got to use the loss to Concord to our advanatge," said Clark. "I'd rather lose now than in the tourney. We've learned some lessons and its up to us to use them. We played a good game on defense, but our play in the midfield and on the attack was the difference today.

"We had several chances one-on-one with the goalie," said Clark, "But, we didn't execute and we started pressing going for the big play. What happened was they gave us a little of our medicine. We're always frustrating people and forcing them to go for the big play. That's what Concord did to us today and you've got to give them credit for it."

The Tigers drew first blood in the opening minutes of the contest. Tim Mulvey netted the goal on a fine pass from Tom Whiting.

Concord, however, got right back into the contest scoring just 10 seconds after Newton North goals. Mike Lucido, who finished the game with five goals, tallied on a breakaway score.

The Patriots then scored four unanswered goals to take a 5-1 lead in the the half. Clark wasn't about to give in. A four-goal lead in lacrosse isn't an overwhelming disadvantage all the Tigers had to do was turn the momentum around.

They started doing just that on a Tim Brandon score with an assist going to Tom Ryan. The goal made it 6-2, but Concord scored the next goal to break up the Tiger momentum. Newton North had its chances to close the lead to three goals, but couldn't click.

"We still haven't taken full advantage of all our scoring opportunities and it has been killing us," said Clark. "We didn't score the big goal to change the momentum around."

Newton North's final goal was scored by Tom Whiting on an extra-man situation. Tiger goalie Ed Cohen played an outstanding game making 34 saves. He cleared the ball well and made some spectacular stops.

Newton South 11, Waltham 4

Newton South exploded for six goals in the first period en route to an 11-4 victory over Waltham last Tuesday in Southern Division contest.

The Hawks and the Lions traded early goals, but Newton South poured in five straight scores to take command of the contest. Scott Chin and Tom Dorf led the scoring parade with three goals each.

Jon Rosenson had two goals and five assists. Mike Castle pumped in two goals for Newton South and Phil Burnham also scored.

The win lifted South's record to 2-5 in the league and 4-8 overall. Newton South will travel to Hingham tomorrow.

Undefeated Dover nips Apollos

Despite a second-half comeback, the Newton Apollos couldn't stave off undefeated Dover-Sherborn and dropped a a 4-3 Greater Boston Youth Soccer League verdict Sunday at the Charlie Brown School Field.

Sue Prendiville tallied the first Newton goal in the first half and Doreen Hagar scored twice in the second half, assisted by Blanca Wales on both goals. The Apollos' record is now 2-2-3.

D. Brooks, McAdam top Newton Catholic athletes

NEWTON — The administration and guidance staff at Newton Catholic High School named Dawn Brooks the outstanding scholar-athlete while coaches selected Scott McAdam as the outstanding athlete at the school's annual Sports Award Ceremony Friday night.

Brooks was the second-ranked senior academically at Newton Catholic as well as a co-captain of the cheerleading and softball squads. McAdam was a major force in football (offensive and defensive end), basketball (starting guard and co-captain) and baseball, where he's the reigning Catholic Suburban League Most Valuable Player and is currently hitting at a .640 clip. He was also selected as the baseball team's MVP and the basketball unsung hero.

Most Valuable Player and Unsung Hero awards were presented to students in football, volleyball, boys' and girls' basketball, baseball, softball and cheerleading. Junior Varisty certificates were also awarded.

Special four-letter awards were given to Dan Walsh and Katie Webber. Walsh has lettered in all three boys' sports while at Newton Catholic, while Webber has lettered in softball and cheerleading.

Senior running back Marc Hung was named MVP of the football team, while McAdam was given the Unsung Hero honors.

Also honored was Steve Nugent, who was awarded the Gus Sullivan Award as the team's outstanding lineman. Sullivan coached the former Our Lady's High School football team to four Catholic League titles in five years during the late 1940s. He later became athletic director at Boston State College, a position he held for 32 years before retiring in 1981.

In boys' basketball, 6-4 center Tom DeRosa, a junior this year, was named MVP. Among the female hoopsters, Lisa Bove was MVP while Linda D'Angelo was the squad's Unsung Hero.

While McAdam took MVP honors in baseball, Dan Walsh was the team's Unsung Hero. Karen Andrews was accorded MVP honors in softball, with Katie Webber taking the Unsung Hero award.

From the cheerleaders, Brooks was the MVP while Cathy Demeo was named Unsung Hero.

NCSC Summer Camp registration is underway

WEST NEWTON — Registrations for the Newton Community Service Center's Summer Day Camp programs for children 2.9-12 years of age are underway daily at the Center's facility, 492 Waltham St., or through mailed applications which are available by phoning 969-5906.

The older camp for boys and girls 6½-12 years of age, directed by Nicholas Siciliano, includes a private camp site located at Hale Camping Reservation in Westwood. There are 30 acres of long winding nature trails.

The program is a comprehensive one, including swimming instruction and free-swim, arts and crafts, hikes, sports, boating, games and archery. In addition, other special activities will be offered, such as cookouts, and camp-wide programs.

All campers benefit from the involvement of graduate students enrolled in the Boston College Summer School.

A camper-counselor ratio of 7 to 1 provides responsible and positive leadership for enjoyable programming.

Campers leave by bus from the NCSC Inc. building, 492 Waltham St., each morning Monday-Friday at 9 a.m. and return at approximately 4 p.m. (3 p.m. on Fridays). There is no additional fee for the bus ride to and from Westwood.

The younger camp for boys and girls, 2.9-6 years of age, directed by Patti Place, includes a variety of child oriented activities - indoor and outdoor games, arts and crafts, music, creative movement, swimming and special events will be offered in a relaxed "camp" atmosphere.

This planned summer progrma will be divided, according to age, into small groups. The program is located on the grounds of the Newton Country Day of the Sacred Heart, 785 Center St., Newton.

There will be an open house on Friday, June 24, from 1 to 3 p.m. for interested individuals which will provide an opportunity to see the site and meet the staff.

Due to the increased number of families needing additional care for children before and after the standard camp day, NCSC Inc. is offering the following alternative hours: 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., 7:30 a.m. - 6 p.m., 7:30 a.m. - 4 p.m., and 9 a.m. - 6 p.m.

A roadrace for everyone

NEWTON CENTRE — Road races are usually held to benefit a specific cause or organization. But NEWW's five-mile road race June 12 will benefit anyone concerned with mental and physical health.

"We're not running a road race just to raise money, but also to educate people," said Scott Bok, director of NEWW, a non-profit mental health clinic. "We're trying to get the message out that physical fitness is good for your head and your body."

Two races - an adult race followed by a race for kids - are planned for June 12. World-class marathoner Kevin Ryan of New Zealand is the race's pacesetter. NEWW, located in Newton Center, is also offering free mental health forums, featuring Olympic coach Bill Squires and Stephan Howard, M.D., the day before the race.

The two-day fundraising/public relations event is being held in conjuction with Mayor Theodore Mann's declaration of Mental Fitness Day on June 12.

"Road races involve the community in a nice way," said Bock, noting that many local businesses are participating in event.

Continental Cablevision is offering free M-TV T-shirts for kids and Pioneer Financial and Honda Volvo Village are providing adult T-shirts. Contributions from Newton Lumber Company allow the health forums to be free.

Some 25 food service companies are providing "tons of food" for the event so runners can "eat and relax after the race," Bok said.

"Running for your mental health will be interesting to people and should attract people who haven't been running," Bock said. "A lot of people have already registered."

NEWW, located in Newton Centre since 1974, has been "well-received" by the community, particularly by local businesses, Bock said.

"The level of acceptance here in Newton is surprising," said Bock, pointing out that many of NEWW's clients have jobs nearby.

NEWW provides services on a regular basis to about 140 emotionally troubled adults. The professional staff includes psychiatrists, psychiatric nurses, occupational and physical therapists and a rehabilitation specialist.

Bock describes the center's financial posture as "tenuous." The budget "hasn't gone down but it hasn't gone up," he said. "We'd like to diversify our funding."

Interested runners should pick up registration forms by June 6.

Planning the race, Bock said, "has been a cooperative venture in the community. It's been really nice."

Off and running

Barbara Dallin, an expressive therapist at NEWW Center, Inc. in Newton, tries out one of the tee shirts promoting the non-profit center's 5-mile roadrace slated at 9:30 a.m. Sunday, June 12, starting at Newton City Hall. For information on the race and "Mental Fitness Day" call 969-8200.

Y's annual meeting tonight

NEWTON — The West Suburban YMCA in Newton holds its 106th annual meeting on Wednesday, June 1 beginning at 5:30 p.m.

The meeting will begin with a social hour which will feature hot and cold hors d'ouvres with punch and coffee. At 6:15 the annual business meeting will be held, followed by the presentation of a number of awards to the YMCA.

An added feature to this year's program will be a demonstration by the youngsters from the Y's highly successful gymnastics classes.

Call 244-6050 for more information.

Bonds okayed for local firms

BOSTON — The Massachusetts Industrial Finance Agency (MIFA) has approved industrial revenue bonds totalling $9.33 million for two firms in Newton. The companies estimate that the projects will create 385 new jobs.

Purity Supreme, Inc. will use proceeds from an $8.8 million bond to purchase and renovate a 226,345 square foot complex on California Street in Newton and Watertown. The four building complex is located in the Commercial Area Revitalization Districts (CARDS) of both Newton and Watertown, qualifying the project for the low interest bond.

The firm will relocate its busiess offices in the renovated complex and will also establish a Heartland Food Warehoue store at the site. Purity Supreme will lease the remaining space to retail tenants, and estimates that the project will create 375 new jobs.

Salett's, Inc. will construct a 6,400 square foot addition to its plant on Needham Street in Newton with proceeds from a $500,000 bond. The firm will also purchase equipment.

Established in 1955, Salett's is a processor and distributor of meat products. The expansion will result in 10 new jobs.

MIFA is an independent public agency designed to promote economic growth and increased employment through a variety of incentives, including industrial revenue bonds, downtown revitalization through the Commercial Area Revitalization District (CARD) program, and loan guaranties.

Youth pro Musica rehearsals are open

NEWTON — Openings are available in Youth Pro Musica, Greater Boston's concert chorus for young people, for the 1983-84 season.

Directed by Roberta Humez, Youth pro Musica includes a chorus for boys and girls in grades 5-9, a chorale for girls of high school age, and a training chorus for boys and girls in grades 3-5.

Auditions for the high school girls' chorale and boys' and girls' chorus will be held through June 11 by appointment.

Members of Youth Pro Musica, drawn from several Boston-area towns, are exposed to challenging choral repertoire. The group appears in area concert halls, and on radio and television. Youth Pro Musica singers benefit from a choral experience including voice training, musicianship and performance opportunities, and enjoy performing fine music with other young people before discerning audiences.

Youth Pro Musica members have appeared with the Opera Acompany of Boston and with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. The chorus has presented premieres of several peiece,s and encourages the commission of new works for treble chours.

Included in the upcoming season is a performance of the Vivaldi Gloria with orchestra.

For audition information, call 237-0465 or 653-1092.

BC Law dean addresses issues of right and wrong

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — Looking beyond the legal system for achieving social justice was the theme Thursday during the Newton Mayor's Community Prayer Breakfast held at Boston College's McElroy Room.

Some 800 people attended the ninth annual event and heard an address by Dr. Richard G. Huber, dean of Boston College Law School.

Lieutenant Governor John Kerry, a B.C. Law School graduate, introduced Huber, thanking the dean for his contributions to the school. Kerry also thanked organizers for giving him an opportunity to talk about something other than whether or not Boston Mayor Kevin White would seek reelection.

A trustee of the state Continuing Legal Education, Inc., Huber said society relies mainly on the legal system as means of seeking justice and the concept of justice "is primarily focused on groups."

Justice however "is not the sole policy of the law," Huber said. "Other values at times will prevail."

Though the legal system must still stride toward justice for women and blacks, Huber said, individuals and groups are responsible for educating themselves in order to develop "a true passion for justice."

Justice "is seldom simply right against wrong," but a balance sought in order to meet the needs of the community as a whole, Huber said. To achieve a just system those within it need to develop a sense of "human understanding and compassion," said Huber, who was presented with a city Centennial Medallion Award.

Among the members of city churches and synagogues offering prayers were The Rev. Robert Littlejohn of Myrtle Baptist Church and Rabbi Murry Rothman of Temple Shalom. The Rev. J. Donald Monan, Boston College president, and Benjamin Lipson, program chairman, greeted the guests.

Mayor Theodore Mann called the annual breakfast "an example of how a community can get together under one umbrella." The mayor also cited the city's Human Rights Commission for helping to bring together diverse groups. Through the commission "we dare to examine those things which could do us harm."

The commission within the last year held three meetings with city groups to discuss ethnic, racial and religious bias. From those meetings the commission, formed at Mann's request, released a report revealing that certain groups felt economic and ethnic discrimination. The commission, headed by Richard Glovsky, made several recommendations to the mayor as a result of the meetings.

District Court Judge Monte Basbas, Leahora Hill of Newton Church Women United and Monsignor William Granville of Sacred Heart Church read selected prayers following the meal.

The South High School concert choir and brass ensemble, directed by Helen T. Taylor and accompanied by Alice Smith, performed four pieces for guests.

Dr. Marcus elected medical society head

NEWTON — Dr. Eugenia Marcus of Newton was elected president of the Charles River District Medical Society for the 1983-84 term at its annual meeting held recently at the Wellesley Country Club.

Dr. Marcus, a pediatrician at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, served the past two terms as society secretary.

Dr. Marcus is the first woman president in the history of the 750-member society, comprised of physicians from Needham, Newton, Waltham, Wellesley and Weston.

Dr. William Soybell of Lexington, an internist at the Waltham Hospital, was elected vice president.

Also elected was Dr. Francis J. Kleeman as secretary, and Dr. George D. Kornitzer as treasurer. Both are urologists at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

The keynote speaker at the annual dinner meeting was Dr. Mark Hegsted of Wellesley, author of the government publication, "Dietary Guidelines for Americans."

Dr. Marcus is past president of the American Medical Women's Association of Massachusetts; is chairman of the Committee on Women in Organized Medicine for the Massachusetts Medical Society; was chairman of the Perinatal Care Committee at Newton-Wellesley Hospital; and served as director of student memberships on the National Executive Board of the American Medical Women's Association.

She was graduated from the University of Michigan and the Medical College of Pennsylvania. She received her pediatric training at St. Luke's Hospital in New York and at the Stanford University Hospital in Palo Alto, California.

Dr. Marcus lives in Newton with her husband, Dr. Leonard Marcus, who is chairman of the Epidemiology and Public Health Department at Tufts University Veterinary School. They have two children, Helena, 13, and Jeffrey, 11.

Health Dept. pushes skin cancer cautions

NEWTON — Skin cancer is one of the most curable of all cancers if treated in the early stages. Often a preliminary check-up at a skin cancer screening clinic can identify a condition requiring further medical evaluation. The Newton Health Department is sponsoring a free skin cancer screening on Tuesday, June 14.

Dr. Alan Rockoff, a Newton dermatologist, will be available to do the screening and to discuss prevention and teatment of the disease. The clinic will be held from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the chapel of the First Baptist Church, 848 Beacon St., Newton Centre. No preregistration is required.

Current medical research has made great advances in the causes and care of skin cancer. Based on this work, here are some commonly asked questions and answers which can help ease fear associated with the disease.

What are the signs and symptoms of skin cancer?

Skin conditions which should be evaluated are: changes in the size or color of a mole, a lesion that does not heal, or the appearance of darkly pigment growth, uneven in color and shape. The Health Department encourages anyone who may have concerns about a skin condition to atten dhte screening, or have it checked by his/her physician.

How many people suffer from skin cancer?

According to a 1982 American Cancer Society study, an estimated 400,000 men and women equally have skin cancer. A vast majority of cases are highly curble basal or squamous cell cancers.

What are the chances of survival for this type of cancer?

Fortunately skin cancer has an overall cure rate of 90% with early detection and treatment. Once diagnosed, can often be treated in several visits to the physician's office. For cases of melanoma, a rare and more severe form of disease, the survival rate is about 68%.

Can anything be done to prevent skin cancer?

There are no guarantees against developing the disease but there are several easy steps everyone can follow to reduce the risk.

1. Be especially careful of prolonged exposure to spring and summer sun between the hours of 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., the hottest time of day. In the Boston area this is imporatnt from March through September.

2. If you plan to be in the sun, use a protective sunscreen which can be bought without a prescription. These are labeled with a skin protection fact (SPF) number from 1, the least protective, to 15, which offers complete protection. The guide below explains which number is best for each general skin test:

a. always or usually burns, doesn't tan much - SPF 15

b. sometimes burn, then tan - SPF 8-10

c. always tan - SPF 4

Sunscreens will come off with water and must be reapplied.

3. Be careful on cool, cloudy days. The sun's rays can penetrate the cluds and cause a sunburn.

School menus listed

Friday, June 10 — Tuna salad on whole wheat, slice of cheese, carrot sticks and canned fruit.

SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Monday, June 6 — Choice of grilled cheese with fries and peaches, hamburger or cheeseburger with fries and juice; a la carte: pizza Newtonburger.

Tuesday, June 7 — Choice of baked chicken with whipped potatoes, French bread and juice; or hamburger or cheeseburger with fries and juice. A la carte: pizza.

Wednesday, June 8 — Choice of chicken patty on bun with fries and juice; cheeseburger with fries and juice. A la carte: pizza or Newtonburger.

League rates Kennedy, Tsongas, Frank

NEWTON — The League of Women Voters of the United States recently released its political accountability ratings (PAR) for Senate and House members based on their voting records during the 1st and 2nd Sessions of the 97th Congress.

Massachusetts Senators Edward Kennedy and Paul Tsongas both scored 100%. Fourth Congressional District Representative Barney Frank had a rating of 91%.

Members of Congress were rated according to their votes on 12 selected issues of concern to the League. These include voting rights, social programs spending, foreign aid, busing, food stamps, education funding, environmental funding, domestic content, hazardous waste, and resource conservation.

In announcing the new PAR ratings, Sandy Butzel, president of the League of Women Voters of Newton, said, "The League takes political action to achieve specific legislative goals. The fact that the League takes positions on issues in no way affects its nonpartisanship; we neither support or oppose political parties or candidates. To lobby effectively, we need a clear measure of where each member of Congress stands on issues we consider critical. PAR ratings provide us with this important lobbying tool."

Butzel said that the League rates each member of Congress twice. In the first rating, PAR-1, an absence or failure to announce or pair is considered a negative factor and negatively affects the rating. In the second, PAR-2, the rating is based on actual votes cast for or against the League's position.

"We use the dual rating system because we realize that there may be unavoidable and legitimate reasons for a member's failure to vote," said Butzel. "It is also necessary, because if only the recorded votes were counted, a legislator would score 100% merely by voting 'with the League' on one issue."

League members in more than 1,200 state and local Leagues across he country determine positions after studying the issues and developing a national consensus.

Dog show bound

Ladies Dog Club member Mrs. Charlotte McGowan of Newton, shown with her multiple group placing and specialty winning Shetland Sheepdog "Ch. Rorralore Sportin' Chance C.D." will be competing in the club's 66th annual Dog Show and Obedience Trial Saturday, June 4 at the Commonwealth Career Center, Route 16, Wellesley, starting at 8 a.m. The show is open to the public.

College speaker urges grads develop 'inner self'

CHESTNUT HILL — The head of a New Hampshire educational consulting firm urged Pine Manor College graduates recently to develop "your inner self" and to strive for a life "free of all prisons."

Anne S. Lenox, president of Lenox Associates and the retired headmistress of the Agnes Irwin School in Philadelphia, filled in for scheduled speaker Sherry Lansing, former president of 20th Century Fox, who had to cancel her commencement appearance because of an illness in her family.

Speaking to the 199 graduates and their families at Pine Manor, Lenox joked that "My message to you today is whenever you leave home and need a new pair of black shoes and a haircut.. get them, because you never know when you'll be in front of people publicly."

On a serious note, however, Lenox told of her monthly visits to a friend imprisoned for murder in New York State.

"The crime is murder," Lenox told the graduates. "The sentence: 15 years to life. And if she is let out after completing her minimum sentence, she will be well into her 70s."

Lenox said that when she left the prison after a recent visit, "I was aware of my freedom. I could eat when I wanted. I could wear what I wanted. And then I began to think about people in prisons of their own making, people caged by drugs, alcohol, poverty, selfishness and hatred - the mental and physical bars that inhibit us from attaining productive and worthwhile lives."

Lenox stressed her belief that people create "three particular prisons," including "the prison of ignorance...loneliness... and fear."

Citing the "prison of fear," Lexox called it dangerous and demoralizing.

Fear, she said, "prevents us as women from taking necessary risks to further ourselves."

She urged the graduates to strive for a life "free of prisons. There can be order without freedom, but you can never have freedom without order."

The 1983 Pine Manor commencement was marked by the largest graduating class in the college's 72-year history. A total of 199 degrees were awarded, including 61 bachelor of arts; 134 associate of arts; and 4 associate of science degrees.

An honorary doctor of arts degree was awarded to Emily Wetherby Sullivan, founder of a New York firm of the same name which designs coats, jackets and outerwear. Sherry Lansing was awarded an honorary doctor of letters degree in absentia by the college.

Norwood Franchisees

"...because we can make money and have fun doing it. Ever since we got a White Hen Franchise five years ago, we've been making more money and getting a kick out of doing it as a family. Even the kids pitch in! You ought to see if you can qualify and start making money for yourself for a change."

In times like these, with the threat of lay-offs and employee dissatisfaction, more and more families are discovering the joy and the wisdom of working for themselves. White Hen Pantry is a growing convenience food store chain and we're looking for responsible people who can run their own business with the advantage of our corporate expertise.

A White Hen Franchise offers you a guaranteed annual income, a complete training program, a complete store equipment and operating package with store counseling, business insurance and advertising. To find out if you qualify, call (617) 395-6701, Monday-Friday between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

British soldiers raise Union Jack over South Georgia Island.

Filmmakers find fame in Falklands War

By Kenneth R. Clark
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — When Cindy Buxton and Annie Price went out to live among the penguins, they never expected to find themselves in the middle of a war that would make television stars of both of them.

"King Penguin: Stranded Beyond the Falklands," which CBS will air June 22 from 8-9 p.m., EDT, might never have gone beyond the bounds of the BBC had Argentina not decided to take the Falkland Islands away from England just as they were finishing it.

If the two young British filmmakers — in New York to promote their wildlife creation — did not expect a war, however, neither did they expect to emerge from their adventure as heroines of Britannia. It's a role they still have trouble accepting.

"We didn't do anything, really," said Miss Price. "We were a frightful nuisance."

"I think if we knew what we were in for, we'd never have left South Georgia," added Miss Buxton.

But they did do something. While a handful of Royal Marines battled Argentine forces just 15 miles from their isolated camp, they went right on doing what they had been doing — flying the Union Jack and taking pictures of penguins.

It all began on April 3, 1982. Buxton and Price already had fought and won one battle with British officials loathe to allow two unescorted women to spend six months alone on the remote island of South Georgia. They were not happy to face another one.

"The first I knew that something was going wrong, though I didn't think there was going to be a war about it, was when the Argentine scrap-iron merchants landed at the old whaling station," said Miss Buxton.

"I couldn't understand what they were doing because they were quite obviously provoking all the rules and regulations."

Buxton and Price, who were nearing the end of a filmmaking mission planned for years, couldn't see the invasion, but they could hear it and they could listen to radio cross-talk describing the firefight the Argentines initially won.

The "scrap-iron merchants," who knew where the women were, contacted them by radio and told them they would be removed to Port Stanley in the Falklands, 800 miles away, within 48 hours.

What Buxton and Price did not know was that defending Royal Marines had put two Argentinian ships out of commission and shot down all their helicopters before surrendering.

The Argentinians thus had no means of getting to the women short of walking across a 15-mile-wide glacier filled with man-eating crevasses.

"We were the only two women for a thousand miles and we just hoped that they were going to be pleasant and treat us reasonably well," said Miss Buxton.

"You can't feel fear unless you're confronted by it, and we weren't at that stage," Miss Buxton said. "We hadn't seen a hairy Argentinian or any unusual activity. We'd only heard it, but the element of the unknown is always a bit unpleasant."

Throughout the ordeal, the two women flew the Union Jack at their camp as they waited for "soldiers to come up the beach and point guns at us and take us away."

Word of the flag got back to the British press and made them famous, but Miss Buxton said she simply forgot to take it down.

"It never occurred to me to take it down," she said. "I suppose if the Argentines had turned up and found the flag flying, it might have upset them a bit. I suppose that might have been a bit stupid."

The two women eventually were evacuated — precious wildlife film intact — by the Royal Navy and flown home to a welcome that still has them gasping. On remote South Georgia they had no idea they had made headlines.

"As the plane stopped, we could see all these lights coming on — probably 100 or 150 television people," said Miss Buxton of their arrival back in England. "I turned to Annie and said, 'Coo, somebody frightfully important is arriving. I wonder who it is?

"And the captain of the airplane said, 'You'd better go now. They're all waiting for you.'"

Their film, showing penguins and elephant seals going about their solemn business, enjoying recorded music, examining their peculiar visitors and generally ignoring the sounds of war in the distance, is a testimony to the more sensible creatures of planet Earth, but the Royal Navy remains nervous.

"When we got back, they said they were really worried about where we were going next, saying they really ought to be on exercise somewhere nearby, just in case," said Miss Buxton.

That will be Ascencion Island, among the turtles in the equatorial Atlantic. But even without a war, Buxton and Price should have little trouble placing their next film.

Whether they like it or not, the "Argentine scrap-iron merchants" have turned them into celebrities. As filmmakers, they have arrived.

YOUR OFFICIAL MASS. INSPECTION MAINTENANCE STATIONS

Now that your car is inspected just once a year, the last number on your plate determines when.

If it's 6, you're inspected in June.

Zeros come in October, though, and plates with all letters in November.

We'll do the traditional safety checks as well as the new computerized tailpipe emissions test. Quickly and efficiently.

Docs make cable house call for diabetes info

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Here's your chance to talk to a doctor about your health without going to his office, visiting a golf course or paying the customary fee.

For four prime time hours June 2 viewers of Cable Health Network will have the opportunity to telephone, toll free, and talk to a specialist about diabetes.

"Diabetes: Update '83" will inform viewers that the disease, third leading killer in the United States today, is suffered by 11 million Americans, including 5 million who don't know they have it.

The format is simple: viewers get tons of information about symptoms and treatment and then are free to call a doctor in their area or one of 25 specialists in Los Angeles.

The calls are not heard on the air. Confidentiality is guaranteed. The physicians are knowledgeable and primed to respond to all kinds of questions.

Prime mover of "Diabetes: Update '83" is Dr. Art Uline, a regular on the "Today" show for seven years. He also is part of Los Angeles' KABC nightly news.

Uline, who looks more like a physician than Drs. Kildare and Welby combined, is also chairman of Cable Health Network.

He calls this marathon show, a total of eight hours because it is rerun immediately, an "informathon." No money is sought from viewers, only questions.

"We will have panels of doctors in 25 cities answering local calls and another 25 physicians in Los Angeles manning toll free lines," said Uline, a bespectacled man of about 50 with a neat mustache and scholarly manner.

"Last November we produced a heart disease informathon and worried that 15 doctors wouldn't get enough calls. We received an estimated 30,000 calls and could only handle 2,000 of them. Some callers waited four hours to talk to a doctor."

Uline hopes the program also helped save some lives.

As the cable's chairman and with complete cooperation of the American Medical Association, Uline is reducing some of the so-called mystique of the practice of medicine.

The cable, which runs 24 hours a day, seven days a week, may well be the most valuable and useful manifestation of the tube yet.

It brims with health and science programming aimed at improving lives of viewers and providing information that will encourage Americans to establish healthier lifestyles.

The programs include segments on nutrition, exercise, medical breakthroughs, sexuality, sports medicine, emotional and mental health issues, allergies, diets, contagious diseases and drug information.

Beginning this month Cable Health Network will produce the "Physicians Journal Club" for doctors, bringing attention to important new developments printed in medical journals.

"At least one person in 17 percent of our homes is involved in health occupationally," said Uline, an gynecological surgeon who abandoned his practice last year to teach at the University of Southern California.

Much of his time is devoted to Cable Health Network.

"I think we represent the future of cable," he said. "We provide fingertip information. We don't program for the masses. We target our messages.

"For instance, no network could devote four hours of prime time to an informathon on diabetes. There is plenty of medical material available for cable, but we are very selective.

"Our purpose is to give sufficient information for viewers to make intelligent decisions about health."

Uline believes that, technically, medicine has gone about as far as it can go. He is concerned about the limitation of medical technology.

"I think the greatest gains can now be made by focusing attention on human lifestyle disorders and treating people with information when possible. Medicine, of course, is important. But so is information.

"There is much to be done by informing patients that their own actions influence the outcome of such diseases as hypertension, emphysema, lung cancer, heart disease, drug abuse, accidents, depression, suicide and alcoholism."

Uline is certain a patient, well-informed by his doctor, can help treat and cure himself when he has been given all the facts and is encouraged to adjust to a healthy lifestyle.

Revived Orient Express is a hit; 40,000 expected aboard this year

By Gregory Jensen
UPI Senior Editor

LONDON (UPI) — There's so much nostalgia these days for travel's golden age that the revived Orient Express is rolling into its second year with a new rival heading down the tracks.

"Our train is well established now as a true luxury operation," said Colin Bather, boss of the year-old Venice Simplon Orient-Express. "It's become a part of the European travel scene."

So much so that an estimated 40,000 passengers this year will pay $595 each, excluding meals, for the 25-hour ride between the gray of London and the gondolas of Venice.

"The fun thing is that each trip is so different," said Tim Robbins, who rides most journeys as train manager. "Every group of passengers sets its own atmosphere.

"A high porportion of them still dress in the 1920s style — that's really very splendid. And almost every trip a real party atmosphere develops."

The refurbished Orient Express, reviving history's most romantic train, has been a thrice-weekly wallow in "the whole 1920s experience" since its first run May 25, 1982.

Its passengers are cossetted like the kings and presidents — and spies — who rode the original Orient Expresses a century ago. Deep armchairs enfold them on the English section of the lavish train. On the French side of the English Channel are sleeping cars, dining cars and a grand-piano bar car whose inlaid wood paneling and Lalique glass look like a movie set made real.

"Immense care has gone into getting everything exactly right," said Bather, leisure division manager of the parent Sea Containers group.

Perhaps too much care for the train's own good. In its first nine months, 20,300 passengers walked off with $160,000 worth of sterling silver, crystal goblets, ash trays and towels and other "souvenirs."

"We will not economize on the little things," Bather said. There's nothing artificial or fake on the whole train. "We won't settle for an easy or a plastic solution.

"We will not have microwave ovens on board, for instance, because that's not the point of this train. The point is the whole 1920s experience."

Clutching their navy-and-gold airline-style tickets, up to 180 passengers embark on each "VSOE" train from London on Fridays, Sundays and Tuesdays and from Venice on Saturdays, Mondays or Thursdays.

Newton fire

NEWTON — Police and fire officials are investigating a break-in and attempted arson at the shutdown Weeks Junior High School that was discovered Saturday, police said.

Police found doors opened and that someone had attempted to set a cardboard box and a piano afire in the school cafeteria. The fires burned themselves out before doing significant damage.

Police said two youngsters saw a man at an opened door of the school who allegedly swore at them and told them to get away. He then entered the school and slammed the door. The next thing they heard was the sound of glass breaking, police said.

Further details were unavailable.

About two weeks ago, an arsonist entered the Newtonville Free Public Library in Newtonville Square and set a fire that damaged thousands of books. The library remains closed for repairs.

Trumpet premier

Newton resident and Boston Symphony Orchestra trumpet player Charles Schlueter performs the Hummel Trumpet Concerto in E with the Newton Symphony at the Hatch Shell in Boston June 18.

Schlueter will solo in NSO Esplanade show

BOSTON — The Newton Symphony Orchestra has been invited again by the MDC to perform on the Esplanade in the Hatch Memorial Shell Saturday, June 18.

This is the fourth annual concert of the NSO, the only community orchestra invited to perform on an annual basis, on the banks of the Charles River.

Under the director of Conductor Ronald Knudsen the NSO performs at 8 p.m. and will present the Boston soloist debut of Boston Symphony principal trumpet Charles Schlueter of Newton. Schlueter will plan the Hummel Trumpet Concerto in E, previewing a performance he will give later this summer at the Academie Interntionale de Musique in Dijon, France. The concerto was originally written in the key of E, though it is more often performed in E flat major, as an E flat trumpet and scoring is easier to obtain.

The Newton Choral Society, under the direction of David Carrier, will join the NSO in two numbers on the Esplanade program. The Choral Society and NSO will perform "Der Sturm," a madrigal for chorus and orchestra by Haydn, and the Polovtsian Dances, by Borodin, melodies that are often associated with the Broadway musical "Kismet."

A medley from the Sound of Music, music of Tchaikovsky and an overture by Nicholai from The Merry Wives of Windsor round out the program.

In case of rain the free performance will be held Sunday, June 19 at 8 p.m.

Deadline issued on late taxes

By Kevin C. Kennedy, Staff Writer

NEWTON – The City Treasurer has notified property owners, who owe the city a total of approximately $1.28 million in fiscal year 1982 taxes, that they can look forward to seeing their names in the newspaper if they do not pay up by June 23.

Of the $1.28 million owed, $461,000 is being held up in litigation or before the state Appellate Tax Board, according to City Treasurer Theodore Scafidi. That total represents unpaid taxes on approximately 60 different properties, he said.

Of the $461,000 being held up in litigation, approximately $146,500 is assigned to the Chestnut Hill Mall, Scafidi said.

The remainder owed, more than $800,000, is divided up among almost 800 parcels, according to Scafidi. He pointed out last week that interest paid on all overdue taxes would be 14-percent.

The treasurer said that, along with thousands of dollars in parking ticket revenues, his office had collected about $28,000 in fiscal year 1982 taxes during the past week.

The names of taxpayers who have not paid up by June 23 will be published in the local newspapers in preparation for taxtaking, Scafidi said.

City Comptroller Larry Marino told the aldermanic Finance Committee last week that approximately $3.8 million dollars is still outstanding in fiscal year 1983 property taxes. He said that the total is being whittled down by approximately $70,000 a day and added that he hoped the account to be reduced significantly by the end of the fiscal year.

Marino added that a "demand letter" will be sent out sometime later in the month on unpaid FY 1983 taxes.

Marino did not alter his prediction that the city's "free cash" account will be negative on June 30, due, largely, to the amount of uncollected property taxes. He warned the Fincom, weeks ago, that the city might lose its highly respected AAA bond rating if it shows a negative "free cash" account for the second year in a row.

Foster kids

Homeless plight for unwanted teens

By John Ombelets
Staff Writer

NEWTON — At least eight area teenagers in the custody of the state Department of Social Services may be forced into the streets by a shortage of foster housing, say officials in the DSS Newton office.

The problem is a familiar one, says foster care supervisor Jane Kerzner: People who want foster children don't want teens.

"Either they have little ones and don't want an older child around to possibly be a bad influence, or they have just gone through raising their own children and want an infant for a change," Kerzner says.

The agency now has six foster homes that will accept teenagers, and all are full.

The alternative, for the eight youngsters and others who need a place to go, is to be moved from one short-term, unstable situation to another, Kerzner says.

"We might be able to place them for one night or a weekend," she says, "or they can go to the Newton emergency shelter, or they could wind up living on the street."

The pool of potential foster homes is also decreasing, as women who might have become foster parents instead seek jobs after their own children leave home, says DSS area director Judy Abrahams.

Meanwhile, the number of teenagers referred to the area office is on the rise, now averaging one or two a week, according to home finder Priscilla Dillon.

That may be partly due to the fragmenting of the extended family, says Dillon. The grandparents, aunts and uncles "aren't there the way they used to be" when children need help coping, she says.

Many of the 13-to-17-year-olds have a history of running away from home and being truant from school, but their behavior is not a product of inner-city streets.

Unlike her classmates, Kelly has no place to call home

NEWTON — Kelly Smith is mostly like other 16-year-old girls at Waltham High School, or anywhere else: She's forever on the telephone with her friends, has a boyfriend and frets about her weight while dreaming of ice cream sundaes.

But unlike her classmates, Kelly will have no place to call home after June 30.

She is an orphan in the custody of the Newton area office of the state Department of Social Services, and she needs a foster home.

Kelly, who doesn't want her real name published, has been living with an aunt in Waltham since her mother died a year ago. But her relative, with three young children of her own, is unable to house Kelly longer.

She is one of eight area teenagers the DSS office is trying to place in foster care, one of the cases agency officials figured would have a happy ending.

"We don't always have success stories," says area director Judy Abrahams, "but we really want Kelly to be one of them."

But the foster homes in the Newton area that accept teenagers are full. Agency officials have placed newspaper ads and sent fliers to Waltham churches trying to find a place for Kelly.

She would prefer a home in Waltham, she says, so she can attend Waltham High School, where all of her best friends are.

"I sort of grew up in Waltham – I feel like I do better in school here than in other towns," she says.

She is mildly retarded, and is one year behind in school, but there is no evidence of it in her manner or talk.

Probe crippling of school buses

NEWTON — Full alternative bus service was restored Tuesday after 44 school bus engines were deliberately ruined over the weekend.

Enough buses have been found to drive METCO students from Boston to school here from now through June 24, the end of the school year, according to school and bus company officials. Kenneth Hoggard, vice-president of the Commonwealth Coach Co. said Monday the METCO students and all other students needing bus service "absolutely" would have transportation to school today, thanks to other bus companies that have provided buses. There were not enough buses to transport METCO students Monday due to vandalism.

No arrests have been made yet as the probe continues. Authorities speculated that a former disgruntled employee may have caused the estimated $100,000 in damage to the buses and a trailer office set ablaze.

Bolts were dropped into one cylinder of every bus parked in the company lot at 186 Border St. The buses were then started, extensively damaging their engines.

Police said Sunday that they had a strong lead about who may have damaged the buses but Monday police said it would probably be some time before they made an arrest.

As to when the damaged buses might be returned to service, Hoggard said Monday, "We don't have a schedule for getting them back on the road yet because we've been spending all our time getting buses from all over the state and bugging the Registry of Motor Vehicles (RMV) to inspect them so we could get them on the road. Let me say the Registry has been super."

High marks for Newton playgrounds

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

Despite some decrepit benches, a few frayed basketball nets, and a sprinkling of broken glass, Newton's playgrounds appear to be safe places for children to spend sunny summer days.

A teacher who had brought her young charges to the Newton Centre playground for fresh air and exercise yesterday morning said she thought the playground and its equipment posed no danger.

"We've been coming here all year and never had a problem," said Margaret Clearmont, a teacher at the Pre-School Experience Nursery School camp program.

First-grade teacher Jean Comeau, whose class of Mason-Rice School students was frolicking on the grass and the jungle gym as a "special treat," could not recall a case in which a child was hurt.

However, children occasionally fall off the climbing apparatus, or are frightened by dogs, she said.

Keeping a watchful eye on her two young daughters, Betsy Aranna of Newton noted "a lot of potential problems." A child could fall and hit his head on metal instead of the sand spread beneath the climbing apparatus, she said. A West Roxbury woman praised the playground for being "very clean," but complained that the sandbox was "rickety" and the paint was chipping off the swings.

Over on the basketball court, 28-year-old Kevin Gilligan of Newton suggested that "the nets aren't replaced often enough." One of the two nets is unraveling.

Barely a mile away, the lower end of Cold Springs Playground was deserted. Weeds have taken over one of the softball fields, though the other is well kept. The benches look just like those at the Newton Centre Playground: almost all their paint has peeled off and slats are missing from several.

Mann: Hold on to courts

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann, chairman of the Middlesex County Advisory Board, has contradicted the county commissioners in advocating that county courthouses be turned over to the state.

"State takeover of all county court buildings could save the Middlesex County taxpayer as much as $10 million a year," Mann stated as the executive committee of the advisory board voted to support legislation before the Senate to hand the courthouses over to the state.

County commissioner Thomas Larkin stated last week that the three commissioners, including Newton resident Bill Schmidt, were unanimous in opposing a state takeover of the county courthouses. He said such a proposal "is absurd, in the face of the current state revenue and expenditure crisis. We believe recent county reforms are permanent, and, as a consequence, county government is easily more cost efficient, less complicated, more accountable and more accessible than state government."

Larkin predicted a state takeover of the county courthouses "will cause an increase in the state budget of at least $30 million. We assume the estimate will increase as hidden costs shake down."

One of the hidden costs Larkin cited, besides insurance, debt service and health and retirement benefits is "the proven propensity of state government to be more bloated than local and county government."

Mann said the costs of debt service would disappear if the courthouses went over to the state, but he would not elaborate on the basis of his prediction of $10 million in savings per year.

Diane Norris, in charge of public information for the advisory board, explained the difference in Mann's and Larkin's opinions about the future of the courthouses.

"Tom (Larkin) is arguing from an overall perspective," she said. His concern is with "the burden on the state" and with the added costs to citizens across the state, according to Norris.

"The mayor is concerned with property taxpayers," she said. "They are both right. You have to see what each regards as his prime constituency."

Robert Healy, city manager of Cambridge and vice-chairman of the advisory board, has expressed his concern, according to Norris, that court maintenance costs could escalate under state control. He did acknowlege, however, that the state takeover would be a logical completion of the court reform act, she said.

Both Mann and Larkin contend that the state should be made to pay back rents on county courthouses it now uses. "I've written a letter to the county commissioners asking that they bring legal action against the state" to collect overdue rents, the mayor said.

Norris said the state agreed to pay Middlesex County $8.5 million per year for courthouse use. "We've been getting $3.2 million a year," she said. "There's $20 million past due in Middlesex County alone."

She added that she found it hard to imagine the state being able to pay for the courthouse maintenance costs when it can not keep up with the existing rental agreement.

Norris commented that a lawsuit might be in the works, since all other efforts to secure back rents from the state have failed. "We talked with anyone who would listen," she said.

A bill now in the House of Representatives would take the courthouses from the county by eminent domain and leave it to the county to incur the loss of the late rents. Another bill in the Senate would reimburse the county for all past due rents. Both bills would create an independent authority to administer the courthouses.

'Tow and hold' policy ceased

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city's recently enacted "tow and hold" policy, designed to wrench parking fines from delinquent scofflaws, has itself been put on hold.

Towing and holding vehicles with more than five unpaid parking tickets brought thousands of dollars into city coffers in the first few days of its implementation. It also brought dozens of surprised, sometimes irate citizens to city hall to document their delinquencies and pay the price.

Last week the policy was temporarily suspended in favor of sending out notices to scofflaws with more than five tickets outstanding, something that was already prescribed in the original plan but never accomplished.

"Tow and hold" was not dropped because Mayor Theodore Mann's daughter's car was impounded last Wednesday night for five delinquent tickets, city officials said.

On the contrary, Mann said last week that the new policy's hitting his own family was proof it was being implemented in a fairhanded fashion.

Alderman Joseph DePasquale, chairman of the mayor's Parking Ticket Review Committee and the aldermanic Public Safety and Transportation Committee, said the first suggestion that sending out notices to parkeing offenders be considered came from the Executive Department.

Parking Clerk Richard Walsh and DePasquale agreed that it might be a good idea suspend the rigid policy long enough to inform scofflaws that they were in a precarious position.

"It was a legitimate concern because of the barrage on City Hall," DePasquale said, "The phone calls were getting to be a real burden."

MBTA: Trailways terminal may relocate

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The controversial Trailways bus terminal may be moved from its proximity to Grove Street to another area at the Riverside "T" stop.

Massachusetts Bay Transportaion Authority (MBTA) Real Estate Diretor Gino Palmacci said Tuesday, there will be a response in a "postive vein" to Auburndale residents' request the Trailways building be moved.

Auburndale Community Association (ACA) president Polly Bryson called the modular building an "eyesore" and has been fighting to have the building relocated.

A "positive" letter from MBTA general manager James O'Leary to ACA president Bryson is expected in about two weeks, said Palmacci.

"I'm really hopeful they will move the building and indication seem that they will, but until I see it writing, I'm not going to jump for joy," said Bryson.

The building, located next to Grove Street, is being leased by the MBTA to supplement their budget.

Palmacci called the Trailways situation "unfortunate," but added there were practical reasons for locating the building near Grove Street. Overhead wires and sewer needs made siting the station near the Grey Hound terminal impractical, according to Palmacci.

Palmacci said, the MBTA's engineers are looking for a new location for the building that will not interfere with existing facilities at the "T" stop, or cause safety problems.

Alderman Richard McGrath said he is pleasantly surprised by Palmacci's position.

Other "T" sites, such as on the Westwood-Dedham line are being commercially developed, but few locations have the accessibility that Riverside offers, McGrath has stated.

Riverside is located near the Mass Pike, Route 128 and Route 16 and is sitauted near other major state roads as well.

The Jordon Marsh building on Grove Street could also be up for sale and add to the commercial viability of the MBTA's plans, according to McGrath.

Ward-4 Alderman Lane Sofman believed the MBTA is "trying to be thought of as nice guys," in light of their plans to commercially develop the 25-acre Riverside property.

Sofman believes the transportation agency will need all the support it can muster when it comes up with comercial development plans for the station.

THE GREEK ISLES
The Greek Isles glitter like a seaborne Milky Way in the waters of the Aegean. At the bottom of the group, stretched sideways off the Libyan coast is Crete. Ancient Crete, civilized over 5,000 years ago, is the largest of the islands and in the past two to three years has exploded with new roads, hotels and resorts. Great vacation spots are to be found on this island newly ready to receive guests and an island still cheap, spanking clean and uncrowded. The language is difficult, but the islanders are skillful linguists and they still consider the smile a much more powerful currency than the "drachma."

Putting choke on the butt fires

Think of a cause and quick like a flash an acronym appears to catch the public's attention. Those which have a direct thrust are the most intriguing, like SADD for Students Against Driving Drunk. Quite clever and appropriate, you will agree.

So how about GASP for Massachusetts? This is a chapter of a national group whose full title is Group Against Smoking Pollution. It has a lobbyist busily engaged at the State House, already tilting lances with the on-scene influence specialist for the tobacco industry.

GASP's lobbyist is urging passage of a bill which would require cigarette manufacturers to apply safety standards. What is precisely sought is a fire-safe cigarette, one which would cut down on fatal fires caused by smoking. The need is certainly there. Careless smoking takes hundreds of lives, many of them elderly persons who doze off. Often, it's just plain carelessness involved.

The industry says technology doesn't exist for a self-extinguishing butt, which brings from GASP an assertion there are two brands on the market which lower the propensity to ignite furniture and mattress material.

This will be a fight to the last GASP, you may be sure.

Mostly, it's cheery news

An acquaintance on a fixed income retirement schedule has been distressed by the plunging interest rates of the past few months. To business it has signaled the start toward recovery from the recession, but to the retiree it was like a cut in pay because of decreased payouts from the high yield certificates of deposit.

In actuality, of course, gains for the elderly otherwise were a welcome respite from the surge of inflation. Living cost advances have been brought to a virtual standstill, with substantial softening of prices in a few significant areas. Here in Massachusetts, a further boon has been the tight restraint put on taxes.

A better general picture on the economic front is of benefit to all, including the fixed income golden agers.

One cause for griping has to be what is happening in the per gallon price of gasoline. An incredibly effective job had been done by U.S. consumers in conservation and alternative energy use to cut the legs out from under OPEC as a boycott response. The result was a world oil glut which soon pushed prices down, even to the point where regular gasoline had just broken through the one-dollar floor.

But, alas, federal and tax grabbers stepped in to take advantage of the opportunity for revenue they believed would not be conspicuous due to pump price comparisons with the past. Major suppliers also stepped in to restore profit margins, so the result has been a steadily accelerating charge per gallon. This, quite obviously, calls for another strong move in individual conservation to force a marketplace hold-down.

Auto death rate dip is a puzzler

By Robert J. Wagman

The highway-safety experts are watching this year's numbers to determine if the 1982 fatality drop was simply a statistical fluke. So far, auto deaths this year are running at about the 1982 level, but are still lower than the 1981 rate.

Experts seem to have a ready explanation for everything, but at least one group of them now admits to being stumped: Highway-safety experts can't explain why the number of U.S. auto deaths nosedived last year.

Deaths from auto accidents plunged by more than 10 percent in 1982, according to preliminary data released by the National Safety Council. In 1981, 51,500 people died in car accidents, but — for some still unexplained reason — that number dropped to 46,300 last year.

Only once in the last 30 years has the auto accident death rate dropped as much, and that was in 1974 — the year of the oil embargo and the gas lines. Last year's fatalities amounted to 20 per 100,000 people, or the lowest it has been since 1944, when much of the U.S. population was off fighting World War II.

The drop in the rate of auto fatalities also came just when most highway-safety experts were predicting a sharp increase, since more drivers have opted for compact and subcompact cars. In fact, most of the experts said that because of the increase in small cars, auto deaths might rise to as many as 70,000 a year by the middle of the '80s.

The experts' initial reaction to the drop in fatalities was to postulate that it was somehow tied to the economic downturn and that people were driving less because they had less money. However, in 1982, the number of miles driven in the United States increased by about 2 percent — and so the sharp drop in deaths occurred while driving mileage was increasing.

The next guess was that while overall driving mileage might have increased, the poor economy might have changed driving patterns. People might be driving to work more, said the experts, but might be doing far less recreational, late-night or highway driving — and most fatalities occur in late night and highway accidents.

Wrong again: The statistics show that the decrease in auto deaths has occurred across the board, with fewer fatalities during night and day driving, among passengers, on highways, in the cities and the like. Therefore, the drop wasn't caused by any change in driving patterns.

Many states have enacted tough drunk driving laws, and it would be comforting to think that auto fatalities are decreasing because drunk drivers are being ejected from the road. If this were so, however, the drop would be greater at night, when most drunk driving deaths occur — and the numbers show that the decline in fatalities was just as sharp during the day.

Brian O'Neill, senior vice president of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety says that while the experts are awash in theories, "so far, all the ideas have come up dry. We may never get an answer."

Another aspect confuses the picture even more: The 1982 preliminary figures indicate that there also was a sharp decline in the number of deaths from other types of accidents. National Safety Council figures show that deaths from work-related accidents dropped 8 percent last year — possibly a result of high unemployment and the sharp drop in work output. This explanation might be supported by the fact that deaths in home accidents increased by 2 percent.

The highway-safety experts are watching this year's numbers to determine if the 1982 fatality drop was simply a statistical fluke. So far, auto deaths this year are running at about the 1982 level, but are still lower than the 1981 rate.

So the mystery remains. The experts are glad that auto fatalities dropped 10 percent last year; they just don't know why. And if there's anything that an expert hates, it's a mystery.

Marking Time

They drive him mad

By Mark White

One advantage to writing a regular column is the opportunity to vent your spleen in public. This week the topic is drivers — young and old, male and female, nice and not so nice.

I am a reasonable man and I understand that patience is required when dealing with fellow drivers. However last week, perhaps because of the full moon, zombie drivers were everywhere. It inspired me to write about my favorite types of drivers which I divided into seven categories.

1. The "head-them-off-at-the-pass" driver. I love these guys. As you drive down the street they are laying in wait. At the last possible moment they will pull right out in front of you and calmly proceed at 5 m.p.h. in a 30 m.p.h. zone.

2. The "I-don't-know-my-right-from-my-left" drivers. This breed of driver is indigenous to Massachusetts. For some reason they put on a right hand blinker and go left and vice-versa. This type of driver also makes a habit of taking left turns from right lanes, and right turns from left lanes.

3. The "Whaddya-think-this-is,-Indianapolis?" Driver. This is the guy who likes to drive in the passing lane, and only the passing lane, going 25 m.p.h.. They are oblivious to horn honking, light blinking nd are almost comatose behind the wheel.

4. The "Dammit, I know-there-is-a-space-here" driver. This is my favorite. How many times have you entered a garage and found that you must go to level 9 to park? (Government Center is a perfect example.) But as luck would have it, you get stuck behind the driver who's going to check out every space in the lot while going 2 m.p.h.! This type of driver also tries to fit his "bus" into a parallel parking space that only has room for a Volkswagen. After trying from a 45 degree angle, a 30 degree angle, and a 90 degree angle, he leaves in a huff.

5. The "I'm-clever-arent't-I" driver. This guy you feel like shooting! You're stuck in a traffic jam for 30 minutes waiting patiently in line and some inconsiderate jerk is driving down the breakdown lane in order to avoid the wait.

6. The "I-don't-care-if-they-changed-the-law" driver. This is a new breed of operator who doesn't like right turn on red and darn it he's not going to do it. Or you run into the other type who is going straight or left but maneuvers his car so you can't get him to make a right hand turn.

7. The "I-wish-I-was-back-in-Brooklyn" driver. This one's easy to recognize. If he's behind you at a stop light, you'll hear him honking as soon as the light turns green. However, there is hope. Last week I was driving down Center Street on that 25 m.p.h. stretch of road from Walnut Street to Beacon Street and a car was coming from the opposite direction blinking its headlights. Aware that the police usually have a radar trap in that area I slowed to the speed limit.

As the car got closer to me I noticed that the driver warning on coming traffic of the speed trap was a nun! And sure enough when I turned the corner there was Newton's finest writing up a speeding ticket for some unlucky driver. Talk about your acts of mercy! Happy motoring!

Nuke war fears real

By Loring Swaim
State Columnist

Are you sitting down?

If so, consider the possibility that Warsaw Pact armies in eastern Europe, prompted by the scheduled NATO deployment this fall of Pershing II nuclear missiles to modernize its defenses, could launch a massive conventional preemptive strike in Europe - even including chemical weapons - while a paralyzed United States lacks the will to stop them.

Don't dismiss this scenario out of hand, warns the highest ranking Polish official to the west.

Former Polish Ambassador Dr. Zdzislaw Rurarz, short of stature but long on experience with Soviet ideology, said in Boston recently he is not convinced such a preemptive strike will occur. But given current "offensive-minded" thinking in Moscow and the vacillation of the west, it conceivably could.

Rurarz joined the communist party in Poland at age 15. Over the years, he says he tried to influence and moderate the movement from within. With a Ph.D. in economics, he spent 25 years in the foreign service, as commercial attache in Washington, deputy ambassador to the U.N. and ambassador to Japan, besides being economic advisor to former party chief Edward Gierek and working in military intelligence.

On many occasions, with his fluency in Russian, he took part in politbureau "think tank" strategy sessions with Soviet and eastern bloc party leaders on how to win the contest with capitalism and conquer the democracies. Thus his insights into thinking behind the Iron Curtain.

When martial law was declared in Poland, Rurarz realized changes were no longer possible from within. He sought and was granted asylum in the U.S. and lives now near Washington under federal protection, making cautious trips around the country to enlighten about his perceptions. His visit to New England was in response to the tour of a Soviet peace delegation and sponsored in part by Accuracy in Media in Washington.

"The Soviets," says Rurarz quietly but forcefully, "are most seriously taking into account a war to obtain their policy objectives of the Chinese strategy of 'beating your enemy without war.' It is no exaggeration to say that the Soviets are prepared to go to war and to win. They are 100 percent offensive-minded in their training. They boast they are stronger than the whole world together. I myself have heard Soviet leaders say nuclear war is winnable. They will go to any lengths to see that the billions of rubles they have invested in their defense capability brings returns.

"The only one to say 'no' to the U.S.S.R. is the U.S. I am afraid of the resolve of the democracies to defend themselves. The west may vacillate and not respond."

Confronted with superior conventional forces in Europe, he asks, what American president would resort to theatre nuclear weapons to stop an advance, mindful of the responsibility of striking first and of unleashing a nuclear conflagration?

President Jimmy Carter's "vacillation" over the neutron bomb, he says, convinced the Soviets of their capacity to blackmail the democracies.

A devout Catholic, the Polish defector has undisguised scorn for the Catholic bishops of America who have focused on condemning nuclear war instead of challenging what he calls "the anti-Christ of communism." "They are not morally distinguishing between democracy and communism," he argues.

As for his native Poland, Rurarz sees difficult days ahead under the Kremlin's tougher stance with new party leader Yuri Andropov. He recalls one strategy session with Soviet officials over how to cope with Solidarity's challenge to the communist government's authority. "Andropov was the first to call for intervention," he said.

Increasingly this former communist insider is speaking out to inform Americans about what goes on on the other side of the ideological equation. If he knows even more than he is saying, he isn't letting on. For one thing, last year the Polish government sentenced him to death in absentia.

"If we are too frank," he also says, quietly, "it could cause panic in Europe."

Son graduates

Fessenden grads get tips from Ted

By Richard Lodge

WEST NEWTON — Speaking before 47 Fessenden School ninth grade graduates, including his son Patrick, Senator Edward Kennedy Thursday urged students "assess yourselves more clearly and each of you will become more and more your own person."

Kennedy, a 1948 Fessenden School graduate, told the students and about 300 friends and family members that he saw them as "Older...and wiser" than the youth of the 1960s.

"You may not make your contribution by marching," the senior senator from Massachusetts said, "but there is so much that you can do in so many ways."

Following his speech diplomas were awarded to the graduates, including Patrick Joseph Kennedy, who finished with high honors in his class.

Each student was greeted by the headmaster and as Patrick strode to the lecturn, his father rose, shook his hand and hugged him. Local youngsters graduating from the Fessenden School ninth grade included: Christopher S. Awtrey, Newton; Peter Fortmiller Baldwin, Weston; Andrew B. Colfelt, Chestnut Hill; Alfred Lyons Donovan, Jr., Chestnut Hill;

Richard Leo First, Weston; Patrick Alexander Fischoeder, Chestnut Hill; Thomas Healey Hawkins, Chestnut Hill; Brian Wai-Kong Li, Newton; Mohammed Reza Malihi, Chestnut Hill; William Martin McCormick, Weston; Victor Antonion Nicolazzo III, West Newton; Lawrence Ahlfert Pearlman, Waban; and Taylor Halsey Twining, Weston.

Eighth grade graduates included: Maximilian George Candidus and Pantaleon Edward Candidus, both of West Newton; Alexander Theodore Grant, Weston; Daniel Leon Kornfeld, Chestnut Hill; Ian Thomas Lamont, West Newton; Charles Edward Porter, Jr., Chestnut Hill; Tomas Arturo Regalado, Chestnut Hill; Donald Wyman Thomas, Weston; and Stephen Soterios Zannetos, Weston.

High marks for playgrounds

Those benches are older than most visitors to the playgrounds, explained Carol Stapleton, head supervisor of the Newton Parks and Recreation Department.

"They're from WPA days," she said, pointing out that equipment made of wood is the responsibility of the PTA if that equipment is located on a school playground. The Park and Recreation Department takes care of equipment made of metal.

Newton has 29 playgrounds, and the Park and Rec Department is responsible for maintaining 1,000 acres of land.

"We have only one crew of carpenters to repair equipment," said Stapleton, and the department makes repairs as quickly as possible. Hawthorne Playground in Nonantum could use some repairs. The soccer goal frames and the tennis courts lack nets.

"We're having trouble with the courts down there," Stapleton acknowledged. "It's a very costly, time-consuming project to set up the clay courts."

The Newton Centre Playground courts had priority over Hawthorne, she explained, because the former is more heavily utilized.

Not far from Hawthorne, the Albemarle Playground in Newtonville played host to Diane Erba's after-school class of Horace Mann students.

"To my knowledge, no one's ever been hurt here," she said. "The biggest problem is the glass in the woods, from junior high school kids drinking."

Over at the Cabot School Playground, the same concern was voiced by lunch program supervisor Cathy Martens. "There's more glass than there used to be," she said.

Stapleton said the Park and Rec. Department can only do so much about teenagers drinking in the playgrounds and leaving bottles behind. "If they're gonna drink, they're gonna drink," she said. "We're constantly in communication with the police, but you can't sit a cruiser at every playground in the city."

The Bottle Bill may have made a dent in the problem, according to Stapleton. "In the past, we've been deluged with bottles and cans, but it's not so bad right now," she said.

Buses crippled

Schools said in the Border Street bus parking Monday that the buses won't be repaired as soon as might have been thought.

"About the only thing I can say," Ganim said, "is that they'll be ready for next school year" in September.

Hoggard said most of the replacement school buses have come from Travel Time, Big W and Carrol Bus companies.

Unlike her classmates, Kelly has no place to call home

Instead, there is her quick smile and good humor as she kids with Bob Groden, her social worker.

She likes English class, but loves singing in the school chorus, and enthusiastically recounts a recent trip to Montreal for a choral competition against other New England high schools.

"We stayed in a nice big hotel, and everyone had their own room and it was so great! Because I never stayed in a hotel before, and I was there screaming to the other kids how great it was! They thought I was really weird."

The food at the hotel, however, was "gross," she added. "The best dinner we had was when we stopped at McDonald's."

Kelly says she'll probably get a job after high school, "because I don't have enough brains to go to college."

She doesn't know what kind of work she'll go into, but enjoys camp counseling. In fact, while the DSS is seeking a home for her, she's looking for a summer job at a camp that will eventually help her buy a bicycle.

Does she have any preferences concerning her new foster home?

"Well, I don't really want to go where there are a lot of little kids, because they drive me crazy," Kelly says after a minute of thought.

But, she admitted, prospective foster parents might not like something about her too: "I like to talk on the phone a lot. You'd better write that in your article."

– John Ombelets

Plight of unwanted teens

The DSS office here serves a cluster of affluent communities, including Weston, Wellesley and Needham, as well as Newton.

The teens often come from unstable home situations, where the parents are in constant conflict or already divorced, Kerzner says. Or perhaps they are unable to get along with one or both parents. Or they are orphans.

But they are not bad people, she says.

"These kids are not adjudicated delinquents, they're not drug or alcohol addicts," Kerzner says. "Most of the kids we want to place either can't be at home or they have no home.

They get blamed for their behavior, but they may just be reacting to an unhappy home life, she added.

Children are referred to DSS sometimes by their parents, by other agencies, for example, if they are being physically abused, but most often by the courts, Kerzner says. The common court vehicle is called a CHINS (child in need of services) petition.

Those services range from counseling to placement in a foster home, sometimes for just a "cooling-off" period, in other cases, for a year or more.

A child having trouble at home usually needs a minimum of three months away to work things out, Kerzner says.

Running, mental health topics of free forums

NEWTON CENTRE — "Running and Mental Health," free forums sponsored by National Lumber Company, will be held Saturday, June 11 at NEWW, 1310 Centre St., Newton Centre.

At 10:30 a.m., Bruce Bickford, former indoor American three-mile record holder, will speak. At noon, John Brennen, author of an article entitled "A Running Therapy," will offer a lecture. At 1:30 p.m. psychiatrist Stephen Howard, who has utilized running in therapy, will hold a forum.

The amount of cabinet and counter space required are primary concerns when remodeling or building a new kitchen. A minimum of 10 linear feet of base cabinets and a comparable amount of wall cabinets should be designed into most kitchen plans. If space and budget allow, more should be added. Allow a cabinet specialist to show you the new cabinet hinges and pull-out designs that add more usable room to each linear foot of space. Adequate counter space for food preparation and serving should be carefully planned. Be sure, for example, that the refrigerator door opens into the adjacent counter top. Allow adequate splashboard protection of at least 4 inches.
The kitchen area is truly a major work area of the home. Yet its beauty and decorative touches need not be diminished because of its workload. With modern day cabinets and design store and work areas can be maximized while retaining and even increasing the beauty of the area. For the cabinets that will please, that will decorate and that are a worthwhile investment, call CHARL MARC KITCHEN & BATH CENTER, 4174 Washington St., Roslindale. Tel. 325-9400. Showroom daily 9-5, Wed. & Fri. eves. 7-9.

Suspect charged in library arson fire

NEWTON — An 18-year-old Centre Street man was arraigned Tuesday in District Court on an arson charge in connection with the May 14 fire which destroyed thousands of books at the Newtonville Branch Library, court records state.

David Regan, of 673 Centre St., charged with arson of a public building, was released on personal recognizance pendinng a probable cause hearing set for July 8, records state.

Clerk Magistrate Henry Shultz found sufficient cause at a show cause hearing last week to issue the court complaint against Regan, who lived in New York City before moving recently to Newton.

A July 21 deadline was set for attorneys in the case to file motions for the July hearing. At least two witnesses, both Newton resident, have been subpoenaed.

According to police, someone broke into the library on Walnut Street in Newtonville Square and started the blaze that destroyed or damaged more than 2000 books. Every new book purchased within the last two years was destroyed, a library official said. An additional 1800 paperbacks were lost and a corner of the library was damaged by fire and water.

'Garage saga' ends; property bill corrected

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A resident may have won his fight to obtain a correct property tax bill after waging a battle with City Hall for more than a year. But, he is still skeptical.

"I feel like I got someplace, but I'll wait to see my next tax bill," said Vincent Manzelli of Chestnut Street on Monday.

Manzelli was incorrectly billed and wanted the city to wipe-out an old $15,000 assessment and an overdue tax bill for $320.

Manzelli took time-off from his contracting business last Friday to meet with City Treasurer Theodore Scafidi and Assessor Harold Brady, after being notified his name was to be published as tax delinquent.

On Monday, Chairman of the Board of Assessors Robert Palmer confirmed an error had been made. Last Saturday, Manzelli received notification that the error had been corrected.

Chairman of the Revaluation Subcommittee Alderman Paul Coletti said Monday he has received a number of calls from residents who were notified their names were to be published as tax delinquents, although the they do not owe taxes.

"In these cases, the abatements they received were not transferred to the computer," Coletti said.

Manzelli's woes started with an original assessment of $30,700 on his land-locked garage. The four-car garage is about 100 years-old, has a dirt floor, no electricity or sewer and measures 16 by 38 feet, according to Manzelli. The property's 5,600 square feet is divided by a MDC aquaduct making it land-locked.

Last year Manzelli received an abatement reducing the value of the garage to $15,700, but the city never removed the outstanding $15,000 from its computers and has been billing him.

Calling his experience "a real horror show," Manzelli paid a bill on his assessment of $15,700. In February he received another abatement further reducing the value to $9,000. Alderman Richard McGrath had been helping Manzelli with the problem and said he thought the error had been corrected.

"When I received the letter on Thursday, I was off the wall," Manzelli said, "I was going to submit a bill for having to take time-off from work to go to city hall and straighten this out."

The City's Assessing Department, besieged by 1000s of abatement applications, has been catching-up on the huge backlog.

Alderman Coletti advises anyone having similar problems to call the assessor's office, which should postpone further city action.

Meanwhile, Manzelli wonders, "How many people (in similar circumstances) keep paying without asking?"

Neighbors okay units for St. Jean's School

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NONANTUM — Local residents said they can live with initial plans for converting the defunct St. Jean's school into elderly and family housing units.

A conceptual design for 37 elderly and six family units located on the property of the old Catholic school on Watertown Street was unaminously approved Thursday by the Planning and Development Board.

Local resident and once vocal opponent of the city's housing plans Margaret Cormier said of the plans, "They're not our first choice, but the people want to see a reuse of the building."

Cormier and Newton Housing Director Frank Quinn wanted an elevator in the building.

Stairs to the second floor and basement will be the only means of access for elderly residents, according to project architect Stephen Tise. The state turned down a city request for the elevator because it would cost too much, he added.

Tise said, he remains concerned about the financial feasibilty of the renovation, but he did not have any preliminary cost estimates.

Residents want the two-story brick building to appear the same and are anxious to see the work completed.

Cormier of 232 Watertown Street, has been involved in the issue since the city first indicated it would buy the property from the Roman Catholic Church for $250,000.

Numerous public hearings in City Hall last winter brought out scores of Nonantum residents who voiced their opposition to the purchase, but the Board of Aldermen approved the sale. Since then, local residents have been working with city housing officials to make sure the planned renovations blend with their neighborhood.

"We want the front of the building to look the same," said Cormier.

The only noticeable difference to the structure will be a 48-foot ramp in the front of the old school, according to the architect's conceptual drawings.

Additions will be made to the rear of the building, according to architect Tise.

St. Jean's is sited on an L-shaped parcel of land, with the narrow section facing Watertown Street.

Cormier questioned if emergency vehicles could easily reach the rear of the building, but Planning Director Barry Canner said he intends to have Fire Chief Edward Reilly review the plans.

The site is sandwiched between two church properties. It also abuts the Watertown line, requiring approval from the Watertown Zoning Board of Appeals, according to Canner.

A total of 12 parking spaces are planned for the site in an area of the city where parking is always an issue.

The six low-income family units will be separate buildings located behind St. Jean's.

City Housing Director Quinn believes elderly residents and children from the family units might find themselves in conflict.

"On Thurston Road (a housing site with elderly and family units) the elderly aren't tripping over toys, because the family units are completely distant, said Quinn. You need a place for children to leave their Big Wheels," he added.

The conceptual plans will be presented to state officials for their approval and the next step involves going before the aldermanic Land Use Committee, according to Canner.

Committee gives approval to extended gas station hours

NEWTON — Louis Signore's "speak easy" gas operation at the corner of Langley Road and Route 9 might become legitimate soon, if the Board of Aldermen listen to the land use committee's recommendation.

Several years ago the aldermen ordered gas stations to close at 10 p.m. to avoid late-night holdups at the stations.

Signore's lawyer, Robert Cohen, complained to the land use committee last week, "The tragedy is that, in order to prevent crime, the victim has to be hurt."

Since the aldermen prohibited gas sales after 10 p.m., Signore has been swamped with late-night calls for road service and gas. Cohen told the committee that "many aldermen" stop in at his station for after-hours gas.

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that a certain instrument purporting to be the last will of said deceased may be proved and allowed and that Evelyn H. Feinberg of Newton in the County of Middlesex be appointed executrix thereof, without giving surety on her bond. If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Cambridge on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on June 24, 1983.

In addition you must file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 2A.

Witness, Sheila E. McGovern, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Cambridge, the twenty day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty three.

Students enter statewide PACT

NEEDHAM — Needham students in the Program for academically and Creatively Talented Students (PACT) placed very well in a statewide Future Problem-Solving Competition held recently at the University of Massachusetts, Boston campus.

They came home from the Massachusetts State Bowl with nine awards in three categories: Problem-Solving competition, Selling Presentation (Skits), and the Visual Arts competition. Loretta Frissora, PACT teacher and coordinator prepared students for this event as a part of the PACT curriculum.

During the year the students entries to the Future Problem-Solving Committee are evaluated and, on the basis of the third one (robotics), they received invitations to the State Bowl.

All problems are future oriented. From 42 entries in the junior division, six teams earned bids to the bowl and of these, three were PACT teams.

As a part of their training this year, the students researched and completed the problem-solving process on these topics: UFO's, Ocean Communities, Robotics and their impact on society. They visited Automatix in Billerica, MIT research labs to learn about the latest experiments in oceanographic and robotic investigations, and a parent, Efrem Mallach visited their class.

The participants of the problem-solving competition spent two hours at the bowl working alone to solve the problem which concerned "Computers and their Impact on the World of Finance."

The Broadmeadow-Hillside team took third place. Team members were: James Glick, grade 5, Hillside; Reed Johnstone, grade 4 and Joanne Toran, grade 5 of Hillside and Dan Mallach, grade 5, Broadmeadow. Linda Glick, parent volunteer, helped coach the team.

The teams from the Mitchell School tied for fourth place. Teddy Brewer and Tom Cunningham, fourth graders, with Tom Daley and Tony Rasmussen, fifth grade comprised Team B; Neil Hubacker and Noah Thompson, grade 4 with Leigh Jackman and Howard Shen of grade 5, made up Team A. Mrs. Needham's Sybil Sheinkopf helped with the coaching responsibilities.

During the skit competition students had to "sell" their problem solutions to the audience.

The Mitchell Team A and the Broadmeadow-Hillside team tied for second place. Jeremy Sacco, a PACT student, joined the team for this event. The students were assisted in their preparations by their coaches, Ronnie Riceberg, parent Louise Sacco, and Loretta Frissora, PACT Coordinator.

Nine awards are given out in the Visual Arts Competition, of these, six awards went to Needham students. In the Senior Division grades 10-12, first place went to Kenneth MacGray, second to Andrew Bergstrum, and third to Olivia Harriott. In the Intermediate Division, grades 7-9, second place was won by Nancy Popper and third by Gordon Noble. A group project by PACT students Peter Buscemi, Ricardo Rossi, Dan Zarin, grade 5, and Jeremy Sacco, grade 4, took third place in the Junior Division, grades 4-6.

The competition is sponsored by the Massachusetts Association for Advancement of Individual Potential (MA-AIP) and the Honeywell Company.

Newton newsmakers

W. Heinrich Wurm, M.D., of Auburndale, has been promoted to senior anesthetist in the New England Medical Center department of anesthesia. He is an assistant professor of anesthesia at Tufts University School of Medicine.

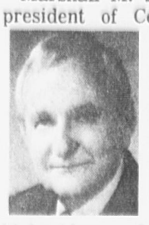
Dr. Wurm's research has included the study of chronic pain and he is active in the new multidiscpilinary pain management program at NEMC.

He was born in Stuttgart, West Germany, and received his M.D. degree from the University of Tubingen School of Medicine. After a year's internship in Germany, Dr. Wurm came to the U.S. to accept an internship at Memorial Hospital in Worcester, and later a residency in anesthesia at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Boston. In 1972 he held a fellowship in pediatric anesthesia at Children's Hospital Medical Center, Boston.

Newton resident Helaine Miller has been named vice president for development at Boston's Beth Israel Hospital.

Miller came to Beth Israel in 1979 as director of development. Prior to her work at Beth Israel Hospital, she was director of annual giving at Children's Hospital Medical Center and director of the Parents Program for the Havard College Fund.

Marshall M. Sloane of Newton, president of Century Bank and Trust Company, has received the coveted Silver Antelope Award from the National Court of Honor of the Boy Scouts of America.



The award is the highest honor which can be given to a volunteer in the Northeast Region and is presented for "noteworthy service to boyhood."

Sloane currently serves as a director of the Greater Boston Council, Boy Scouts of America, of which he was president for three terms.

He is a member of the Northeast Regional Board, a member of the National Council's relationships committee, and is chairman of the National Jewish Committee on Scouting.

The Personnel Committee of the Board of Directors of University Bank and Trust Company has selected Maria Antinarelli and Charlie Brown as the winners of the banks' Helping Hands Award for 1983. This award is sponsored by the Massachusetts Bankers Association, and is presented annually to support and recognize employee service and involvement in their communities.

Antinarelli has been nominated for her time and energy in working for the Greater Waltham Association for Retarded Citizens. She is a member of their board of directors and in this capacity has promoted the benefits of GWARC programs to the public and has sought to increase employment opportunities for these citizens in the Waltham area.

Diane Karen Solov of Newton, a student at Simmons College in Boston and a Newton High School graduate, has been accepted for an internship with Exchange Enterprises, an expanding bartering business in Ohio.

Exchange Enterprises is an international system with members, professionals and businesses, who trade goods and services within 70 franchises in the U.S. and England. Company officials hope to expand to the Boston area. The home office is in Salt Lake City.

Solov's objectives include examination of what goods and services barterers want and development of an advertising campaign strategy. The study will entail a telephone sample survey of 130 professionls and businesses who trade in Cincinatti. A written report will document her findings.

Joan M. Ojerholm of Needham has become loan service supervisor for the West Newton Savings Bank. Since joining the bank in 1977, she has been customer service representative, administrative assistant, lending, and has managed the bank's Sherborn and Wayland offices.

She was elected assistant treasurer in 1981.

Ojerholm is a high honors student in the Associate Degree Program at the American Institute of Banking, Boston and a recent graduate of the School of Savings Banking in Falmouth.

F. Michael DeVito Jr. of Newton has been named manager of the Sherborn office of the West Newton Savings Bank. Employed since 1977, he has been NOW coordinator and assistant main office manager.

DeVito holds a BA in Business Administration from Boston College and attended the Branch Managers Program at the Center for Financial Studies in Connecticut.

Chairman will favor 'tough' pensions rules

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Proposed state regulations aimed at halting disability pension abuses will meet with favor from the Newton Retirement Board if the rules are "tough."

"I hope they will be good and strong," said Retirement Board Chairman Ernest Angevine on Tuesday.

"We've been very tough, but I hope they're tougher, because I think some of these disabilty cases are a little weak," Angevine added.

The new rules help clarify the standards that determine if someone is disable, according to Newton Representative David Cohen, who served on the State Disability Subcommittee and took part in drafting legislation.

"In terms of disabilities, Newton has one of the lowest rates for municipalities of comparable size," said Cohen on Tuesday.

There are some communities in the state where the amount of money they pay annually for disability pensions approaches the amount of their regular pensions, according to Cohen.

Disability pensions in Newton represent much less than 20 percent of the individuals that are retired, stated Cohen. Disability pensions tend to be more expensive, he added.

"It has been a fairly well-run body," said Coehn referring to the Newton Retirement Board.

Cohen gave a thumb-nail sketch of the draft regulations, said to be 92 pages long.

"For example in a claim of a job-related heart condition, the rules ask doctors a series of questions designed to determine if any other causes, other than job-related stress, caused the heart disease such as smoking or obesity," said Cohen.

Another section of the regulations proposes to have people's disability allowance reduced if they are able to engage in other kinds of gainful employment, according to Cohen.

"The regulations put an emphasis on rehabilitation as an alternative to disabilty," said Cohen. They ask medical personnel a series of questions such as - Are there treatments or programs to enable an individual to resume employment? If they say yes and the treatment is relatively simple, then the person would not be considered permanently disabled, said Cohen.

"For the first time, the 104 local retirement boards are given standard procedures and are informed of the laws," said Cohen. The regulation's strength are not in any revolutionary changes, but they let boards know what their powers are under existing law and requires them to give disabilty applications more scrutiny than they have in the past, he added.

Of all of the local systems, Newton is on the best financial footing, said Cohen.

Newton is one of the few communities to put money into its pension system to provide for down-the-road costs, said Cohen. Other systems put this off and end up paying more later.

"Newton treats it like a sinking fund to defer future costs," Cohen said.

"I think the regulations will help Newton in terms of administration of the pensions, how they are supposed to organize claims and their investigations," said Cohen.

Workers' insurance up more than 10%

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NETWON — Employee payments for a major medical insurance company health plan will go up more than 10 percent starting July 1, acccording to city officials.

"As a result of continuing unfavorable claims experience in our group, Blue Cross/Blue Shield rates must be increased again on July 1, 1983, " says a letter to city employees from the Personnel Department.

According to Mary Hurley of personnel, "April was a bad month for claims." She was unable to say how many claims the city received, however.

At least one municipal employee union president plans to dispute part of the increases.

"We will be disputing with the city the extra costs under the family plan," said City Hall Associates president Murdock Fraser on Tuesday.

Employees randomly polled on the issue reserved comment on the increases until the rates and alternative plans are explained to them on Thursday.

According to Hurley, the new rate for Blue Cross/Blue Shield coverage for the family plan is as follows: total monthly rate, $272.62 as compared to $244.78. The city contributes $215.62 on the new rate and employees pay $56.99 a month.

To reduce the number of employees participating in city health plans, the city is considering giving a cash bonus to employees who opt to withdraw from city-paid health insurance in favor of their spouse's health plan, according to Hurley. Interested employees are asked to contact her for more details.

In addition to Blue Cross/Blue Shield coverage, Newton offers eight other medical plans and pays their total costs for employees, according to the personnel office.

"At the present time all such plans are available to employees at no cost," says the personnel office.

The other eight health maintenance organizations have monthly costs for family plans ranging from a low of $167.92 to a high of $214.84.

Judith Strull of Newton, director of Community Programs at Jewish

Family and Children's Service, and Jennifer Coplon, student unit supervisor at Family Service Association of Greater Boston, reported in an article entitled "Roles of the professional in Mutual Aid Groups," based on two years of teaching experiences at Boston University School of Social Work and one experience within their own agencies.

Peter H. McCormick of Chestnut Hill was elected a director of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce at the organization's 74th Annual Meeting on May 17 at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel.

McCormick is president and chief executive officer of New England Merchants National Bank and president of New England Merchants Company Inc.

After joining New England Merchants National Bank in 1963 as a trainee, he then served in the Personnel Department and the Credit Department. He has served as administrative officer for the credit and loan division and head of the commercial banking division. McCormick was promoted to president of New England Merchants Company in 1980 and chief executive officer of New England Merchants National Bank in 1981.

McCormick is chairman of trustees at Northeastern University, a trustee of the Museum of Science, vice president of the World Affairs Council and director of the Mass. Bankers Association.

Elliot J. Stone of Newton Centre was elected a director of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce at the organization's 74th Annual Meeting on May 17.

Stone is president and chief executive officer of the Jordan Marsh Company and vice president of Allied Stores Company.

He began his retailing career in 1946 in the executive training program of R.H. White of Boston. After six years with White's, he joined Gimbels of Pittsburgh. In 1970 he joined Maas Brothers as vice president and general merchandise manager. He served as executive vice president at Jordan Marsh, New England, and became president of Gimbels from 1975 until his return to Jordan Marsh in 1979.

Stone is a trustee of New England Medical Center, a director of the Greater Boston Council of Boy Scouts of America, a member of the Advisory Committee of the Simmons College Retailing Program.

Aimee J. Mulvey of Newton has been named director of the West Suburban YMCA summer sports camp. Mulvey earned a bachelor degree in physical education from Bridgewater State College where she was graduated magna cum laude.

Mulvey has worked as a couselor at other YMCA sports camps and directed recreation programs in gymnastics, soccer and baseball. She has also directed after school YMCA programs.

In 1978 Mulvey was awarded The American High School Athlete Award for Excellence in Leadership, Athletics and Scholarship. She was also selected as one of America's Outstanding Young Women in 1982.

Dr. David Neiman of Newton, associate professor of Theology at Boston College was elected by the Catholic-Jewish Committee of Boston to serve as its chairman for the two-year term beginning this September.

Dr. Neiman, author of "Man Against God," a translation and commentary on the biblical Book of Job, is a noted Hebrew and biblical scholar who is active in interfaith activities.

Dr. Neiman was appointed in 1979 and serves on the Interfaith Committee of the Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Boston. He is the first Jewish Theologian and Hebrew scholar to be appointed professor in a Catholic university. He was a visiting professor of theology at the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome.

Dennis P. Cameron of West Newton was recently named northeast marketing representative at John Hancock Financial Services, Inc.

Cameron is responsible for directing the company's commercial equipment leasing activities in the northeast region.

A 1976 graduate of Newton Catholic High School, Cameron holds a bachelor degree in marketing from Northeastern University.

Three Newton physicians are among 66 physicians who were recently honored by the Massachusetts Medical Society for 50 years of membership in the society. Doctors Charles Silverstein of Chestnut Hill, Edgar M. Holmes of Auburndale and Theodore E. Brown of West Newton were all honored at a May 11 ceremony in Boston.

Linda Micheli of Newton was recently named one of the two Advisors of the Year at Bentley College. Dr. Micheli is an assistant professor of English. She was selected by students at the college.

Micheli earned a bachelor degree from Wellesley College and a master degree and a Ph.D. from Harvard University.

Dr. Thomas F. Quatieri, Jr., of 74 Mosman St., Newton, was recently honored at a 1983 international conference of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE).

He was named recipient of the IEEE Acoustics, Speech, and Signal Processing (ASSP) Society's International Paper Award for his paper entitled "Implementation of 2-D Digital Filters by Iterative Methods," (with Dr. Dan E. Dudgeon), published in the June 1982 IEEE Transactions of ASSP. This award is given "To honor a person who is the author of an especially meritorious paper who is less than 30 years of age."

He was awarded an NSF Research Fellowship at the University of Rochester in New York in 1972 with research in biocommunications. He is the author of numerous articles and publicatiokns, and has presented research papers at Acoustics, Speech and Signal Processign Conferences throughout the country.

Dr. Quatieri is a member of Tau Beta Pi, Eta Kappa Nu, and Sigma Xi, all national honorary engineering and scientific societies, and is listed in "Who's Who in the East" 18th Edition, 1981-82. He is presently a Technical Research Staff Member at the M.I.T. Lincoln Laboratory, Lexington.

Anita M. Granoff of Newton has been named public relations coordinator for Project ReEntry, a career internship program for women at the Career and Volunteer Advisory Service, 14 Beacon St., Boston. Prior to joining the staff of Project ReEntry, Granoff was publications coordinator for The Artists Foundation, Inc.

Beaver Builders, Inc., One Wells Ave., Newton, will be among kthe firms displaying services and goods at the Northeast Construction Exposition and Conference "The Big Show" June 15-17 at Boston's Bayside Expo Center.

Beaver Builders offer construction management services to developers of office buildings, shopping malls, and R&D and manufacturing facilities.

The Package Designers Council held a retrospective exhibit of five years of Gold Award "Best of Best" winners at the Art Institute of Boston, 700 Beacon St., Boston.

The show consisted of package designs for products in the categories of: automotive, hardware, home maintenance, beverages, cosmetics, dairy foods, foods, and toys.

"Packaging can be the final determining factor in the sale of a product. The moment of truth for the manufacturer is at a point of purchase sales," states Elinor Selame, president of Selame Design Associates of Newton and chairperson of the Package Designers Show. "Strong design should attract and hold the consumer's attention. It should inform the consumer as to the benefits of the product. Effective design can make the difference between success or failure in a marketing or promotional campaign."

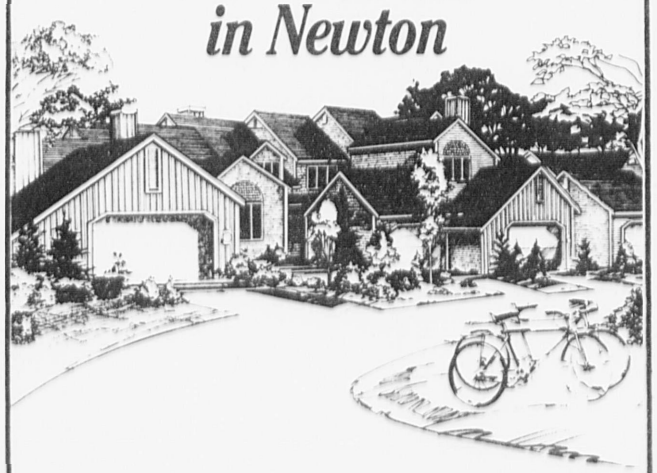
A Better Choice Than Ever...

The Gables in Newton



The Gables is one of the most successful of the long string of exceptional communities built by The Green Company. Phase III, announced just last fall, is selling so rapidly that we are underway with the additional two and three bedroom homes in the fourth and final phase. So, right now you have a better choice than ever at Newton's choicest location—The Gables, directly adjoining the Charles River Country Club.

The five distinctive styles range from a three bedroom, 3100 square foot home at $400,000 to a 1900 square foot two-bedroom at just $265,000. Exceptional values when you consider that today's average, yet very expensive, three bedroom home offers less than 1200 square feet, includes few or none of the amenities and certainly not the location of The Gables.

Homes feature unusual touches like soaring cathedral and Bermuda ceilings, a wonderful flow between rooms, unexpected fireplaces in kitchens and master bedrooms, attached two-car garages with direct indoor access, large very private deck and/or courtyard areas, and full basements. There's a private clubhouse overlooking a sunning area, swimming pool, whirlpool, and two tennis courts.

The Gables

Models are open every day from 9 to 5 at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets, Newton. Telephone (617) 969-0200 for an appointment.

Tiger stickmen hit stride

NEWTON — The Newton North lacrosse team couldn't have chosen a more opportune time to begin to hit its stride. The Tigers are embroiled in the Eastern Mass Sectional tourney and are playing well.

Witness the Tigers, 10-2, triumph over Brookline in the quarter-final round of the tourney last Sunday. Earlier in the season the Tigers had beaten Brookline, 8-7, in overtime. Brookline staged a four-goal comeback to force that contest into overtime.

Newton North jumped out to an early lead once again, but avoided any come back by keeping constant pressure on the Brookline goal. The victory allows the Tigers to move into the semi-finals and face Lincoln-Sudbury tomorrow, 5:30 p.m., at Sudbury.

Lincoln owns an 11-10 decision over the Tigers, but coach Rick Clark is confident his team will once again use the lessons it has learned. Newton North took too many penalties against Lincoln and it needed a three-goal fourth period rally to close to within one goal.

"We've just got to play good basic lacrosse," said Clark, whose team captured the Southern Division title for the first time in three years. "We didn't a very good job of picking up ground balls againt Lincoln in the first game and that's one area we have to improve. We also can't take as many penalties.

"I think one thing we showed against Brookline," said Clark, "is if we play our game we can play with anyone. We've got the speed, defense and goalie to shut down Lincoln. Our attackers are strong and the midfielders are the strength of the team."

Going from edging Brookline earlier in the season to a convincing win, the Tigers have shown they are improved. Newton North blasted out with three goals in the four goals in the first six minutes of the contest and never looked back.

Tom Ryan, who scored three goals, started early surge. Ryan took a pass from George Claflin and drilled it home just 1:30 into the first period. Newton North then scored three goals in the next three minutes. Kyle Schiller, a hot junior, scored on a nice dodge. Tim Brandon pumped in a goal, after he stole a clearing pass. Ryan then hit Brandon with a pass for another goal and a 4-0 lead.

Brookline broke the Tiger momentum with a goal from Steve Jones at 6:19. Here's were the Tigers asserted themselves. Tim Mulvey took it upon himself to sweep in and score on a great individual effort. Schiller accepted a good pass from Jimmy Quinn and scored the sixth Newton North goal of the period.

The Tiger offense was churning out the shots. Brookline goalie Quint Moores made 37 stops and Newton North had 46 shots on goal. Newton North goalie Ed Cohen faced 24 shots and did his usual strong job of clearing the ball.

In the second period, the Tigers increased the lead to 9-1. John Callahan hit Claflin with a pass and Claflin scored 28 seconds into the second period. Ryun put North ahead, 8-1, with score on a dodge. The back-breaker came with just five seconds left in the half. Ryan scored to send the Tigers into the half with a commanding lead, 9-1.

Brookline started a comeback in the third period with a goal. The Tigers bounced right back with Brandon notching his third tally of the game. Defensively, Newton North's Kevin Blake and Paul Boudreau did a solid job of covering Brookline's top scorer Chris Seibel, who is a 46-goal scorer.

Newton North 13, Billerica 4

They're still wondering what hit them in Billerica. One of the top rated lacrosse schools in the state was manhandled by a smoking Newton North team 13-4 last Tuesday in a non-league meet.

The Tigers roared out to a nine-goal lead in the first half and breezed to the victory to improve their record to 10-1 overall. The victory enhances the Tigers chances for a top seed in the upcoming state tourney.

"This was a very, very big win for us," said a satisified Newton North coach Dick Walker. "We just put it all together and played our best lacrosse game of the year. We made the best of all our scoring possiblities."

The secret to the Tiger victory may not have been the explosive scoring. One must look at the steady and decisive play of Tiger goalie Ed Cohen to understand why the Newton North attack was able to get so many scoring chances.

"Ed is the best around," said Clark. "He played a superb game for us today. Billerica played a ball control game, but once they shot Ed would make the save and clear the ball. His outlet passes were great. He caught the Billerica midfielders off-balance and allowed us to clear the ball easily."

The Tiger offense capitalized on the solid play of Cohen and the defense by ramming in nine straight goals in the first half. Kyle Schiller, who ended the game with four goals, started the Tiger scoring barrage with a goal off a dodge. Tim Brandon followed by picking up a ground ball and driving it home.

Ennio Manto took a good feed from Schiller and beat the Billerica goalie with a solid shot from inside. Tim Mulvey pumped in the fourth goal.

Ryan, Mulvey and John MacDonnell closed out the Tiger scoring in the second half.

Tiger girls ousted by Lincoln, 3-2

LINCOLN — Newton North's girls' tennis team lost to Lincoln-Sudbury, 3-2, in the semi-finals of the MIAA division I State tournament Friday for the second time in two years.

Amy Berestka's win at third singles was the bright spot for the Tigers along with the victory of Cara McCarthy and Mara Sibley at first doubles.

Beretska has been switching between doubles and singles play for the year. She also had a successful day, Thursday in the Tigers' 5-0 victory over Concord-Carlisle.

Newton North will lose first and second singles players to graduation. First singles Jennifer Stone will attend Cornell in the fall and Second singles Gayle McCarthy will be at B.U. where she plans to continue her tennis career.

The Tigers' ended the season on a high note despite the tournament loss. The regular season string of victories has continued. Newton North has not lost a league game in six years.

Coach Harriet Roosin said the loss of her top two singles players will hurt the team, but she is optimistic about next year's season. Diana McCarthy, the youngest of the tennis playing McCarthy sisters will be coming to the squad next year. Diana is a ranked player and Roosin believes she will help the Tigers in the upcoming season. The summary:

Lincoln-Sudbury 3, Newton North 2.
Singles
Linda Oechsle (LS) def. Jennifer Stone 6-1, 6-0; Amy Delone (LS) def. Gail McCarthy 7-5, 7-6; Amy Berestka (NN) def. Kin Smith 6-0, 6-1.
Doubles
Cara McCarthy and Mara Sibley (NN) def. Laura Morgan and Liz Reilley 7-5, 7-5. Martha McNamara and Betsy Anderson (LS) def. Linne Kimball and Ellen Shuman, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

Lions' Paglia gets MacConnell Award

NEWTON — Mark Paglia, an All-Star catcher for the Newton South baseball team, was presented the Norm MacConnell Award to highlight the Spring Sports Award Night Tuesday night at the Newton South High Auditorium.

A total of 330 letters were handed out to South athletes.

Paglia was given the award by South junior varsity baseball coach Harvey Doneski, who was filling in for head coach Neil McPhee. Paglia has played a big part in the Lions' successful season.

"Mark has done it all for the team," said Doneski. "He pitched us into the tourney with a solid effort against Weston and has also been an All-Star catcher. Mark's done it at the plate with a .340 average."

The MacConnell Award (Norm MacConnell was a long-time assistant coach to Neil McPhee) winner is voted by his teammates.

Doreen Hagar was presented the Booster Club's 110 percent Award for her contributions to the tourney-bound softball team.

Senior tri-capt. Josh King missed most of the boys' lacrosse season with an injury, but his constant support won him the 100 percent Award. "Josh started out strong for us," said Newton South lacrosse coach Paul Murphy. "He went down with a severe injury early in the year, but he never stopped helping the team or me. He made it back for the final six games. He worked on his game throughout the off-season and was a great example for the team."

A 46-goal scorer, Cecilia Wilcox was presented the 100 percent Award for the girls' lacrosse eam.

The Dual County League champion Boys' tennis coach Ed Jackson pointed out consistency is the mark of a great tennis player and there were few more consistent than 100 percent Award winner Peter Cooper.

Tankel received the 100 percent Award for the girls' tennis team. The 110 percent award went to Tom Vancor and John Schroter of th boys' track team.

Missy Brooks was presented the 100 percent Award for the girls' track team.

Richard Lipof was the 100 percent Award winner for the golf team.

Homer wins for St. Bernard

NEWTON — Harry Martins drove a three-run homer over the right field fence to power a seven-run sixth inning and lead St. Bernard's to a 9-8 victory over the Norumbega Chiefs Monday in the opening game of the Newton National Division at Ferguson Field.

Martins blast to right climaxed the sixth inning, which vaulted St. Bernard's into the lead. St. Bernard's tried to comeback in the sixth inning, but fell just short.

In the top of the sixth inning, winning pitcher Jamie Blue led off with a double off the left field fence. Corey Rubin drove in Blue with a base hit. St. Bernard's picked up two more runs on an error and two walks. Harry Martins delivered the homer end the inning's scoring.

St. Bernard's took a 9-5 advanatge into the bottom of the sixth inning. Blue came on for starter Steve Delvecchio and got first hitter out. Blue walked Peter Mooridian, Artie Aaron and Mike Malone to load the bases. Mike Antonellis, who took the loss, brought in a run with a fielder's choice. The other two runs scored on a wild pitch and a error to make it 9-8. Blue got the final out to end the threat with the tying run on first base.

Norumberga scored three runs in the second inning. Mike Malone drove in a run with a base hit. In the two-run fifth inning, John Castriota had an RBI as did Peter Moordian for the winners.

D. Yaffe top athlete at Brown

PROVIDENCE R.I.— Sophomore Donna Yaffe of Newton, senior Laura Maciuka of Storrs, Conn., and junior Callie LaMay of Old Saybrook, Conn., were the recipients of the three major awards last night at the annual Brown University Women's Athletic Banquet held in the Andrews Dining Hall on the Brown Campus.

Yaffe was named the winner of the Marjorie B. Smith Award which is given annually to the outstanding woman athlete of the year. Mrs. Smith was the director of physical education at Brown from 1920-26, and for many years she and her husband Stan were major benfactors University's athletic program, and were especially supportive of women's athletics. Mr. and Mrs. Smith both passed away in 1981.

Yaffe was amember of the freshwoman All-American basketball team in 1981-82 and this past year was a Third Team All-American selection. She has been a First Team All-Ivy pick in both seasons and was named "Ivy Rookie of the Year" as a freshwoman and "Ivy Player of the Year" this past season. She was also an Academic All-American team selection as a sophomore. Donna has scored 1,029 points in two seasons and has already established 11 Brown game, season and scoring records. She led the team in scoring with a 21.3 average last season, and in rebounding with 8.8 per game.

Yaffe is the daughter of Monte and Judith Yaffe of 65 Mary Ellen Road in Newton, and is a graduate of Newton North. She is majoring in psychology at Brown.

Maciuka was presented with the Bessie H. Rudd Award, which is presented annually to the women who has contributed most to the Women's Athletic Association, and who has done the most to promote women's sports during this year. The award selection is based on enthusiasm, spirit, sportsmanship and leadership. Bessie Rudd was the director of physical education at Pembroke College from 1930 to 1961.

Maciuika was a three letter winner for the women's soccer team at a halfback position, but missed her senior year due to a leg injury. She was a key performer during her player years, especially in 1980 when the Bruins won the Ivy League title.

Donna Yaffe (L) accepts Smith Award from AD Arlene Gorton

LaMay won received the Arlene E. Groton Cup, named in honor of Brown's current associate director of athletics, that is given annually to the undergraduate athlete, who consistently displays the ideals of fair play and sportsmanship.

North Indians City Little League champ

NEWTON — The North Indians became the first team entered from the North Division of Newton Little League to win the City Series Championship, with a 8-4 victory over the South Tigers, Friday at Lyons Field.

North beat West, 6-0, and East, 5-4, in earlier games.

Against the South Tigers, the Indians were out hit, 5-2, but cashed in on bases on balls to gain the upperhand.

In the first inning catcher, George Maxcey slammed a grand-slam homer, his third home run of the season to give the Tigers early momentum.

Mark Nardelly was the first Indian to reach base when he walked. Peter Kochansky got on on an error and Maxcey pulled out his over the fence homer.

The Indians kept things going in the third with three more runs. Nardelly and Kochansky both got a base on balls and Maxcey was intentionally walked.

A bases loaded free ticket went to Angelo Tomaino to bring in Nardelly. Mike Anderson singled to drive in another and Paul Leone got a hit for one more run.

North picked up two more gift runs in the fourth with three walks and a sacrifice fly.

Righthander Paul Leone, with his second victory of the series, took the win. He blanked West with a two-hitter in the series opener. In that game Maxcey belted two home runs.

NORTH INDIANS(8)-Nardelli, 1-0; Kochansky 2-0; Maxcey 2-1; Tomaino 1-0; Anderson 2-0; Leone 3-1; Connell 1-0; McLaughlin 2-0; Baker 1-0; Cogswell 2-0; Johnston 0-0; Caruso 3-0. Tot. 20-2.

Attleboro ousts South

ATTLEBORO — The Newton South girls' softball team discovered Friday afternoon that in tourney play every error is magnified.

The Lions were eliminated from the MIAA Divsion I South Sectional Tourney by Attleboro, 4-2, at the Attleboro High School Field. The loss ends the Lions' season with a 14-7 record. It was Newton South's first trip to the tourney in three years.

Victimized by a throwing error in the second inning and a gamble in the seventh inning, the Lions found themselves out of the tourney. Newton South pitcher Martha Young deserved a better fate. She allowed just four hits and didn't allow a run in the final four innings.

Attleboro jumped out to an early lead with three runs in the second inning. A throwing error allowed two runners to score and a third came home on a squeeze play. Attleboro added to the lead with a run in the third inning.

Mary Poulin singled in a run, but that was all Attleboro would get off Young. The Lions, however, were squandering scoring opportunities throughout the contest.

In the second inning, Newton South had two base runners on, but couldn't bring them home. The Lions picked up a run in the fourth frame when Barbara Littmann scored on two wild pitches, but another run was left stranded at third.

Blanca Wales drove in a run in the sixth inning for Newton South with a base hit. The Lions had a golden chance to pull out the game in the seventh inning.

Karen Antonellis and Doreen Hagar both reached on errors to start the inning. Littmann bunted and was out on the play, Antonellis came around third and kept going trying to catch Attleboro off-guard. The gamble didn't pay off. Antonellis was out at the plate on a close play.

"We had a good season," said six-year Newton South coach Warren Bechtold. "I don't put the entire blame on our mistakes. I think our lack of hitting was a bigger reason for the defeat."

ATTLEBORO(4)-N. Ralston 1-0; Qunelia 2-0; Grylls 3-0; Gray 2-1; Poulin 3-1; McAndrews 3-0; Kile 3-1; Milbuan 2-1; B. Ralston 2-0; Thibeault 0-0. Tot. 21-4.

NEWTON SOUTH(2)-C. Wales 4-1; Antonellis 3-1; Hagar 4-0; Littmann 3-0; Natale 1-0; Speizer 2-1; Spicer 3-0; B. Wales 3-2; Segal 2-0; Waldstein 2-0; Young 0-0. Tot. 27-5.

Tigers drop finale, 8-4

SOUTH WEYMOUTH — Newton North hitters had trouble gauging the off-speed offerings of Weymouth South pitcher Jay Davis Thursday in a 8-4 loss to the Wildcats in a non-league contest at Stella Tirrell Field.

The Tiger batters had several chances to knock Davis out of the box, but they let him off the hook. Davis' pitches weren't moving fast, but they were moving around enough to retire nine straight Newton batters during the middle innings.

The loss ends the Tiger season at 8-10 overall and 5-7 in the Suburban League. Newton North missed its goal of finishing with a .500 record.

"It's too bad," said Newton North coach Dick Walker, who ended his first season at the helm of the Tigers. "We had our chances in this one, but we just didn't capitalize on them. Greg (starting and losing pitcher Greg Larson) pitched real well to start the game, but I think he let a few mistakes bother him."

The Wildcats got to the rangy sophomore for four runs in the third inning and two more in the fourth frame. Larson gave way to junior Joe King, who surreneded three hits and no runs in the final two and third inning.

Newton North vaulted out to an early 2-0 lead in top of the first inning. Chris Coen scored on a ground out by Fritz Philipps. Chip Guiney ripped a two-out double to deep center field to drive in Ben Adner with the second run of the inning.

The roof fell in on the Tigers and Larson in the bottom of the third inning. Weymouth South sent nine men to the plate scoring four runs. Sumner Brooks led off with a base hit and was moved to second on a sacrifice bunt. Larson walked Tim Danahy.

Coveney drove in the tying run with a hard shot into the shortstop hole. LeGault made the stop, but couldn't make a throw. Peter Sheridan hit a grounder to short, but LeGault had trouble getting the ball out of his glove and a double play chance was missed. After a walk to load the bases, Mark Pino drilled a two-run single to give the Wildcats a comfortable margin, 6-3.

WEYMOUTH SOUTH(8)-Gibbons 3-2; Pineau 1-0; Danahy 2-1; DiSalvio 2-1; Coveney 4-3; Sheridan 3-1; McDonough 2-0; Pino 3-3; McGonnigal 2-0; Maher 2-0; Brooks 2-1; Davis 0-0. Tot. 25-11.

YOUR OFFICIAL MASS. INSPECTION MAINTENANCE STATIONS

Now that your car is inspected just once a year, the last number on your plate determines when.

If it's 6, you're inspected in June.

Zeros come in October, though, and plates with all letters in November.

We'll do the traditional safety checks as well as the new computerized tailpipe emissions test. Quickly and efficiently.

Students back nuclear freeze

NEWTON — Eight Newton high school students have gone national in a campaign to show that many students nationwide support a nuclear weapons freeze.

They will present more than 10,000 signatures to individual senators in Washington June 20 and 21, hoping to sway undecided votes.

'Congressmen forget that decisions made now will profoundly affect our lives' Michael Wishnie

Using the networks of Student Teacher Organization to Prevent Nuclear War and Educators for Social Responsibility, they compiled a 2000-name mailing list. They have received signatures from many states across the country, including Oregon, New Mexico, the Virgin Islands, Wisconsin and Virginia. Responses from student leaders show that the campaign triggered school debate and nuclear arms programs in many high schools and youth organizations.

Student Freeze Campaign members who organized the program are Debbie Andelman, Jon Klavens, Becca Levy, Ted Sasson, Amy Simon, Greg White, Betsy Subrin and Michael Wishnie.

"I would like to congratulate these students for the initiative they have shown in creating a program that deals with the fate of our entire civilization," said Newton mayor Ted Mann, who met with them May 10.

"I admire kids who take an active role in the community," Mann said.

"We hope to give many more students the chance to sign this petition because, as future voters, we have the right to be heard," said Newton North senior Betsy Subrin.

"Congressmen forget that decisions made now will profoundly affect our lives and the lives of our children," said Newton South senior Michael Wishnie.

FREEZE BACKERS

Student Freeze Campaign members recently presented Mayor Mann with more than 10,000 signatures collected nationwide in support of a nuclear weapons freeze. Included were (from left) seniors Betsy Subrin, Ted Sasson, Becca Levy, Jon Klavens and John Bell.

Crisis situation, says Red Cross

NEWTON — The Red Cross has launched an emergeny disaster relief campaign for contributions for assisting victims of natural disaster nationwide.

"This is a crisis situation," according to David Nixon, chairman of the Board of Directors of the West Suburban Chapter American Red Cross. "We are depending on the generosity of local residents to help their fellow Americans. It is unfortunate that the disaster relief budget has been exhausted just at a time when the potential demands are the greatest demand are the greatest on Red Cross."

In the Mass Bay area alone this year, Red Cross has provided disaster relief assistance to over 1,800 persons in need.

Tax-deductible contributions may be made to "Red Cross Disaster Relief", in care of American Red Cross, 21 Foster Street, Newton, MA 02160.

School's out!

Newton South grads urged to activism

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON - In many respects, the commencement exercises at Newton South High School June 8 were typical of high school graduations everywhere. The band played "Pomp and Circumstance," graduates were advised that commencement marked "both an end and a beginning," and faculty readings included Robert Frost's familiar poem, "The Road Not Taken."

Yet this class, as described by several commencement speakers, is characterized by a deep engagement in the issues of our time.

"Activism is a hallmark of this school," declared student speaker Joshua Malcolm Davis in his address to the class, their relatives and friends. He urged his classmates to vote in the next mayoral, congressional, and presidential elections.

Though most of his speech had an optimistic tone, Davis expressed a pessimistic view of the nuclear arms race. "I don't think any of us can count on reaching our natural demise," he said.

Davis wasn't the only speaker to evoke the spectre of nuclear war. Newton School Committee Chairman Nancy Mann told the graduates that their education had prepared

Newton North graduates the 'best class in 18 years'

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — One of Newton North High School's best classes made the switch from adolescents to young adults, while thousands of family and friends proudly looked on.

"It's the best class in 18 years, just an outstanding group in every dimension," said student counselor Peter Mackie at June 10's graduation ceremony.

Retiring science teacher Robert Malone told the class, "Behold the turtle, he makes no progress until he sticks his neck out."

The Class of 1983, noted Malone, surpassed other classes by attaining 14 National Merit Scholarship finalists.

Student speaker Christopher McGrath "stuck his neck out" and won the applause of all when he threw his prepared speech out and embarked on a talk directed to "everyone over 30."

"Who do you see before you, but former news boys, lemonade sellers, baby sitters, and do anything for a dollar kids. We are now young Americans, not just the next generation, but the new generation," said student McGrath, to thousands sitting in the sun on cement bleachers overlooking the football field.

"We are not telling you to move over, but to duck, because here we come," McGrath concluded optomistically.

After attending Newton South's commencement School Superintendent John Strand hurried to the platform just in time to make a quick speech.

To pay $10,000

City settles with police raid victim

NEWTON -- The city has temporis moaldermanic Finance Committee has approved the city's paying a former Newton resident $10,000 to settle his lawsuit against Police Chief William F. Quinn and five Newton policemen before the verdict comes in from the jury.

In a closed-door executive session, City Solicitor Daniel Funk convinced the committee that Edward Strong ultimately might be awarded considerably more than $10,000 for legal fees and damages resulting from a run-in he had with the Newton police in February, 1980.

Strong alleged that the police, acting on a tip that he was holding a woman hostage in his apartment, tricked him into leaving his residence, restrained him, and then broke down his door and seized two of his handguns.

There was no woman, and, according to Funk, "there was no evidence of criminal activity," but the police took Strong's guns and his license to carry them. His guns were returned after five months, at the request of his attorney, and his license was renewed after two state court trials, Funk stated in a letter to Mayor Theodore Mann.

Strong pressed a $1 million civil rights suit against the police, and, when the trial began in federal court, his attorney offered to settle for as little as $50,000, according to Funk.

"The case was tried for five days, during which time testimony was presented which cast doubt on the truthfulness of statements made by at least one of the officers," according to Funk.

Chief Quinn said Monday, "We all felt real good about our testimony."

Commenting on the import of an FBI probe of potential civil rights violations in the Newton Police Department, which was taking place when the Strong incident happened, Quinn commented, "We were completely vindicated in that."

Funk argued that Strong's success in overturning his gun license denial, combined with the jury's being "at a standstill" on two of Strong's claims suggested to Funk that the city "would be particularly susceptible to a judgment for damages."

> Strong alleged that the police, acting on a tip that he was holding a woman hostage in his apartment, tricked him into leaving his residence, restrained him, and then broke down his door and seized two of his handguns.

He also pointed out that the judge, "who had initially recommended that the case be settled for $18,000, indicated that, if Strong prevailed as to any of his claims, he would award significant attorney's fees to Strong's counsel, in addition to costs."

Strong said Monday that his expenses in the case were "definitely over" the $10,000 offered by the city. Besides the legal expense, he contended the psychological effects of his experience were the real costs he will never recoup.

Two years after the incident, he complained that he "was placed in great fear and has continued to be subject to great mental anguish." He added that he "has had to seek medical attention" as a result of the incident.

The actions of the police, according to Strong, destroyed his sense of security in his home and humiliated him in front of his friends and neighbors "in such a way as to lose their respect."

Suggesting, on Monday, that there were some things the city could not settle with $10,000, Strong asked, "Do you know what is like to see a police car and be scared to death that they might know who you are?"

Students move to keep math teacher

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

OAK HILL — A group of Charles E. Brown Junior High School seventh graders decided to take action recently when they learned a math teacher, who they liked and admired, had received a pink slip.

Last week, after they had circulated a petition signed by hundreds of parents and students and appealed to school and city hall officials, the students learned their teacher, Robert Reed, would not be laid off from his job.

"I don't know if the students' effort was the deciding factor," said Alderman Cynthia Creem. "But I think it helped in that it made the School Department aware that he (Reed) is an excellent teacher."

Douglas Randall was one of the youngsters who initiated the action which they hoped would save Reed, a non-tenured math teacher, from losing his job at the Oak Hill school.

"We got a petition going. We got over 300 names," said Randall, age 11, who noted that "mostly students signed the petition."

No adults prompted the students to circulate the petition or advised them as to the steps they should take, Randall said.

"Some adults helped us with the wording on the petition," he said. The students themselves wanted Reed to stay at the school and decided to take action because "he's the best math teacher at the school."

"He explains complicated things and makes us understand," Randall said of Reed. "He moves quickly so that it's not boring - but not so quickly that you don't understand."

Asbestos woes grow

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON - Just as School Committee members were feeling a sense of accomplishment about the process of asbestos removal from Newton North High School, an expert informed them Monday night that asbestos is flaking off the ceiling of the fourth floor of Newton North, and recent tests have indicated that Newton South may also have an asbestos problem.

But Dr. Charles Spooner, an industrial hygienist and geochemist who helped write an EPA guidance document on asbestos-containing materials in buildings, advised that the asbestos be monitored instead of immediately removed.

"I don't think anything should be done now," he said.Spooner, whose 1979 study of asbestos at Newton North had recommended the removal of asbestos on the second and third floors of the building, said he stands by his original recommendation that the fourth floor be left alone.

"At this point, I still recommend that the situation be watched to see if it changes in the next few years," possibly in response to vibrations or vandalism, he said.

Spooner pointed out that "damage by students

Officer is bitter over retirement

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Recently retired Newton police officer Allan Ciccone, 43 years old, sat in his darkened house Monday afternoon trying to escape the first real heat of the summer.

He is used to sitting home all day. Since last September, he has had to call the police to ask permission to go anywhere.

September is when Ciccone was put on sick leave from his job with the police department. As Chief William F. Quinn explained Monday, police officers and firefighters have to stay at home when they are on sick leave, or they do not get paid.

Ciccone was put on sick leave last September for a back injury he received when he fell off a wall while pursuing housebreakers in the early morning hours of Dec. 15, 1975.

He said he was allowed to work as a clerk in police headquarters when he did not feel well enough to return to the beat. After two and a half years under this arrangement, Ciccone was told, in April, 1981, that he had to hit the bricks or stay home sick.

Two weeks ago, long after all his sick time was gone, Ciccone was Businesses oppose trash pickup proposal

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The administration's proposal to end all commercial trash pickup as of July 1 met with strong opposition from local businessmen at a public hearing last week.

The members of the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee on June 8 voted unanimously to deny the Commissioner of Public Works' request for an amendment in the city's rubbish collection ordinance which would make it conform with state law. By law, he is bound to pick up trash in the city, but there are no funds for that in next year's budget.

More than a dozen owners of businesses in the city complained to the committee that the services they receive from the city are diminishing quickly while they are asked to pay more than their share of city taxes.

A year ago, the city-wide revaluation taxed commercial properties at 150-percent of their assessed value, while residences were taxed at 100-percent.

"Businesses have been hit a little too hard," alderman Robert Tennant told the committee. "Nobody's doing anything to help the businessman, while he's hauling more than his own weight."

Public Works Commissioner John Sulik explained that SCA Services, Inc., which is scheduled to begin residential trash pickup in the city on July 1, has "no involvement with commercial trash." He said all owners of non-residential properties will have to contract with other private firms for trash collection after that date, when the city's Sanitation Division will be disbanded. According to Sulik, 1,000 to 1,500 businesses in the city already use private trash collection agencies.

He said the private firms he had investigated offered the same service being provided by the city, but at a higher cost. The cost for equivalent service would be approximately $6 per week, as opposed to the city charge of $2.

Both Tennant and local businessman Bill Cantor said they thought Sulik's estimate of the cost of private trash pickup was very low. Cantor said $1,000 per year probably was closer to the real cost. To him, the proposal to end city pickup of commercial trash means "my taxes just went up again." He commented that his taxes went up $5,000 a year after revaluation and complained that trash pickup is "one of the few services we have."

Cantor asked the aldermen if surcharges for fire protection would be proposed next.

It costs the city $8 to make the pickup for which it is paid $2, the commissioner explained. The cost to the city for providing the service in 1982 was $115,560, while total revenues from it amounted to only $38,930, he said.

Sulik's figures were for pickups at 220 non-residential properties, he said, but aldermen guessed that trash from many small businesses was being picked up as residential.

Roger Harris, of the Sanitation Division, told the committee the real number of non-residential properties will be known after SCA begins its pickups in July.

"That 200 might really be 600," Richard Bullwinkle, acting chairman of the committee, said of Sulik's figures.

Committee member Paul Coletti said he thought forcing businesses to contract with more expensive trash firms might lead to a health hazard in the city. Fewer pickups and larger dumpsters would lead to unsanitary conditions, he said.

After painting a picture of garbage overflowing from dumpsters all over town, Coletti told Sulik, "If it happens with our own people making the pickups, I know it's going to happen with a private contractor."

"That will be a Health Department problem," the commissioner responded.

"It'll be your problem when you have to go out and pick it up," Coletti told him.

Ron Marini, a local businessman, pointed out that, even if Sulik's figures were right, 220 more dumpsters added to the city might pose a potential health problem. "Has the Board of Health been involved in this decision?" Marini asked the commissioner.

Former mayor Harold Whitmore, Jr., pointed out to the committee that the definition of "commercial" or "non-residential" properties included such old-age homes as the Pettee Institute. "If the definition given in the ordinance is a clarification, then I think it's wrong," Whitmore said.

"I was told we were a corporation, but we are a residence," Whitmore contended. He said the home was operating "on a thin line," funded mostly by endowments, and he added that paying for private trash collection would be a big strain on its finances.

"Actually, this home is saving the city money," he added. "If these women were not living in this private home, the city would have to take care of them."

Bullwinkle and other committee members sympathized with Whitmore. "When you write a sweeping ordinance, people sometimes fall between the cracks," he said.

Sol Krantz of Congregation Beth El told committee members, as they were agonizing over the enforceability of Sulik's proposal, "Hard decisions make bad laws. When you can't enforce something very well, it usually means it's a bad law."

Toward the end of the discussion, Cantor asked the aldermen why they did not negotiate for commercial trash pickup when the SCA contract was being negotiated.

"Because the aldermen did not negotiate any of it," Bullwinkle responded, in a tone reminiscent of the months long, bitter debate that took place before a 12 to 11 vote of the Board of Aldermen finally assigned residential trash pickup to SCA.

New officers elected at Boys' Club meeting

NEWTON — Pasquale "Pat" Franchi was re-elected President of the Newton Boys' Club at the 28th annual meeting of the Newton Boys' Club held last week at the club headquarters.

Also elected to lead the youth organization for the ensuing year were the following officers: Victor A. Nicolazzo, Jr., 1st vice president; Helen P. Tresca, 2nd vice president; Lawrence B. DiBona, D.D.S. 3rd vice president; Charles E. Hilliard, secretary; Kenneth P. Billings, treasurer; Samuel Crocetti, executive director and David Sellers, program director.

Re-elected to the Board of Directors for a one-year term were the following: Michael J. Antonellis, Louis A. Attardo, Joseph H. Biotti, Philip F. Cacciatore, Wiliam Cress, A. Joseph DeNucci, Alfonso DeVito, Janet M. Edsall, Vincent Farina, Elaine Gentile, Walter J. McGauley, Stephen P. Holmes, Paul M. LaDouceur, Michael Lipof, I. Alan Lobel, Andrew J. Magni, Robert McCarthy, Victor A. Nicolazzo, Sr., Anthony Pellegrini, William J.C. Pucciarelli, Alan Quebec, Carol Ann Shea, Sidney T. Small, Robert Stevens, Robert L. Tennant, Robert W. Tennant and Mrs. Hugh W. Tomb.

Newly nominated and elected to the Board of Directors for a one-year term were the following: Thomas McBurney and Nelson M. Silk.

The following Honorary members re-elected, Hon. Monte G. Basbas, Paul H. Guzzi, Hon. Theodore D. Mann, Giles E. Mosher, Jr., Chief William F. Quinn, Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly, Rabbi Murray I. Rothman, Howard Whitmore, Jr. and W. Edward Wilson.

The following past members of the Board of Directors were elected to serve on the Honorary Board: Hon. Eliot K. Cohen, Norman E. MacNeil and Eugene S. Tarsky. Newly elected to the Honorary Board of Directors was Reverand Arthur M. Calter, pastor of Our Lady's Parish in Newton.

Invocation, opening the evening program was offered by Reverand Arthur M. Calter and he also pronounced the closing benediction. First Vice President, Victor A. Nicolazzo, Jr., presided over the evenings program in the absence of President Pasquale Franchi. A short business meeting followed at which Mr. Nicolazzo reviewed the organizations successful accomplishments of the past year, he thanked and congratulated all concerned that assisted in the successful operation of the Boys' Club this past year.

The principal speaker was Newton Police Chief William F. Quinn. Mr. Quinn explained the most recent functions and the upgrading of the facilities within the Police department that has provided additional protectin and safety for the city of Newton. He also expressed the services and accomplishments the Boys' Club is offering in preventing deliquency and for the well being of all boys and young men in Newton.

Beth Avodah to hold service

NEWTON CENTRE — Temple Beth Avodah in Newton Centre will hold a religious service on July 8 for 16 Israeli teenagers who will be visiting Boston.

The service will be followed by a dance performance by the visiting teens. An Oneg Shabbat sponsored by Capeway Chapter and Chaverot Chapter of B'nai B'rith women will follow the program. The public is invited to attend.

B'nai B'rith Youth Organization and its adult board members are housing the students, who will visit several other eastern cities. For many of the Israeli teens, it will be their first visit to the United States.

Participating in the program are Newton residents Annette Schwart, Franny Martel and Nancy Weinfield.

State tests find no health hazard from chemical firm

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON LOWER FALLS — Preliminary test results of a local chemical coating firm cited by state officials for emitting odors seem to indicate there is no health problem, according to state health officials.

"We are waiting to receive the complete report," said Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) spokesman Dick Sullivan on Tuesday.

American Durafilm Company located at 2300 Washington St., was cited on April 27 by the state for visible emissions, according to the DEQE.

"Four tests were made and Brad Stewart, a DEQE regional engineer, tells me these are preliminary results and that there appears to be no problem out there," said DEQE spokesman Sullivan.

"I cannot confirm the results because I haven't seen them," said American Durafilm Company spokesman and attorney Thomas O'Keefe on Tuesday.

"It's what we suspected all along. We believe there is a problem in the (Charles River) valley and that other firms should be looked at," added O'Keefe.

The DEQE received a letter of complaint about the firm from Wellesley Natural Resources Director Judy Nicolson. Nicolson stated that Wellesley Fire Chief Stephen Black traced foul odors to the rear ventilators of the firm.

Four tests of the facility were made by American Durafilm's consultant David Gordon Associates under the supervision of the DEQE last May 26, according to the DEQE.

American Durafilm Company located at 2300 Washington St. on the Wellesley border coats a number of products ranging from muffin tins to a space shuttle component with Teflon, according to their spokesman.

American Durafilm's cement block building is located a few feet from the Charles River.

Employees of a company across the river complained of foul odors in the area, as well as workers at American Shipley company, which is located next door to American Durafilm.

An American Shipley company official stated his company was concerned about the odors.

The DEQE notified American Durafilm that the firm had emissions and speculated they may be causing the reported symptoms of headaches.

Newton Consultant David Gordon was hired by the firm to make the tests which are supervised by the DEQE.

DEQE spokesman Sullivan has stated the DEQE's main concern is for the public's health.

DEQE engineers will carefully go over the test results and if they are not satisfied, the DEQE could order further testing, said Sullivan.

Tracking down the animal offenders

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — If stray dogs could speak, they would tell you the police officers in Newton's Animal Control unit are tough, but humane.

"It is difficult to find people of that quality in Massachusetts, they (Newton's dog officers) are on the top of the list," said Charles Contos, assistant director of law enforcement for the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (MSPCA).

Newton's Animal Control Unit has a statewide reputation for humane treatment of animals and other cities often call for advice.

Bouncing around on a hot day over Newton's 20 square miles of roads in a four-wheel drive Animal Control unit van can be a grueling adventure.

Last year dog officers responded to about 7,500 calls, according to Newton Police Chief William Quinn, who is fighting to keep the officer's overtime pay to avoid a reduction in the service.

Three officers, Charles Rivers, who is retiring in June, Roy McLaughlin and John Gary responded to the calls, plus more than 2,000 unrelated to their normal animal control duties, according to the animal control secretary.

This translates into an average of 26 calls a day.

"A bird is in a chimney at 76 Shady Hill Rd.," radioed the Animal Control unit dispatcher/secretary Pauline Hoover on Thursday.

A few minutes later Officer Roy McLaughlin arrived on the scene, equipped with a pair thick leather gloves and a flashlight.

Two women in the house pointed to the fireplace where a rustling sound could be heard, exclaiming the bird was loose in the living room making a mess of things.

After several failed attempts to get the bird down, the officer explained the bird would come down on its own and when it did, the women should close the flue to trap it behind the fireplace screen.

Barely a half-mile away from the home the radio in the van chirped, "The bird is down at 76 Shady Hill Rd." The officer turned the van around and collected what turned out to be a pigeon.

The unharmed pigeon would be freed in another part of the city. If it was injured, like so many birds picked up in various driveways and homes across the city that day, it would be brought to veterinarian William Walker.

Dr. Walker often heals injured birds at no cost to anyone.

Next, the officer dropped off citations to pet owners whose unleashed dogs were picked up rummaging through neighbor's trash and roaming free around a local school yard.

Fines under the city leash law run as high as $25 for the third offense.

"If you don't keep it (your pet) on a leash, sooner or later it will get hit by a car," said McLaughlin.

Some of the saddest accounts by the officer concerned pets maimed by cars.

Since the leash law came into effect, approximately 15 years ago, the population of raccoons, pheasants, skunks, possums and other wild animals have increased in Newton, according to McLaughlin.

After several stray dogs were left in the care of Dr. Walker's hospital, the city-contracted veterinarian on Beacon and Walnut Streets, a call came in.

"A woman on 118 Osborne Road reports strange animal sounds coming from under her deck," said the dispatcher.

Standing on a deck at the address was a woman and her children. She called out to to the officer, "Over here, come quick."

A long, raspy hiss was heard near a fence of a neighbor's pool.

"It left the deck carrying its babies and went over there," said the woman pointing to the fence.

Officer McLaughlin knew it had to be a possum and her newborns.

Returning to the van, McLaughlin collected a pole with a noose, his heavy leather gloves and a cage to capture the rodent.

Each time the growl was heard everyone, except the officer, jumped onto something off the ground.

The drama ended when McLaughlin caught the possum and her family in his noose pole and put them in the cage.

With the possum and her clinging babies secure in the van, McLaughlin said "We get a half-dozen possum calls a month."

What he did not have to say is how much they stink in the confined quarters of a van.

This animal's release in the woods near Hammond Pond could not come soon enough.

Officer Roy McLaughlin gives reluctant pooch an assist.

"It's a thankless job, but a job that needs to be done," said Dr. Walker, referring to some pet owners' attitudes when they come to retrieve their pets.

Dogs are held for 10 days and if they are not claimed are either adopted or killed by a lethal injection.

"There might be a dozen dogs that are put to sleep each year," said Dr. Walker.

Newton refuses to turn their stray animals over to laboratories which can legally acquire for $3 each, according the MSPCA.

The MSPCA has a bill pending before the legislature to repeal the law giving labs the legal right to buy stray dogs.

A few animals wind up pets of the animal control officers.

"I bring home snakes, but don't tell my wife. They're great for the garden and they eat a lot of bugs," said McLaughlin.

McLaughlin responded to more than 30 calls during that day's work.

Host families sought

DEDHAM — Thirty-five German and Spanish students are awaiting word from the United States that homes have been found for them for the 1983-84 academic year. These high school students are registered with the American Institute for Foreign Study (AIFS) Scholarship Foundation, a non-profit organization, for an Academic Year in America.

The program has been designated by the United States Information Agency as an official exchange-visitor program to bring to this country foreign teenage students who will live with American families while attending school.

Host families will receive $50 monthly to help offset the student's activities. They will also receive a partial scholarship for a member of their family to participate in any of the AIFS education and travel programs in Europe, Latin America, Asia, or the United States. Host families can take a $50 monthly tax deduction.

A host family need not have other teenagers at home. AIFS will even consider couples with no children and single-parent households. For more informaiton about hosting an AIFS student, interested families are invited to call the AIFS counselor in Dedham, Mrs. Joanne Bovey at 329-3186, or the AIFS office in Greenwich, CT at (203) 869-9090.

Hefty fines for naughty pets

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Dog owners beware, if your dog is one of thousands in the city without a license, you may be in for a hefty fine if your pooch is pinched by the police.

The animal control unit of the Newton Police Department estimates there are bewteen 4,500 to 5,000 dogs in Newton.

To date a little more than 750 residents have bothered to pay the small license fee of $4 for a male or spayed female, or $7 for an unspayed female dog.

If your dog is unlicensed and picked up by the police, fines can range as high as $25, according to the police department.

Licenses can be bought in the City Clerk's office. The opening day for getting dog licenses was in April, but they can still be purchased.

Besides just complying with the law, a license can give the owner peace-of-mind. If a licensed dog is hit by a car in Newton, a police officer can easily notify the owner.

Newton veterinarian William Walker said, "There are probably about a 1,000 animals a-year hit by cars and that's a significant number."

Another wise step to make sure a dog remains on a leash when outside, according to Newton Animal Control Police Officer Roy McLaughlin.

Once Newton sent notices to owners if they were delinquent in registering their pets, but the City Clerk's office stopped for budgetary reasons.

The animal control unit of the Newton Police Department estimates there are 4,500 to 5,000 dogs in Newton.

"We used to send out about 6,500 notices (to dog owners), but with the financial constraints of Proposition 2½ and less office help, we can't afford to send them out," said Assistant City Clerk Grace Lennon last week.

Fees for dog licenses go into Middlesex County's general fund, according to Dorothy Noyes of the Middlesex County Treasurer's office.

"Newton sent in $3,265 and we refunded $1,397," said Noyes on Friday.

At a refund rate of $1 per license, this means last year Newton had about 1,400 dogs registered.

Pending in the legislature is a bill that will turn all of the license fees over to cities and towns.

This bill would make it financially feasible for Newton to send the reminders to owners, says Assistant City Clerk Lennon.

"If the state gives us control of the fees, then it would be worth it, but we only receive a $1 a dog," said Lennon.

Last year the county collected $167,261 in license fees from communities in its jurisdiction and had expenses of $95,675, according to Noyes.

The seemingly out-dated reason that license fees go to the county is to pay damages to farmers whose livestock was killed by a dog.

The county also pays up to $2 a-day in boarding charges for pets that are never claimed by owners, which is very rare in Newton, says veterinarian Walker.

Committee turns down proposal for South scoreboard

NEWTON — Members of the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee have unanimously denied a request from the Building Commissioner for $16,800 to buy a scoreboard for Newton South High School.

The request was dismissed as a waste of money. "They've won state championships without a scoreboard. They'll continue to do so," South almunus Paul Coletti commented. "If the School Committee wants a scoreboard, they know how they can get it."

Committee members said they found it difficult to understand how teaching positions could be cut for lack of funds while so much was being requested for a scoreboard. "That money could fund a couple of teaching positions," Coletti said.

Mention was made of a year-old offer from the Coca-Cola Company to give the school a scoreboard free of cost. "Why give them the money when they can have one for free?" committee member Elaine Gentile asked.

The Coke sign was ultimately rejected because the school would have to pay for installation costs estimated at $10,000.

'Go' signals on traffic planning

A dozen years ago or so Watertown Square presented the most formidable kind of challenge possible in the control of traffic flow. Some thought it the worst intersection in the state, in fact, as trolley cars, buses, trucks and passenger cars struggled - staggered is the better word - to get through a veritable maze.

Today, the Square is vastly improved thanks to reconstruction and better directional adjustment. So, the announcement that Watertown is embarked on a new design concept and a new signal system, with a price tag estimated at $200,000 is more good news, making something that has shown improvement even better is indeed laudable.

All of which is taking a few turns before getting to the crux of what is pertinent in this particular offering. What, if anything substantive, is going to be done about Newton Corner's traffic pattern in consonance with the massive amount of new construction taking place there?

Fire and the wrecker's ball have cleared the ancient buildings that dated back into the last century. Only the old fire station bell and belfry are reminders of the past. What is surprising, pleasantly so, is the fact that in the $30 million office and retail complex planned by the Druker Development Company the elliptical facade of the main corner is being restored. "Newton Place" is a grand concept.

Now for some answers to the question posed two paragraphs above. Groundwork is being established by the Newton Planning Department and consultants for the developers for a sweeping package of improvements that will affect every part of the big intersection.

Under a proposal to be worked into an Urban Systems Project for funding, at least two dozen recommended changes in signals as well as control of parking and physical changes aimed at traffic direction have been given needed public exposure by the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce.

Once these are sorted out and the agreed-upon adjustments worked into the grand design, those nightmarish trips through the Corner should be at an end. We have two thoughts which may be worth incorporating into the study. One would be revival of the construction of an overhead pedestrian walk for complete avoidance of ground level danger. The other would be to determine whether some kind of bypass road from Galen Street, Watertown, into the southerly Washington Street approach is worth looking into. Costs in property takings may be prohibitive, but an aerial view at least indicates the possibility.

While all this is going on, the city's $600,000 West Newton Square project backed by the Chamber has aldermanic approval. For bottleneck miseries, it is hard to top West Newton. Another big plus in traffic planning.

Politics and child abuse

By Kate McMahon

Rep. Joseph DeNucci

Lawmakers are playing politics with a $2.8 million appropriation that could help hundreds of families, while blithely adding $1.3 million to $34.3 million already recommended to support 200 legislators, aides and offices.

The senseless death of Brandy Mallett, a 3-year-old girl who was battered, beaten and died of injuries caused by "blunt force trauma" last year, dramatized the child abuse crisis in Massachusetts.

Public outrage, an investigation, a trial and a conviction followed.

The Department of Social Services was criticized for its handling of the case, and social workers pleaded for more DSS staff to handle the escalating problem of child abuse and neglect.

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis concurred, and recommended 173 new DSS positions in his budget for fiscal 1984 at a cost of $2.8 million.

But House Ways and Means Chairman Michael C. Creedon, D-Brockton, says that's too much, even if it's too late for Brandy Mallett.

Creedon, who last week pared nearly $33 million from Dukakis' $7.3 billion spending package, eliminated the DSS positions and said the cuts were "non-controversial."

The union representing DSS workers came back and vowed members would fight to have the funding restored.

A news conference was held, a candlelight vigil in front of the Statehouse planned, and Rep. Joseph DeNucci, D-Newton, was set to offer an amendment appropriating the $2.8 million Monday when House debate on the budget began.

It's a good bet the final budget signed by Dukakis will include the DSS positions. Even if the House stuck with Creedon's plan, the budget according to Senate Ways and Means Chairman Chester G. Atkins, D-Concord, and a compromise committee, would no doubt include the $2.8 million.

The appropriation is just one of the pieces in the annual political chess game between the House and the Senate — and Creedon and Atkins.

Lawmakers are playing politics with a $2.8 million appropriation that could help hundreds of families, while blithely adding $1.3 million to $34.3 million already recommended to support 200 legislators, aides and offices.

Worker caseload is a key issue in the funding controvery. In a 1982 suit, U.S. District Judge Robert E. Keeton said the DSS could not assign workers more cases than they were able to handle and simultaneously fulfill their obligations.

Keeton recommended a 20-1 worker-case ratio.

When Creedon unveiled his budget, he said the 153 new social workers and 20 clericals were not needed because the caseload ratio had fallen to 18-1.

John Templeton, president of Local 509 Service Employees International Union, said the 20-1 ratio was too high, did not reflect the severity of the cases and most experienced workers were carrying more than 20.

"When you view the rising epidemic of child abuse in the commonwealth, you realize that these cuts are the most controversial we've ever seen," said Templeton.

Neighbors concerned about organization of mental rehab house

In response to the editorial that appeared in the Newton Graphic, "Taking a Chance," I would like to point out a number of inaccuracies in the report.

To begin with, the intention of the concerned neighbors is not to "block" the house but to investigate the manner in which it is organized and its effect on our lives. The editorial rambles from paragraph to paragraph with a series of paradoxical descriptions of the neighbors concerns such as "an understandable fear of the unknown" to condemnation, "unfair desires based on ignorance and ochialism". The editorial attacks the integrity of neighbors legitimate concern that a closely adjacent four family house filled with clients of a mental rehabilitation program be unsupervised with sarcastic comments such as "Heaven Forbid".

The specifics are that a private mental rehabilitation organization, Gould Associates, located in the western section of this state, catering primarily to patients from a New York and New Jersey mental institution, purchased a four family house in our neighborhood in order to provide a final step outlet for patients from their program back into society.

These patients have been and still are under medication which helps to subdue erratic behavior. They will be coming from a previous step in the rehabilitation chain which will average a 3-1 patient to supervisor ratio into this Newton Highlands facility, which features none. With a sizable number of patients and unknown cycle rate through this facility, the chance of something eventually going astray in an unsupervised environment becomes, in the concerns of any common sense neighbor, all to real. What is the recourse of the neighbors who are the potential victims of such an organization should something go wrong? The house in our neighborhood is being set up soley by a contract social worker who will eventually go away. When we direct the question of reference, Gould Farm officials 90 miles away in Monteray, MA, we are answered only with a noncommittal response, "Who can predict what any human being will do?"

In conclusion, from our neighborhood's experiences with this issue to date and from communications with residents in other communities voicing similar concerns and frustrations, it is exasperating to discover that when citizens with legitimate concerns try possibly for the first time in their lives, to exercise the freedom of expression publically, they are confronted by a barrage of experienced, full time professionals eager to discredit them.

'Men and Women at Work' coverage appreciated by Continuum

This letter is long overdue but I very much wanted the Newton Graphic to have Continuum's official response of appreciation for Donna Lombardi's superb article in the May 4, 1983 issue.

Ms. Lombardi did an outstanding job in capsulizing the essence of the morning panel discussion during our conference, "Men and Women at Work: Collaboration of Competition." She was wise to choose Jill Henderson's workshop on Sexuality in the Workplace for the afternoon highlight. I know Jill was pleased with Ms. Lombardi's report as well and undoubtedly enjoyed the front page position as much as we did.

The day was an enormous success, judging from the formal evaluation and our own observations. The group was diverse and although we had hoped for more male representation, we got a varied distribution of work titles and ages. The spirit generated from the panel discussion continued through the day and lead us to consider this first venture to be one in a series of future symposia for the working public.

Thank you for your tremendous support.

Hope painstaking art education will continue in Newton

A widely held opinion is that artistic ability, unlike other skills will emerge, survive, and persevere, whether or not its development is fostered in a sensitive and structured fashion.

As elementary art educators in the Newton Public Schools, we have recently participated in the Newton Arts Festival '83 with a display of childrens artwork at City Hall.

We witnessed the many events of Festival '83 with enthusiasm and support. Both organizers and participants in the Festival, which ended on Sunday, May 8, are to be congratulated for a superb display of visual, musical, and performing arts resources of the City of Newton.

Adult artistic proficiency does not come about, however, without nurturance and experience, work that we engage in with Newton Public School children on a daily basis. Fostering visual awareness and ultimately visual sophistication begins in kindergarten, where each child as a member of the art class is invited to observe, respond to, and evaluate aspects of his or her visual environment. A wide variety of stimulating materials and ideas is offered each child. Skill both in expressing very personal experience and in developing a shared cultural vocabulary is encouraged as the child advances through the grades.

By high school graduation we hope to have produced a student, whether he or she continues to study as a visual artist or not, who is strongly thinking, and who is capable of a fluent and creative response over a range of medial to many types of visual and intellectual stimuli.

We feel that this type of painstaking arts education for children will continue, even in the fact of declining educational resources, to insure informed as well as skilled participants and consumers for arts festivals of the future. We welcome the continued support of the Newton community as a whole, which makes our work possible.

Waste of personnel

This letter is in response to the obviously overaggressive traffic control tactics used by the Newton Police Department.

On Tuesday, June 7, at approximately 1 in the afternoon, the police had established what can only be described in the worst sense of the term, a "speed trap" on Centre Street between Newton Centre and Newton Highlands. This has become a regular spot for this activity, however on this particular occasion there were three officers, one police cruiser, and one police van present.

This appears to me to be an absurd waste of personnel and equipment. I'm quite sure there is a better use for three officers than standing by the roadside enforcing a speed limit that obviously remains lower than it should be considering Weeks Junior High School has been closed for some time.

The law enforcement officers of Newton should be utilized to serve the community, not as deliberate revenue generators.

Remembering the Baltic Holocaust

The Baltic Holocaust was to be commemorated by thousands of Massachusetts citizens of Latvian, Estonian and Lithuanian ancestry yesterday.

They were to gather to mourn the 600,000 innocent men, women and children executed or eliminated by the Communists. Prayers were to be heard for family members who were herded into cattle cars shipped to Siberia and never heard from again.

One out of every 10 Balts was wiped from the face of the earth by the henchmen of the Kremlin. The brutal inhuman carnage started by the Communists on June 14, 1941 cannot be forgotten, yet we wonder why it has been permitted to continue to 1983. Wherever we look, we see the bloody hand of the Kremlin continuing its policy of death, torture and terror. We grieve for 2,000,000 Cambodians, the 10,000,000 Ukrainians and all the millions of others killed by Red terror. We grieve for all people once free, now held captive by Communists.

We hopefully cheer Solidarity and the Polish people and the Afghan Freedom Fighters now shedding blood to keep their freedom. Yet we watch in horror as the KGB murders Catholic priests in Latvia and Lithuania and we despair at the recent wave of arrests of innocent people.

As we commemorate the beginning of the Baltic Holocaust, we look to the media, government and religious leaders to fulfill that often heard declaration "We shall never let horrendous crimes against humanity to ever happen again."

Why are we allowing them to continue in silence?

Marking Time

White's foolproof test for political aspirations

By Mark White

Well, it's that time of year again. The nomination papers are available and I know that many of you are pondering running for the Board of Aldermen.

Running for public office is a difficult decision to make. Campaigning is no walk in the park. And if you win, the job is demanding.

So in order to aid all you would-be politicos, I have devised a test to determine if you would enjoy serving on the city's legislative body.

1. Do you have outside interests that consume your time? (Sports, hobbies, groups)

If you answered yes, give yourself a zero. There will be no time for anything but meetings at City Hall, meetings with the special interest groups, meetings with neighbors, meetings to schedule more meetings.

If you answered no, give yourself a point. If you've got nothing else to do with your time, you might consider running for the Board.

2. When I get angry, my temperment is best described as:
a). calm
b). slow burn
c). angry
d). ranting and raving.

If you answered (a), give yourself a zero. The Board of Aldermen serves as a release for frustration. In order to get the most benefit out of the job, you have to vent your anger at normal daily upsets.

One point for (b). Two points for (c), and five points for (d). If you like to rant and rave, not only will you feel a great release but you will fit right in!

3. I am interested in: a). long range planning
b). finances
c). schools d). garbage
e). traffic signs and patterns.

If you checked (a) you get zero. About the only long range planning you get into on the board is figuring when to schedule the aldermanic softball game.

(b)? - one point. Proposition 2½ has just about decided the budget and there's little left to do except argue about coffee and donuts funding.

(c)? - one point. The Mayor has total control. You'll just be frustrated.

(d)? - one point. This used to be a biggie, but now the private contractor has taken over. Sorry!

(e)? - traffic signs? You can't be serious. But if you are you get 5 points. This will consume 80 percent of your time and 100 percent of your valium.

4. My social life is:
a). excellent
b). good c). adequate
d). a disaster

Now, noboby in their right mind is going to sacrifice a night with a beautiful woman or a handsome guy in order to attend a meeting on stop signs.

Therefore, if you have the option for an exciting evening with the opposite sex you're not going to be at City Hall (unless you're totally crazy, in which case you should run for the state legislature, not the board).

Give yourself five points if you answered (d). Four for (c). Two for (b) and one for (a).

5. I want to be a city official because (check as many as applicable):
a). I want the status
b). I want to serve my community
c). I want to meet women d). I need the money e). All of the above
f). None of the above

Motivation is a prime factor in analyzing whether you want to run for office.

Status? You must be kidding. Most people can't name more than one alderman. Nobody knows who you are except City Hall employees and the Mayor. You don't even have a name plate on your desk or a reserved parking space.

If you checked status you may end the test immediately and go back to watching "Fantasy Island."

Serve the community? How do you like phone calls at 6 a.m.? How about dinnertime? At work? Do you like being threatened? How about being pressured in the supermarket? Deduct one point if you checked (b).

Meet Women? The only women you will meet are married colleagues and angry city employees. The Board isn't exactly the second coming of "The Dating Game."

Money? Give yourself 5 points if you checked (d) and you're on welfare! $2,500 bucks a year amounts to 10¢ an hour for aggravation.

All of these? Bridgewater State Hospital has a bed waiting for you - 10 points!

None of these? I don't believe you. Zero.

Now add up your score.

If you had the discipline and patience to put up with this nonsense, get those nomination papers!

(Mark White is a former member of the Board of Aldermen and a practicing attorney).

Don't be afraid to fail...

By Norm Nathan

I really don't want to talk to all of you graduates here today. Those of you who excelled in sports, the football captain especially, the class president, the guy who was so popular that half the girls in the senior class would die to have him ask them to the prom — I'm not talking to you. You, the cheerleaders and the prom queen, you've all tasted success already. It's hard to imagine how you'll be able to top that in real life.

No, I want to talk to those of you who never really made it big in high school. You're my kind of people. So if it's been a struggle to get through, if you never made the team, if you never made the National Honor Society, if you never became class officer, if you weren't the center of popularity all through your years at high school, take comfort in the thought that from now on you've got no place to go but up.

It really can be a blessing in disguise. It's like overcoming a physical handicap. It makes you try harder. It develops an "I'll show them" attitude that could mean an incredibly successful future.

High school experiences do have that kind of effect on many people.

For example, in his inaugural speech, President Gerald Ford said — and remember, he was president of the United States, you can't do much better than that — President Ford said, "I'm here to confess that in my first campaign for president ... of my senior class at South High School, I headed the Progressive Party ticket and I lost ... and that's when I turned Republican."

Can you imagine that? The high school election he lost was burned in his mind.

President Truman always said he was not very popular as a boy. At his high school graduation, a student named Charlie Ross, class valedictorian, editor of the yearbook, got a kiss from Miss Tillie Brown, apparently a well-loved teacher. Harry and some of the other students protested this favoritism of one student. Four decades later, Harry Truman became president. He hired Charlie Ross as his press secretary and the first thing they did was call Miss Tillie Brown. Truman asked his old teacher, "How about that kiss I never got? Do I rate it now?" High school days never really left his mind either.

So dig deeply into the soul of today's most successful men and women and you'll probably find a former high school loser.

A commencement speaker is supposed to give some advice. Don't squirm now because my advice is very simple and very short. The key is don't be afraid to fail. When you shoot for the moon, you're bound to miss once in a while. And failing isn't the worst thing that could happen to you. The only way not to fail is not to do anything, and that's no way to go through life.

Everyone says the world has become complicated, and that's true. And it'll become more complicated yet in the years ahead. But it makes living interesting because it offers challenges, and that's when you have the chance to show what you can do. Because winning over a tough challenge is pretty heady stuff — so go for it.

Arrogance and duty: the political choices

by Verne W. Vance, Jr.
Alderman at Large,
Ward 7

It is inevitable as the August swoon of the Boston Red Sox that those opposed to a particular governmental or political decision will charge the decisionmaker with the sin of arrogance. In this context, "arrogance" appears to mean the making of a decision to which the person shouting "arrogance" is opposed.

Thus we have heard charges by various aldermen that the mayor was "arrogant" in not responding affirmatively to a resolution by the board of aldermen that he restore more than $700,000 to the school budget and in not retaining the trash pickup as an in-house function of the public works department.

We have heard charges by certain city residents that the board of aldermen was "arrogant" in voting to permit purchase of the former St. Jean's School for subsidized housing.

We have heard charges by parents of private-school students that the school committee was "arrogant" in voting to limit the extent to which public funds will be used for transporting children to private schools.

Charges of arrogance sound very serious. To charge an elected official with arrogance is to charge the ultimate sin in a representative democracy.

Arrogance is easy to charge and today is charged so frequently that the charge may have become almost meaningless. But is it? What is arrogance in the context of political and governmental life? Is it ignoring the Gallup Poll on a particular issue? Is it ignoring what the loudest, most vociferous residents say they want on a particular local issue? I don't think so.

Representative government cannot, and should not, be run by public officials merely reflecting the results of the Gallup Polls or their local equivalents. Such polls do not, and cannot, ensure that the people questioned possess all relevant information on an issue.

On local issues in Newton it is not even clear what segments of the public should be represented in a poll on an issue. On a proposal for a new commercial development in a particular area, should the poll only include residents of the area? If so, how large an area? Or should it include residents of the entire city? Furthermore, the way in which the question is posed can significantly affect the outcome of the poll.

The question, "Do you favor increased commercial development in Newton to lower your property tax burden or to preserve city services without increasing your tax burden?" would undoubtedly elicit a very different response than the question, "Do you favor increased commercial development that would generate in your area of Newton more traffic, more air and noise pollution, and more parking on residential streets?"

In my view, it is not arrogant for a decisionmaker to act on his or her own best judgment of the public good. The decisionmaker may be wrong, in the views of some, but that does not necessarily mean that he or she is arrogant.

What is truly arrogant, in my view, is for a decisionmaker to ignore the public in the decisional process on an important public issue, either in failing to obtain meaningful public input or in failing to explain fully to the public the basis of the decision made.

To make a decision which may not accord with the expressed views of the public is leadership. To make such a decision without seeking or permitting public input or without fully explaining to the public the basis of the decision is arrogance. Leadership we must have. Arrogance we should not tolerate.

them to meet to meet the challenges posed by the nuclear arms build-up, an ailing world economy, issues of social justice, and environmental concerns.

Mann also dispensed advice for the more immediate future. "I wouldn't be your mother if I didn't ask you to be safe tonight," she said, alluding to the danger of drunken driving.

As warm June sunlight poured down on the blue-robed graduates, the concerns of the uncertain future seemed far away. Irridescent soap bubbles floated up from the sea of blue mortarboards. A huge lobster, apparently salvaged from a restaurant dumpster, had been suspended on the brick wall behind the speakers' platform.

School Principal Ernest Seasholes took note of the impact of high school graduation on the business world. "It's clear it's gradution time when Polaroid and Kodak stocks go way up," he quipped.

On a more serious note, Seasholes advised the graduates to seek a balance in their adult lives. "We want you to go out and be self-sufficient people, but balance your private life with a real commitment to public life" and social issues, he said.

Class president Carolyn Patti Bess presented the class gift: a Xerox copying machine for the school library and a video- cassette recorder. In addition, the class is giving two hundred dollars to the Jimmy Fund.

The Phi Beta Kappa Book Award was presented to Michael Joel Wishnie. Mark Edward Nicoletti was awarded the Boys' Senior Cup, and the Girls' Senior Cup was won by Cecelia Wilcox.

Fire forces nursing home evacuation

NEWTON — Residents of the Lakeview Rest Home, 38 Lake Ave., Newton Centre, were evacuated shortly before midnight last Thursday when a fire broke out.

Details of the origin and extent of the blaze were unavailable this morning but the Newton Fire Department did report that the incident was called a "working fire" at 12:11 a.m. today. Engines 3,6,7, Ladder 2 and Asst. Chief Goulding responded to the intial alarm and Engine 5 and Ladder 3 responded a few minutes later.

All apparatus had returned to their home stations by 1:08 a.m. Officials said the blaze would be investigated.

Some rules of the road for all bicycle riders

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Bike riders, beware. You're taking your life into your own hands when you disregard the rules of the road.

Many cyclists make the potentially fatal error of riding in the wrong direction, according to Newton Police Lt. Charles Feeley, who runs a bicycle safety course for children.

"Those who ride facing oncoming traffic are in utmost danger," said Feeley. "You cannot guage the speed of an oncoming car. If your speed is fifteen miles per hour, and the car is going thirty miles an hour, the impact speed would be 45 miles per hour," and the usual result of such an impact is a dead cyclist.

"A bike has no seatbelts, no padded dashes, no four-wheel brakes," said Feeley. A cyclist's only protection against accidents is his or her alertness, which is compromised by riding against the flow of traffic.

"When you ride facing traffic, and are facing the car, you are hypnotized by it, and the driver is hypnotized by you," he explained. "Imperceptibly, you steer toward what you're lookinq at," just as a pitcher aims at the space over home plate.

If riding against traffic is so dangerous, why do so many parents tell their children to ride in that direction?

Until 1940, Feeney explained, cyclists were considered pedestrians, and people have been taught to walk facing traffic.

Under state law, however, cyclists are subject to the same regulations as cars, and should signal right and left turns, in addition to obeying traffic signals.

"But in heavy traffic," sald Feeley, "I do not recommend that you avail yourself of your legal right to take a left turn" from the right side of the street. Instead, he suggested, the cyclist should get off the bike and walk it across the street, following pedestrian rules. Whenever the cyclist anticipates a dangerous situation, it's always a qood idea to dismount and walk the bike until the danger passes.

"Don't fight traffic," he urged. "If you lose the fight, you're dead."

Bicyclists may ride on sidewalks, except in business areas aNd near 8 schools and churches, but should exercise extra caution to avoid accidents, said Feeley.

Many children today suffer from "tunnel vision" induced by excessive television viewing, and, im his bicycle safety course, Feeley teaches "better use of the eyes" to develop their peripheral vision. Feeley suggested that cyclists look over their left shoulder at frequent intervals, tp keep tabs on what's behind them.

What about cycling after dark?

" We don't recommend night riding unless you're adept, skillful, and have reflectors on the front, back, and sides of the bicycle,"he said. Feeley advised that cyclists who ride at night wear velcro-fastened reflector strips on the left arm and ankle.

Whether you're ridinq during the day or at night, you should always ride single file, he said.

And leave the stereo headphones at home. "They're not illegal yet, but they're exceptionally dangerous," because they deprive th rider of the ability to clearly distin9uish the sounds of traffic' said Feeley. The varying musical rhythms can often mesmerize the cyclist, detracting from alertness, he added.

"The driver of the car does a finer job of avoiding the cyclist than the cyclist does of avoiding the car," said Feeley. And in every collision between a car and a bike, he summed up, " the cyclist has a hell of a lot more to loSe."

Community schools looking for a few good teachers

NEWTON — Newton Community Schools is undertaking a major recruitment drive for new instructors for its fall term.

The NCS employs over 600 instructors each year in a variety of areas. NCS activities take place throughout Newton in schools, homes and businesses. Programs are planned by 19 neighborhood planning committees and include after-school activities for children, cultural and educational events for adults and special programs for senior citizens, handicapped and gifted youth.

"People teach for NCS for a variety of reasons and range from homemakers who share cooking talents to university professors who wish to teach in a smaller, more relaxed atmosphere," said spokesperson Lindsay Hardin.

Community schools routinely has opening in children's and adult's activities, including exercise, drama, theatre, dance, academics, computers and cooking. First-year instructors receive $6 an hour and normally work 1-8 hours per week.

People interested in teaching this fall should contact the NCS office at 552-7118.

He tracks a youthful fascination with trolley cars

By Catherine Enns
In Focus Editor

NEWTON — When Norton D. "Skip" Clark was a kid, his entertainment was hanging out at the trolley car house in Watertown.

"It was during gas rationing in the second World War and you couldn't go anywhere," recalled the Newton native. "My mother and I would walk down there and she would knit and I would watch the trolleys shift around. They would ride me around the yard."

That started a life-long fascination with trolley cars for Skip Clark. In high school, he worked on the trolley snow plow for 23 cents an hour. Today, if it has anything to do with trolleys, Clark has probably collected it.

Trolleys were a popular form of transportation for Americans around the turn of the century, and Boston was no exception. The overhead lines of electricity powered the cars which were used for both short and long trips.

But around the start of World War I, cars started to crowd the roadways and trolleys began to be eliminated. According to Clark, General Motors began pushing buses with a huge public relations campaign and that contributed to the trolley's demise.

Boston's T system is still a trolley stronghold, but there are areas where the track now stands idle.

For example, the route from Newton Corner to Watertown Square has been taken over by buses. Clark and his wife, Susie, took their two daughters for a last ride on the route when it ended in June, 1969.

The memories of those old trolley cars are important to Clark. His collection of trolley memorabilia includes everything from a coin box to old uniforms.

But perhaps the most fascinating part of his collection are his model trolley cars. Some, standing only two inches high, are exact down to the last detail. They are powered, just like the real thing, by overhead electrical wires that move them along the tracks.

He's even created his own miniature railroad line, in commemoration of the area where Newton, Watertown and Waltham come together. He calls it the Bemis Street Railway.

This weekend, models such as the ones Clark puts together will be on display at the second Boston Trolley Meet at the Holiday Inn, Riverside, in Newton. About 500 trolley and railroad enthusiasts are expected to attend the event that will end in a fan trip on a 1924 "Type 5" car along the Green Line.

The meet is sponsored by the Boston chapter of the National Railway Historical Society. Several members of the local chapter have also exhibited their models at the Museum of Our National Heritage in Lexington.

The numbers of trolley modelers are much less than those of railroad modelers, according to Clark. And the hobby isn't that old. Trolley oldtimers are those who have been in it for more than 30 years.

"I like trains, too, but I think trolleys are kind of my first love," said Clark, who is assistant manager at Equipment Rental in Watertown. "You can put a lot of them in a tiny space. With trains, you have to have a steam engine and a couple of cars." Trolleys usually run one at a time.

Clark makes some of his models from scratch, others are from bodies he bought from manufacturers. Once he finishes the trolley, he likes to track down old photographs of the real trolley it was modeled after.

He also does his own photography, making postcards of many of the older trolleys and chronicling the latest trolleys to come out.

Clark is following in his father's footsteps on a smaller scale. His father, the chief of fire prevention for the City of Newton, collected fire engines. Clark owns the fire museum at the Edaville Railroad in Carver and is senior conductor there.

The meet, which begins Friday at 6 p.m. and goes through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., will feature films of the 1940-70 period of Boston area trolley operation.

And, noted Clark, it's one of the few trolley meets you can get to by trolley.

Kid's reading programs planned

NEWTON — "Be Carried Away With A Book This Summer" is the theme of the Newton Free Library's Summer Reading Program for pre-school and school-age boys and girls.

Beryl B. Beatley, Supervisor of Children's Services, said all Newton youngsters are invited to register for the program which begins July 1. Certificates for participation will be awarded during a party at the end of the summer.

Children's librarians have planned programs which will challenge and stimulate the interests, talents and skills of boys and girls, Beatley said. School-age children will be asked to write brief reports for each book they read. Pre-schoolers and their parents will use a sign-up sheet in the library.

Librarians Marian Bremer, Patti Karam, Beth Sampson and Janet Prague will participate in the programs.

A series of summer film programs for children has also been scheduled. "Paddington", "The Black Stallion", "Mischief" and "Roundabout" are among the films scheduled in different bran ches.

Library programs are free. They are scheduled at the Main Junior Library, 126 Vernon Street (around the corner from the Main Library) and in other junior departments of the library. Most programs, except for films, require pre-registration. Call the library at 552-7157 for more information.

Feather Fantasy Laura Sargent (front) and Judy Walsh (back), of Paulette's Dance Studio, will perform "Fantasy in Feathers" on June 16, 17 and 18 at the Spingold Theater, Brandeis University.

West Newton resident appointed by Dukakis

NEWTON - A West Newton man was recently appointed to Governor Michael Dukakis'staff.

Stephen Crawford, 29, has been named one of four assistant press secretaries.

Crawford, who previously directed publicity for ALA Auto and Travel Club in Wellesley for two years, will deal with the broadcast media.

"This is a wonderful opportunity. I appreciate the governor's confidence in me," said Crawford, who has a bachelor degree in psychology from Univeristy of Massachussetts at Amherst and an masters degree from Boston University's School of Public Communication.

Crawford was a staff aide and scheduling assistant for the 1978 Dukakis campaign, and worked for former Vice President Walter Mondale as an advance media coordinator.

Crawford spends his spare time dabbling in photography, windsurfing, and whale watching.

Mayor's school vote favored by committee

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A move to curtail the mayor's vote as a member of the School Committee appears to be unpopular.

The Aldermanic Legislative and Rules Committee voted 5-to-1 Wednesday against a President Matthew Jefferson's amendment to the city charter that would end Mayor Theodore Mann's vote on the nine-member School Committee.

Discussion during the meeting indicated that most believed the mayor's input was useful to School Committee members.

Only one resident turned out for the advertised public hearing on the issue, prompting committee Chairman Ethel Sheehan to remark, "The public is represented by its apathy again."

The only explanation given for a weak turnout was both Newton North and South High Schools ended their commencements just a half-hour before the meeting.

Newton resident Jason Kirshen, who follows school issues, was the only member of the public in the audience.

School Committee Vice-Chairman Robert Ricles said, "No member of the School Committee, as far as I can tell, favored the idea."

"The mayor does provide excellent insights and I think if his vote was not there he would have no motivation to attend," said Ricles.

Jefferson felt the mayor already had enough to do and his time could be better used elsewhere. He suggested Mann could exert more influence by not having a vote.

"His time could be better used if he was not required to attend School Committee meetings," said Jefferson.

Mayor Mann has not said one way or the other how he felt about the issue, stated Sheehan.

Another reason for proposing the amendment, was this year's school budget cuts by the mayor, stated Jefferson .

Newton resident Kirshen suggested the amendment could exclude the mayor's vote on budget matters, rather than just dropping him as a voting member of the committee.

"The mayor is obliged (under the constraint of Proposition 2½) to present a balanced budget to the Board of Aldermen," said Alderman Rodney Barker.

Sheehan suggested, if the mayor ever felt uncomfortable about attending a School Committee meeting he could choose not to go.

"As a member of the School Committee, it is his (Mayor Mann's) only meaningful contact" with school issues, said Alderman Verne Vance.

Everyone agreed that Mann is the first mayor to actively participate on the School Committee.

After the vote to deny the amendment, Alderman Jefferson was not noticeably dissapointed and only said, "You can't always be on the winning side."

Police continue tow and hold policy

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city's controversial "tow and hold" ordinance, after being suspended in early June, is back and car owners with five or more tickets may have their cars hauled off.

But the city dropped a lead balloon on towing company's daily storage rates, making the operators upset.

Three towing companies have been notified by the city to drop their daily storage fees from $10 to $1.50 .

Towing operators say they were told to begin towing on Monday, but they want an explanation for the new storage fees set by the city.

"I would like to see it (the city's towing program) stopped until it's straightened out," said John Tody of Tody's Tow Service in West Newton.

Tody, Paul Testa of Testa's Newtonville Texaco and Paul Nuzzi of Nuzzi Brothers Towing attended the Public Safety and Transportation Committee meeting on Monday to voice their opposition to the lower rate, but their input was refused by the comittee's chairman.

"The whole thing is brand new to me, it took me by surprise," said Chairman Joseph DePasquale referring to the new storage rates.

All three towing company representatives say they were asked to come before Monday's Public Safety and Transportation Committee to voice their opinions, but the committee's chairman, Joseph Depasquale was not ready to listen.

The tow companies said they were notified on Friday by City Purchasing Agent Blair Kanbar to charge parking ticket delinquents a $1.50 a day storage.

All three men failed to see the logic concerning the new rate, considering it costs more, on a daily basis, to park in a city parking lot.

"Could you afford to have a parking lot in this city and only collect a $1.50 a day ?" asked Paul Testa on Monday.

Tow company storage services can run as high as $20 a day under a state law that regulate the fees, according to Tody.

All of the tow companines represented Monday complained about the responsibility they shoulder when they haul a car to their lots.

"The station is responsible for the car," said Testa who said his company brought in about 10 cars on Monday. Towing charges remain at $25, he added.

The city's "tow and hold" policy has been criticized for inconsistencies in implementing its new strict stance regarding parking tickets.

The program of towing cars was suspended early this month because residents were not adequately notified that their cars were going to be towed, according to DePasquale.

People who found their cars had been towed before the new policy of giving written notice are upset over the inequity of some people being notified, while they were not given a similar chance.

Still unresolved, is what to do with cars abandoned by people who fear the total fines are more than the car's value.

Eric Howlett of Burwood Road said he continues to leave his van in storage because "it's not worth the tickets." Off-street parking is not available to Howlett, who must violate the city's ban on overnight parking or pay for the privilege.

Other cities usually make a provision for auctioning unwanted vehicles off, but Newton failed to outline steps in such an event, according to Nuzzi .

Tody said he would not charge a scofflaw storage fees if the car was picked up the same day it was towed.

Alderman DePasquale said he will not hear the issue in committee for another two weeks, but the new rates remain in effect, unless a city official revokes them.

"At least they (the city) should bring us in and ask our opinion before they make changes," said Nuzzi.

Victims can sue harassers

NEWTON — Victims of racially or ethnically motivated acts of violence or harassment can now sue the perpetrators in civil court and collect damages, according to a bill Gov. Michael Dukakis signed into law this past Friday.

The bill, written by state Rep. David Cohen, D-Newton, and co-signed by the entire Newton delegation, provides new civil remedies for victims of violence on account of "race, color, creed or religion." The law also stiffens some criminal penalties for similar acts of violence or harrassment.

"There is a symbolic aspect to this law," says Cohen. "Local law enforcement agencies don't treat these things very seriously. They don't really see things like burning crosses and swaztikas as serious. That's a very traumatic experience. It's an implicit threat."

The new law should send a message to local police departments that the legislature is concerned about the problem, Cohen explains.

The bill was submitted to the Legislature 18 months ago but died in the Senate last year. This year it passed both the House and Senate on voice vote.

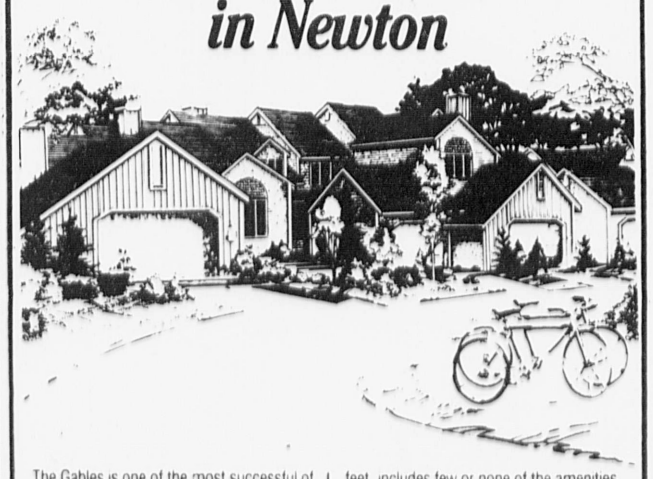
A Better Choice Than Ever...
The Gables in Newton


The Gables is one of the most successful of the long string of exceptional communities built by The Green Company. Phase III, announced just last fall, is selling so rapidly that we are underway with the additional two and three bedroom homes in the fourth and final phase. So, right now you have a better choice than ever at Newton's choicest location– The Gables, directly adjoining the Charles River Country Club.
The five distinctive styles range from a three bedroom, 3100 square foot home at $400,000 to a 1900 square foot two-bedroom at just $265,000* Exceptional values when you consider that today's average, yet very expensive, three bedroom home offers less than 1200 square feet, includes few or none of the amenities and certainly not the location of The Gables.
Homes feature unusual touches like soaring cathedral and Bermuda ceilings, a wonderful flow between rooms, unexpected fireplaces in kitchens and master bedrooms, attached two-car garages with direct indoor access, large very private deck and/or courtyard areas, and full basements. There's a private clubhouse overlooking a sunning area, swimming pool, whirlpool, and two tennis courts.
Models are open every day from 9 to 5 at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets, Newton. Telephone (617) 969-0200 for an appointment.

Mrs. Jonathan Philipson

Elizabeth R. Salvucci weds Jonathan Philipson

Elizabeth R. Salvucci of Syracuse, N.Y., became the bride of Dr. Jonathan Philipson, also of Syracuse, on May 29.

The double ring ceremony took place at Hendricks Chapel on the campus of Syracuse University. The Honorable Hugh R. Jones of the State of New York officiated. A reception followed at West Hill Country Club in Camillus, N.Y.

The bride is the daughter of Anthony "Sal" and Lorraine Salvucci of West Newton. The groom is the son of Benjamin and Syra Philipson of Utica, N.Y.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of satin and lace. She fashioned her own veil.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Anne Chagnon of Medway, sister of the bride.

Serving as best man for his brother was Dr. Elliot Philipson of Cleveland, Ohio.

Bridesmaids were the bride's sisters, Gina, Lisa and Maria Salvucci, all of Newton.

Flower girls were the bride's niece, Jennifer Chagnon of Medway, and the groom's niece, Rebecca Philipson of Cleveland.

Ushers were David Jones of Syracuse, Dr. Jeffrey Rey of Manhattan Beach, Cal., and Dr. Todd Gehr of Syracuse.

Ring bearer was the bride's nephew, Michael Chagnon of Medway.

Following a wedding trip to Captiva Island, Fla., the couple will be living in Pittsburgh at the end of June.

The bride is a 1977 graduate of the State University of New York Medical Center's School of Nursing. She recently received her bachelor of science degree in nursing from SUNY's College of Technology.

She is a registered nurse in the emergency department of Irving Memorial Hospital in Syracuse.

Her husband is a graduate of Union College and the University of Rome School of Medicine, where he received his degree in 1979. He did his residency in medicine at the Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse, where he is a physician in the department of medicine.

He will be doing a fellowship in nephrology at University-Presbyterian Hospital in Pittsburgh.

September wedding planned for Beth Lloyd, David Engelsman

Beth Ann Lloyd

Rev. and Mrs. Barry V. Lloyd of Lowell announce the engagement of their daughter, Beth Ann, to David Stewart Engelsman, son of Mrs. Francis J. Rice of Auburndale and Mr. Alan D. Engelsman of St. Louis, Mo.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Keith Hall in Lowell and is attending the University of Lowell. She is employed by Chelmsford Physical Therapy.

Her fiance is a 1974 graduate of Newton High School and is employed as an area supervisor with the Wendworth Corporation.

A September wedding is planned.

Carolyn Berg of Florida plans marriage to Harvey Meinstein

NEWTON CENTRE — Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Berg of Dudley Road, Newton Centre, announce the engagement of their daughter Carolyn, of Hallandale, Fla, to Harvey S. Meinstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry S. Meinstein of Hollywood, Fla.

Ms. Berg holds a degree from the Boston University Graduate School of Education in early childhood education. Mr. Meinstein attended Georgia Tech and holds a degree in business administration from the University of South Florida.

A July wedding is planned.

Jennifer Lynn Nelson to marry Dr. Richard Brooks Bloomfield

NEWTON CENTRE — Mr. and Mrs. Harold Nelson of Gravesleigh Terrace, Pittsfield, announce the engagement of their daughter, Jennifer Lynn, to Dr. Richard Brooks Bloomfield, son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Bloomfield of Kenmore Street, Newton Centre.

A wedding is planned for July 2, at First Church of Christ Congregational in Pittsfield.

A graduate of Taconic High School and Colby College, Miss Nelson spent her junior college year at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark. She is a research assistant at Trinity Investments Management Corporation in Boston. Miss Nelson's father is vice-president and general manager of Unistress Corporation.

Dr. Bloomfield is a graduate of the Rivers School, the University of New Hampshire, and received a doctor of veterinary medicine degree in May from Tufts University School of Veterinary Medicine.

His father, a retired clinical associate professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School, is a clinical associate professor of medicine at Boston University Medical School.

Choices for Living in new location

NEWTON — Choices For Living, an information and advisory service, providing information on long-term care, alternative housing, and nursing homes, recently moved from Cooperative Metropolitan Ministries to West Suburban Elder Services.

Choices For Living services residents of the eight West suburban communities, and to residents of the Framingham-Natick, Malden-Medford, and Dedham-Walpole areas on a limited basis.

Information about 150 nursing and rest homes, plus alternative housing services is published in four guides. The guides are available for a nominal postage and handling fee through West Suburban Elder Serives.

Information on Choices For Living, is availabe at 969-0170.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Cullen Jr.

Karen Elaine Cox bride of George F. Cullen Jr.

NEWTON CENTRE — Karen Elaine Cox of Needham became the bride of George F. Cullen Jr. of Newton Centre in a double ring ceremony May 14 at Sacred Heart Church.

Rev. Msgr. William A. Granville officiated at the wedding. A reception followed at the Sheraton-Tara in Braintree.

The bride is the granddaughter of Eugene J. and Jennie Sarnie of Newton Centre. The groom is the son of George F. and Dorothy Cullen of Newton Centre.

Given in marriage by her grandparents, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown which featured a sweetheart neckline and a slipper satin train with apron designed lace. The long sleeves ended in pointed cuffs. Her headpiece was a waist length veil with a tear drop front. The bride carried a bouquet of irises and white and yellow roses with to-the-floor greenery.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Sandra C. Palermo of Weymouth. Bridesmaid was the groom's sister, Patricia Cullen Silva of Newton.

Best man for his brother was Lawrence Cullen of Newton Centre. Ushers were Dean S. Kahr, the bride's brother, and David Cullen, the groom's brother, both of Newton Centre.

The bride is a 1975 graduate of Newton South High School and a 1977 graduate of Aquinas Junior College. She is a legal secretary.

The groom is a 1974 graduate of Newton South High and a graduate of Newton Junior College. He works in the computer division of New England Telephone Co.

Following a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will live in Needham.

Mr. and Mrs. David Goldberg

Janet T. Daly is bride of Stephen L. Mazzarini

NEWTON CENTRE — Janet T. Daly of Newton Centre became the bride of Stephen L. Mazzarini of Waltham recently at Sacred Heart Church of Newton Centre.

Rev. Michael F. Doocey, pastor of Mary Immaculate of Lourdes Parish, Newton Upper Falls, officiated. For the double ring ceremony, the altar was decorated with baskets of peach gladiolas and white carnations.

A reception followed at Fantasia in Cambridge.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Daly of Newton Centre, was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory gown by Priscilla which featured an empire bodice, portrait neckline and long, tapered sleeves of ivory English net appliqued with ivory alencon lace. The molded A-line skirt and chapel train were of ivory satin with appliques scattered along the hemline and a lace border of alencon lace circled the hem. A long ivory lettuce-edged chapel mantilla with alencon lace on the back of the veiling was held by a Juliet cap trimmed with matching lace. She carried a bouquet of white gardenias, Faberge roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

The bride's cousin, Joyce Gilroy of Newton Centre, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were the groom's sister, Paula Mazzarini of Waltham, the bride's cousin, Rosemarie Vespa of Newton Centre, and Colleen DeAmicis of Waltham.

Best man was the groom's cousin, Robert DeAmicis Jr. of Waltham. Serving as ushers were Thomas Mazzarini and Michael Mazzarini, both of Waltham and both brothers of the groom, and Darrell Stamper of Waltham.

The bride is a graduate of Sacred Hearth High School and Framingham State College. She is a bookkeeper for Lumber Mutual Insurance Co.

The groom is a graduate of Waltham High School and is employed as an aircraft pump technician for W.H. Nichols Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen L. Mazzarini

Barbara Steinberg weds David Goldberg of Waban

NEWTON - Barbara Steinberg and David R. Goldberg were married recently at the Jewish Community Center in White Plains, New York.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jules Steinberg of White Plains. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris I. Goldberg of Waban.

Both the bride and the groom are graduates of the University of Pennsylvania. She is a former physical therapist at the Burke Rehabilitation Center in White Plains. The groom holds a business degree and is associated with the International Manufacturing Company in Boston.

The couple's wedding reception was held at the Ridgeway Country Club. They will live in Brookline following a trip to Italy.

Elizabeth Horan is engaged to Gerard E. Leehan

Mr. and Mrs. Albert R. Horan of Sharon announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth J., to Gerard E. Leehan of Newton, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Leehan.

Miss Horan, known as "Busy," is a 1978 graduate of Sharon High School. Mr. Leehan is a 1976 graduate of Newton South High School. Both are employed by LTX Corp. in Westwood.

A May, 1984 wedding is planned.

Elizabeth Horan

Welcome, Elizabeth Marie

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Turner of Rangeley Road, West Newton, announce the birth on May 22 of their daughter, Elizabeth Marie, at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton.

Chief Quinn suggests teen party guidelines

NEWTON — June is traditionally a month of teenage parties, with graduations, proms and end of the school year get togethers.

Police Chief William F. Quinn has formulated a set of basic guidelines which will be useful to people hosting such parties.

Chief Quinn states that proper pre-planning of a party is often the key to a successful one. An invitation list should be agreed upon in advance by the host and his or her parents.

Open parties can be extremely difficult to monitor and there is always danger that it will grow too large too quickly and the host could lose control. The host should also know in advance how each guest is to return home from the party.

Any parent whose child has been invited to a private house party is encouraged to call the host in advance and inquire about the nature of the party and what ground rules are being set. Parents sometimes feel that their child must attend if he or she has received an invitation, however a more reasonable decision can be made oncee the invitee knows what to expect.

Parents should either be present at parties hosted in their home or have another responsible adult present and visible. Quinn emphasizes that most of these parties stem from major events in a teenager's life and during such celebration's the teen looks to an older person for both organization and guidance. Quinn points out that often Newton party givers engage a police officer, for a nominal charge, whose presence alone can set the proper atmosphere for the party.

The chief recognizes that a prime concern of both law enforcement people and parents is the use of alcohol by persons who are not of legal age.

In Massachusetts the legal age is twenty. Party givers should be aware that by law, any person–adult or minor, leaving his/her property intoxicated, whether or not served by the party giver, can be held liable if any mishap should occur.

Of equal concern to house parties are those teenage functions held outside a private residence such as junior and senior proms. The same guidelines can be utilized. It is advised that parents know where the funtion is to be held, who the student will be with, and what transportation arrangements have been made.

The Newton Community Center, 492 Waltham St., West Newton, 969-5906, is offering to provide transportation, free of charge, to any high school student who does not have a safe ride home from a prom. In addition, Newton Police, the MDC and State Police and other municipal police departments will be patrolling all major highways on both the south and north shore, particularly after the proms have ended.

Sisterhood Temple Emanuel lectures

Prof. Gila Ramras-Rauch, a member of the faculty of the Hebrew College in Brookline, will lecture on "Women in the narrativew part of the Bible," in four, one-hour sessions for the Siterhood Temple Emanuel Summer Lecture Series. Prof. Ramras-Rauch, a native of Israel, received her masters degree from Hunter College, N.Y., and her Ph.D. at Bar Ilan University in Israel. As associate professor at Hebrew College, she teaches modern Hebrew literature and comparative literature. Dates of lectures are as follows: June 21, "In the begining - two accounts of the creation of the Woman;" June 28, "The matriarch;" July 5, "Tamar;" July 12, "Ruth." Each session will be held at Temple Emanuel in Newton at 9:30 a.m. The registration fee is $5 for Sisterhood members and $6 for non-members. For further information call 332-5770.

ODYSSEY, new name, more selections

NEWTON — Since 1980, students in Newton Community Schools EXPLORE program have spent their summer vacations discovering computers, foreign languages, rock climbing and canoeing.

According to Coordinator Bob Malagodi, students will have the same opportunity again this year with two changes: the program's name has been changed to ODYSSEY and there is a greater selection of course offerings from which to choose.

"ODYSSEY is the culmination of three years' work in the field of providing summer and Saturday educational supplements for academically talented students in grades 4-8," noted Malagodi. " This year, we have also increased course offerings from 21 to 34. We are also making to program available to a greater number of students and enrollment is still open on a limited basis."

From the 34 electives, students will ultimately take four classes from a list that includes computers, photography, problem solving, logic, creative writing, Latin, painting, chemistry and match.

All students will participate in an outdoor program component called DAYBREAK. Based on the outdoor educational model of Outward Bound, DAYBREAK utilizes physical expeditions and obstacle tests to build confidence and group skills among participants.

Faculty for ODYSSEY will include graduate students at local universities, teachers of the gifted from Newton and surrounding communities and topic specialists from the Newton area.

ODYSSEY will run for two three-week sessions: July 5-23 and August 1-19. Tuition for each session is $205.00. Community Schools is accepting applications for scholarship aid on a limited basis.

The program will meet at Temple Shalom in West Newton from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

To find out more about this program, call Newton Community Schools at 552-7118.

Faulty bus brakes blamed in accident

NEWTON — A police investigation has concluded that defective brakes were the cause of a a Newton school bus's brakes were defective and that caused an accident here May 27 between the bus and three other vehicles.

Police traffic division Capt. John Bartinelli said the this week that tests on the Superior bus owned by Commonwealth Coach Co. showed that its brakes were not working.

Mark Devito, the man driving the bus the day of the accident said the brakes "went to the floor" when he tried to stop after driving off the Massachusetts Turnpike ramp into Newton Corner. DeVito said he then tried the emergency brake and that, too, failed.

The bus hit a car driven by Agnes Paglia, 53, of Needham, knocking it into another car and a mail truck before Paglia's car careened across Centre Avenue and into a wall. Each of the driver's suffered minor injuries.

Four students also suffered minor injuries. Each was treated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital and released.

Police said the bus was returning with 40 children and their teacher from a field trip to Drumlin Farm in Lincoln when the mishap occurred. The children attend the Underwood Elementary School.

Police said no traffic citations will be issued in connection with the mishap.

Man hurt in crash

NEWTON — A 21-year-old Eden Avenue man suffered "serious injuries" when his car ran off Auburndale Avenue into a Boston Edison pole early Sunday, police said.

Donald J. Troy Jr. of 42 Eden Ave. on Sunday night was listed in fair condition in the intensive care unit of Newton-Wellesley Hospital according to a hospital spokeswoman.

According to police, Troy was driving east on Auburndale Avenue about 2:20 a.m. when his car went off the road and hit the pole in front of 65 Auburndale Ave. Troy was alone in the car at the time of the accident.

Police said the accident remains under investigation.

Jewelry stolen

NEWTON — An estimage $4000 and an undetermined amount of jewelry was reported stolen from a Commonwealth Avenue home following a burglary, police said.

A resident of the home returned about 3:15 p.m. last Thursday and went to his bedroom 15 minutes later to find it ransacked.

In addition to the cash and jewels, a large amount of sterling silver was stolen from a dining room but it was found crammed into a plastic bag outside the home.

Police said the burglar forced sliding glass windows to gain enntrance.

Alarm stops break

NEWTON — Someone broke into a Gordon Road home but may have been scared off by a burglar alarm late Saturday, police said.

Police received a report of a burglar alarm sounding in the Gordon Road area at 10:12 p.m. Saturday. After zeroing in on the alarm, police discovered that three windows had been broken and a screen had been cut by someone who broke it but triggered the alarm. Nothing appeared to have been stolen.

Exposer reported

NEWTON — Police are on the lookout for a white man believed to be about 40 who exposed himself to two adolsecent girls and then chased them late Saturday, police said.

The girls, ages 13 and 15, outran the exposer. The exposer eluded a police search.

The girls were walking on Waltham Street at Annapolis Street when the man came out of some bushes with his pants down. The girls ran and he ran after them. The man only chased them a short distance and did not speak to the girls, who reported the incident at 11:03 p.m.

The man has dark hair and possibly had a beard, and he was wearing a white tee shirt and dark pants at the time of the incident.

Flasher reported

NEWTON — A man of about 30 exposed himself to a 14-year-old girl walking along a path off Wheeler Road, police said.

The suspect is described as white, about 170 pounds and has curly brown hair.

Police said the girl was walking along the path by a field Thursday when the man wearing blue running shorts who also was on the path, exposed himself to her.

There were no further details about the incident.

Heating pad causes fire

NEWTON — A faulty heating pad is being blamed for a fire in the Crystal Lake Nursing Home, 38 Lake St., that injured one resident and forced the evacuation of a dozen more, according to police.

Marguerite Jessup, the occupant of the second-floor room where the fire began, was taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital for treatment of burns on her hands.

The fire was reported at 11:58 p.m. Friday, causing three engines companies and two ladder trucks to speed to the nursing home. Firefighters and police evacuated a dozen residents of the building before Asst. Fire Chief Bernard Goulding declared the fire extinguished early Saturday.

Elderly man hurt

NEWTON — A 66-year-old Mague Avenue man was taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital after his car and another collided at Paulson Street and Gordon Road, police said.

Rosmond Rodriguez of 5 Mague Ave. suffered a possibly broken right arm and a broken nose in the collision.

According to police, Sherwin Teinhandler, 48, of 41 Windermere Rd. was turning from Paulson Street onto Gordon Road when Rodriguez was driving east on Gordon Road and their cars collided.

No traffic citations were issued for the mishap.

Home burglarized

NEWTON — Someone broke into a Parker Street home during the night and stole a wallet, $37, and a keyring with two keys, according to a report received by police.

Car radio taken

NEWTON — Someone broke into a car parked at Antonellis Automotive Service, 23 Riverdale Ave. and stole a radio/cassette of undetermined value, according to a report received by police.

Camp set for special needs kids

NEWTON — The Newton Guidance Clinic will sponsor a new day camp called The Day Club in Newton for children ages 9½ to 12.

The camp is designed for those who need extra help working through social or emotional difficulties. The program has been specially designed to help youngsters in the areas of self-esteem, ability to share, ability to work cooperatively with others, capacity to control impulses, willingness to seek help, capacity to express feelings appropriately and ability to make and be friends.

"The day camp has two unique features," says Bob Ditter, the psychologist and American Camping Association consultant, who developed the camp. "First of all there will be ongoing contact with parents, so that they can follow their child's progress throughout the summer, as well as give us feedback about how they see their child doing at home."

"That's because this is a program that is aimed at helping kids work, not just on things like swimming skills, but to really look at how they feel about themselves and get along with other kids," he said.

The camp's other goal is for parents to have contact with the child's school to see what social skills the child has mastered and what things he needs to work on. At the end of the summer, there is a progress report and do a follow-up.

"Kids are working on important issues during the school year, like getting along with other kids and how they feel about themselves, and then lose ground over the summer," Ditter said. "This program, designed with parents and the school in mind, is aimed at not only helping kids hold on to gains made during the year, but to help them continue to make progress."

Activities include snorkeling, ropes course, aerobic danicng, day trips, scuba diving, arts and crafts, games and sports. The staff is experiencced in camping as well as child group work, activity therapy and family dynamics. Total enrollment will be 16, with a staff-camper ratio of 1:4.

The Day Club in Newton will run seven weeks from July 5 - Aug. 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuition is $10 - 92/week depending on family income. For applications or further information, call Peter Szuch or Gail Bennett at 969-4925at the Newton Guidance Clinic.

The Newton Guidance Clinic is located at 64 Eldredge St., Newton Corner and provides individual, group, and family therapy to children and families of Newton. Fees are based on family income and no one is refused service because of inability to pay. Insurance and Medicaid pay some fees. The Clinic is supported by the Department of Mental Health, the City of Newton, United Way, and local contributions. For help with a child related problem, call 969-4925.

Burglary reported

NEWTON — A burglar apparently crawled into a Garland Road home through an opened window and stole Royal Doulton figurines and jewelry, police said. The value of thd stolen items was not immediately known.

Hotel room robbed

NEWTON — While a woman staying at the Susse Chalet, 160 Boylston St., was using the hotel swimming pool, someone broke into her room and stole more than $165 worth of her belongings, police said.

Reported stolen was a $75 black leather briefcase, $50 in heads, a $40 blue jacket and a hair dryer of undetermined value.

"The active family store."

Two mothers to testify in D.C. on dermatolgy

NEWTON — Two Newton mothers, Deborah Altschuler and Leslie Kenney, will travel to Washington, D.C. to testify before the Dermatology Advisory Committee of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

The FDA will address a petition by Consumers Union to ban lindane products for human use. Lindane is the pesticidal ingredient in a widely-used prescription remedy for lice and scabies.

Kenney and Altschuler are co-founders of Parents Against Lice, Inc. (PAL), a non-profit health education agency which assists parents and local health personnel to deal with outbreaks of parasitic infestations among school children. PAL also advocates the safe use of all lice remedies — both prescription and over-the-counter.

PAL evolved out of a discovery that head lice epidemics throughout the United States mena that millions of children are treated each year with toxic shampoos, creams and lotions with few safety guidelines, the co-founders said. Altschuler and Kenney said that parents are being misled to believe that such products are simple to use and risk free. They said parents are using applications of pesticidal products improperly because of ambiguous package directions.

On June 13, the FDA will discuss prescription lindane products. Altschuler and Kenney will present evidence to convince th FDA to mandate immediate improvements in directions and labeling.

DeNucci goes before House, testifies on disability problem

NEWTON — Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci (D. Newton-Waltham), House Chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, appeared before the U.S. House Select Committee on Aging in Boston to discuss the problems of disabled persons being dropped from social security. The Committee, which met in the State House, was chaired by Cong. Barney Frank (D. Newton).

DeNucci told Frank's committee his office had been flooded with calls from disabled persons charging they were unfairly being denied disability benefits. DeNucci noted that after reviewing some of the problems he and his co-chairman, Sen. Jack H. Backman (D. Brooklin-Newton) filed legislation to establish a Special Commission to investigate the state disability service.

The Special Commission, after several hearings, documented very serious problems relative to the quality of medical reviews and procedures followed by the State agency which does disability determinations. Working with the Governor, the Secretary of Human Services and the Commissioner of the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission new procedures were developed to improve services.

Mayor to name park course

NEWTON - Mayor Theodore D. Mann and Recreation Commissioner Russell J. Halloran will name the Exer-Trail Course at New Cold Spring Park on June 17 at 6 p.m. in memory of Leonard Adelman.

Adelman moved to Savannah, Georgia where he was killed in the line of police duty along with his partner on February 24, 1980. His home abutts the back of the park. He was interested in public service in the area.

The 4th of July is coming!

SPONSORED BY THE NEEDHAM EXCHANGE CLUB

So make plans now to be in Needham July 3rd and 4th for a gala 24 hour celebration. It all begins Sunday, July 3rd with a baked bean supper followed by the Miss Needham Contest and the finale – a stirring tribute to the USA by the United States Coast Guard Band. On Monday, July 4th, innumerable events are highlighted by a two-hour long parade featuring the US Coast Guard (from New London, CT.,) marching units, clowns, floats, bands, the Boston Police Motorcycle Drill Team, flag-waving color guards...the whole works.

PLEASE!...help the Needham Exchange Club make it all a smashing success by responding generously to our appeal for financial help. We do it all for you...and without you we couldn't do it at all.

THANKS

The Exchange Club of Needham plans, organizes and runs the 4th Celebration, the biggest holiday of the year . . . and solely underwrites its cost. While the Board of Selectmen and Town Agencies provide vital support elements, its financial support and success consists of donations from citizens and local business.

For 35 consecutive years Needham folk have responded to the Exchange Club's appeal for help to make the celebration better and better. The Budget is more tham $25,000!

Please be generous. Send in your check for at least $3.00 . . . . more if you can. WEAR YOUR TICKET PROUDLY FOR THE 4TH.

Racquetball tourney

Nathanson tops Class B at nationals

By Elliott M. Loew
Special to the Graphic

NEWTON — Almost everyone dreams of being the best at something. We all know, though, that dreams almost never come true. However, if you are Mitchell Nathanson, a 15-year-old sophomore at Newton North High School, not only are you the best at something, you are the U.S. National Champion.

During the Memorial Day Weekend at the U.S. Open National Raquetball Championships in Houston, the son of Nate and Roberta Nathanson of Centre Street in Newton Highlands won the Men's Class "B" tournament championship, beating some of the best players in the country to earn the national title.

The Men's "B's" is the second highest division in tournament play, second only to the men's "Open" division.

"This was the most competitive national tournament ever", according to Luke St. Onge, tournament director and Executive Director of the American Amatuer Raquetball Association, (AARA), which sanctions all major raquetball tournaments. "We had over 750 total entries in 24 divisions, including men's and women's wheelchair divisions (highlights on ESPN). There were over 190 entries in the B's, including many open players who quualified and chose to play in both divisions, making the compettition in the B's very, very, tough." St. Onge also noted that only one player younger than Mitch was entered in the tournament.

Mitchell's climb to the top was not easy. The hard hitting southpaw posted victories in five rounds of the preliminary matches to qualify for the semi-finals. In national competition, each match is a best two-out-of-three game series. The first two games are played to 21 points, and the third game, if neccesary, called the "tie breaker", is a game to 11. His third round opponent, Kevin Quarantello from New Jersey, took Mitch to the tie-breaker. Down 8-10, Mitch survived match point by returning a tough serve with a spectacular return for a winner off the front wall. That shot seemed to spark Mitch's comeback, and he won the tie-breaker, 11-10, to advance.

In the semi-finals, Mitch beat Chris Buckner, a Florida champion, 21-10, 15-21, 11-0 to advance to the finals on Monday (Memorial Day) morning. After losing the first game of the finals, 8-21, to Peter Wong, (a member of the seven-time national collegiate champion Memphis State team), Mitch roared back, scoring 11 straight points to turn a 10-17 deficit into a second game victory, 21-17, forcing the match to go the tie-breaker. Mitch jumped out to a quick 8-0 lead, and won the tie-breaker in convincing fashion, 11-6, to win the national title.

According to St. Onge, Mitch is the youngest national Men's B champion ever.

Upon his arrival at Logan Airport, Mitchell's current sponsor, Nick Maggio of Winthrop, also a well respected raquetball player, said he "couldn't believe" that Mitch had won the tournament. "I've watched Mitchell progress over the last few months but never thought he would be able to do so well in such a short time. We are very proud that he did so well, representing Massachusetts as a true champion." Maggio was referring to the fact that Mitchell has been playing raquetball for only three years. But the proudest person at the airport was Mitchell's dad who said he "knew all along" that Mitchell had what it would take to win. "He is a tough competitor and when he sets his mind on his game he can be unbeatable."

When asked what he thought was the single most important factor which led to his natioanl title, Mitch said, "Mr. Swain. If he had not been there to give me so much needed, expert advice at crucial points along the way, there would have been no title." Bob Swain is the father of the current State and Regional Men's open and junior champion Cliff Swain, a 16 year junior at Braintree High.

Mitchell's next competition will be at the Junior National Championships at Fishkill, New York, June 25-29. There, the best junior players in the country (18 years old and under) will compete for the junior national title. Mitch will have his hands full, though, because some of the best players in the country are juniors, including his good friend, Cliff Swain. In addition to Nathanson and Swain, the Junior Nationals will feature, such top talent as Ray Navarro from El Paso, Texas, and Andy Roberts from Memphis Tennesee, any of whom could earn the national junior title. The winner of the junior national tournament will also earn a spot on the U.S. National Team which competes internationally.

It has been a long season for the Nathansons, and during the summer Mitch plans to take a break from his rigorous raquetball schedule and concentrate his efforts on playing baseball with the Abruzzi club of the Newton International League. And, at least for a while, Mitchell and his family can relax, savor the victory, the national title and know that sometimes dreams can come true.

Lion nine exits tourney

NEWTON — The Newton South baseball season came to a disappointing close Saturday afternoon, losing 9-2 to Randolph in the opening round of the EMass Division I South Sectional Tournament.

The Lions simply had an off day, but in a single elimination tourney, an off day brings the year to an abrupt end. The baseball loss finished one of the best seasons in the history of Newton South athletics.

The loss to Randolph closed an otherwise excellent year (13-4, second place in the competitive Dual County League). A talent laden ball club, the Lions were expected to be in the thick of the tournament fight to the end.

The Blue Devils caught the Lions by surprise, as they sprayed hits all around the Newton South Athletic Field. Randolph pitcher Jon Panasuk held South in check, allowing just two hits in the first seven innings before tiring in the eighth.

Lion starter Joe Spagnuolo did not pitch as badly as the box score would indicate. On numerous occasions Randolph batters got hits after Spagnuolo had been ahead on the count. Also, many of the Blue Devils' 13 safeties came on pitches that, on an ordinary day would have fooled the opposition. In the words of Lion coach Neil McPhee, "They had a day, and we didn't."

Randolph took the lead for good in the top of the first inning. Leadoff batter Chris Norton (3 for 6) singled up the middle on an 0-2 delivery, setting the tone of the entire day. Norton advanced to second, and then third, on two wild pitches. Matt Fallon drew a walk. Chuck Goldman singled in Norton with what proved to be the game winning run. Fallon took third on the play. Chris Mercandanto reached first on a wild pitch third strike, loading the bases. Bob Rozelle was hit by a pitch, scoring Fallon. It appeared that Spagnuolo would get out of the frame without any further damage, as he got Mike Hennessey to pop out, and he struck out Bruce Levine. But he issued a free pass to John Sullivan, to score Goldman. Jon Panasuk struck out (Spagnuolo's third "K" in the inning), but the Blue Devils had already taken a 3-0 lead before the Lions knew what had hit them.

Panasuk had some control problems in the early going, walking the bases loaded in the bottom of the first inning, but he got himself out of the jam by throwing out Steve Altman at first on a grounder to the mound. He was in no trouble again until the eighth, yielding just a bloop single to Ed Murray in the second, and a seeing-eye grounder to Spagnuolo in the fifth.

One of the few bright moments for the Lions came in the second, with one out and Norton on second base. Goldman hit a hard shot to third, which Altman stopped on a beautiful backhanded play. He looked the runner back to the bag, and fired over to Evan Kushner at first base to get the batter. Norton broke towards third when Altman released the ball. Kushner threw the ball back to Altman, who tagged out the runner to complete the double play.

The Blue Devils blew the game wide open in the fifth, tallying four more runs to take a commanding 7-0 lead. Goldman led off with a triple over the left fielder's head. Mercandanto reached second on a throwing error, as Goldman scored. After Rozelle flied out, Hennessey singled home Mercandanto, and took second when the right fielder misplayed the ball. Levine then doubled home another run. Back-to-back singles by Panasuk and Norton brought in Levine with Randolph's seventh run.

Newton South finally broke Panasuk's shutout in the eighth. With one out, Jerry Marcus beat out a bunt hit. Mark Paglia singled Marcus to third. Mark Nicoletti then hit Newton South's first, and last, triple of the season to score both runners.

Individual runs in the sixth and seventh frames off of Lion reliever Bill Bracken completed the scoring. The summary:

RANDOLPH(9)- Norton 6-3; Fallon 4-1; Goldman 6-2; Mercandanto 5-0; Rozelle 2-1; Higgins 1-0; Hennessey 3-2; Levine 5-2; Sullivan 3-0; Farragher 1-0; Panasuk 5-2.

NEWTON SOUTH(2)- Spagnuolo 5-1; Marcus 2-1; Paglia 3-1; Nicoletti 3-1; Kushner 3-0; Altman 4-0; Stoller 4-0; Rosman 4-0; Murray 2-1; Bracken 2-0.

Concord outguns Tigers to take lacrosse crown

By Steve Tiberi
Staff Writer

CONCORD — If you have to lose in the state finals, it might as well be to a deserving winner.

Newton North lacrosse coach Rick Clark was disappointed, but realistic about his team's 10-3 loss to defending champ Concord-Carlisle Thursday evening in the EMass State finals at Concord.

"They were in control for the entire game," said Clark, whose team finished with a 15-3 record on the year. "We just didn't get to the ground balls quick enough. We made some adjustments, but they were just playing to well. They've beaten us twice this year and each time they played good lacrosse.

"This loss doesn't detract from our season," said Clark. "We had a great year and one game isn't going to spoil it. I'm very proud of these kids they did a great job and have nothing to be ashamed of."

The game started out well for the Tigers. Junior attacker Tom Ryan made a brilliant individual move to beat Concord goalie Dan O'Neil with a bounce shot at the 1:15 mark. That would be the extent of the scoring for the Tigers until the fourth period.

Concord took over offensively for the next two periods. The Patriots did a good job of controlling the ball and breaking up Newton North's efforts to clear.

"You can't always be playing defense against Concord," said Clark. "They have too many good midfielders that will wear you down. They just kept coming at us and if wasn't for Ed (goalie Ed Cohen) we would of been out of this game in the first half."

Cohen was his usual masterful self in the nets. The senior made five outstanding stops in the first period alone. He used every part of his body to block, defect and smother whatever Concord would throw at him in the first half. He was at the top of his game.

"This is just another game which proves Ed is the best goalie around," Clark said. "You've got to give him the credit. They had the chances, but he took them right away from them."

After the early Newton North goal, Concord's offense started to churn out some shots. The Patriots were moving the ball well, but Cohen was able to follow the passes and on two occasions stifle the shooters. The Patriots tied the game on a goal in an extra-man situation.

Brad Lucido, who scored five goals in the first Newton North-Concord game, put in the first Concord score. Lucido snared a pass from Paul Johansen and ripped a shot past Cohen into the top corner. Ed had no chance on the play.

The Newton North offense could muster just two shots on Concord in the first period. Concord started the second period with a strong offensive surge, but Cohen was right there to make two brilliant stops at point blank range.

The Tigers had a chance when John Callahan fired from in close. The ball was blocked, however, and it led to a Concord fast break and the second Concord goal. Roy Okurowski broke down the middle of the field with the ball and he flipped it quickly to Patrick Cain, who passed it in front to Skip Fatkin. Cohen came out, but Fatkin bounced it passed him.

The half ended with Newton North trailing, 2-1, but still in the game. The Tigers would have to come out and play aggressive. Concord's offensive dominance of the first half began to take its toll in the second half.

The Patriots slammed in five straight goals to take command of the contest in the third period. Chris Shanley paced the scoring outburst with two goals. Shane Kielmeyer, Johansen and Cain also scored for the Patriots in the third period.

Newton North had a chance to break the Concord offensive momentum in the third period, but the crossbar got into the way. Ryan had the ball in front with his back facing the goal. He tried to flip a shot into the net. The ball got by Concord's O'Neil, but it hit the crossbar and bounced away.

The Tigers faced the nearly-impossible challenge of coming back from a 7-1 deficit against Concord. The Tigers tried to start their way back when Ennio Manto took a pass from Tim Mulvey and rifled a shot by O'Neil.

Mulvey, who has been hampered throughout the tourney by a bruised thigh, made a great rush to score the final Newton North goal of the season. Mulvey possesses a tremendous shot and he beat O'Neil cleanly.

Newton North 6, Lincoln 5

An entire season of toil, sweat and pain had wound down to a short two minutes. It suddenly became a matter of which side had enough left to give that little extra to come out on top.

The Newton North lacrosse team gathered itself to pump in a pair of goals in the final minutes to squeeze out a 6-5 triumph over Lincoln-Sudbury last Tuesday afternoon in the semi-finals of the MIAA EMass tourney.

It was Newton's North first victory over Lincoln in three seasons. The Tigers had lost to the Warriors, 11-10, earlier in the year and were defeated, 11-9, last season. They settled the score Tuesday.

Against Lincoln, the score was knotted, 4-4, with the two minutes to go. The Tigers called a timeout to set up a play. Newton North worked the play well, but Tim Brandon was robbed by Lincoln-Sudbury goalie Tom Reiling.

As Reiling went to clear the ball, Newton North's Kyle Schiller cut in front and stole the pass. Schiller, who had pumped in two goals in the first half, bounced the ball past Reiling to put the Tigers ahead.

Newton North increased its advanage to 6-4 just 30 seconds later. Schiller was behind the net and he hit George Claflin, who was standing 15 feet in front of the net. Claflin ripped a shot shoulder high to beat Reiling.

The senior goalie Ed Cohen stopped 30 shots and he had the Lincoln players talking to themselves. His biggest saves of the game came in the latter stages of the fourth quarter. First, he robbed Lincoln's Jerome Croom, who had ripped a shot from 25 feet away.

His most spectacular stop of the game came with under five minutes to go. Lincoln's Dan Santangelo came out of a wild scramble with the ball and he was in alone on Cohen. Santangelo went to fire high, but Cohen parried the shot and Newton North cleared it away.

The Tigers tied the contest at 2-2 in the second period. Schiller snagged a pass from Brandon and he came out from behind the net to put one past Reiling.

Auburndale Sports gets off to fast start

NEWTON — Auburndale Sports Shop scored six runs in the first two innings to edge by the Norumbega Chiefs, 7-6, last Thursday in a Newton National League game at Del Ryan field.

Rich Keyes started things out for Auburndale's three-run first inning with a single. He advanced to second on a passed ball. Keyes scored when Tom Lyons hit a single to left field.

Lyons stole second. went to third on a passed ball and made it home when Don Fox walked. The scoring for the inning was rounded out by Dino Leone who came in on another passed ball.

In the second Fox doubled to drive in a run and Paul Howley drove in two runs with a double to rightfield.

Auburndale's winning run was an RBI single hit by Danny Deverix.

Auburndale's defense was led by Lyons at shortstop when the Cheifs made a move in the fifth inning, scoring four runs before Auburndale retired the side.

Auburndale Sports 10, C & K 8

Auburndale Sports Shop opened up its National League season at Albemarle Field with a 10-8 win over C & K Components.

The score was tied 6-6 until the sixth inning when Paul Perruzi scored on a passed ball after a Rich Keys double knocked him to third base.

Tom Lyons followed with a walk and Don Fox singled to center scoring Keys and Lyons.

The last run of the inning came when John Stewart drove Fox in with a single.

C & K's big inning was the sixth. Bill Jordan walked and Dan Pill singled. They stole second and third and then scored on a pased ball.

Bill O'Connor and David Gish scored on a Todd Guber single to centerfield.

Mark Vilodeau drove in C & K's last two runs with a hit to centerfield.

Fifth graders throwing party for senior citizen writers group.

Young, old forge a new literary link

NEWTON - For Chet Krueger, it's "the greatest thing in my life."

For retired teacher Frances Freedman, it's "a kind of adoption."

And for six fifth graders at the Beethoven School, six weeks of sharing their poems and stories with a senior citizens' creative writing class both improved their writing and led to a greater understanding of aging.

"Before, I was just writing when people told me to," said ten year old Allyson Perry. "Now, I enjoy it."

Allyson recited an original poem about aging to an audience ranging in age from 10 to 80 last Friday in the school library. The poem began: "Age is a flower that blooms in the spring," and was met with a round of applause from those seated in a semicircle of yellow chairs."

Stephanie Silver summed up the feelings of her classmates when she declared, "Age is only a group of numbers that pile up on you."

And young Joe Andrews told those assembled that "when your mind is young, you can keep age just a bunch of numbers."

After the reading, the fifth graders threw a party for their older friends, complete with a loaf of bread baked by 67-year-old Antigone Emmanuel and a plate of Oreo cookies.

Dorothy Pfannenstiehl, 75, couldn't say enough good things about the children who shared their poems and stories. "I just love the sharing; their thoughts were just beautiful," she said.

Bill Schenk, 70, said participaing in the class "is bringing out valuable memories that have been buried for years. Every one of us has been affected the same way."

Despite the considerable difference in ages, the groups discovered a common bond in their writing. "No matter what age you are," said fifth grader Stephanie Silver, "you can all do the same things."

Car theft decrease expected at MBTA lots this summer

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON - Increased purchases of automobile security systems and tightened security at MBTA parking lots could lead to a decrease in car theft in Newton this summer, according to crime analyst John Donovan of the Newton Police Department.

"Quite a few" thefts have taken place in the past at the Riverside and other MBTA lots, said Donovan.

This summer, however, a different company is operating the lots, and is enforcing tighter security measures, according to MBTA spokesman Paul DiNatale.

"We require APCOA, INC., to provide security to prevent vandalism to or theft of cars, "said DiNatale, adding that APCOA seems to be doing a fine job since a contract with the Medford company was signed last February.

"We haven't received any complaints; there doesn't seem to be much of a problem" with car theft at the MBTA lots now, said DiNatale.

About a quarter of all cars stolen in Newton are taken from the parking lot at the Chestnut Hill Mall, said Donovan. "But there are probably three or four hundred thousand cars passing through that lot every month," he pointed out, "and one-fourth of twenty-eight cars stolen per month is only seven cars."

About thirty cars are stolen each month in Newton durinq June, July, and August, compared to about twenty-five per month during the rest of the year, he said.

Mazzio directs Carroll Center training

NEEDHAM — "My greatest satisfaction here is seeing the human spirit struggle and survive."

That's how Paula Mazzio, a longtime resident of Needham, described her recently completed first year as supervisor of the residential rehabilitation training program at the Carroll Center for the Blind in Newton.

Mazzio began work at the Carroll Center in 1978 as an intake worker and rehabilitative counselor. Although the Carroll Center is well-known nationally as a pioneering agency in training the blind for active main-stream lives, like many area residents she was not directly familiar with blindness.

"The first blind people I met were right here at the Carroll Center," she recalled. I felt awkward at first, but I soon discovered that blind people are people first."

A 1978 graduate of Boston University with an ME.d in Counseling Psychology, Mazzio worked at the Carroll Center for four years interviewing potential blind clients in their homes, counseling blind residents in the program and conducting speaking engagements on diabetes, a leading cause of new blindness. During that time she developed a fuller appreciation for the devastating impact of blindness on people's lives.

"People come here bitter, skeptical and depressed," she said. "Blindness is much more than simply the loss of vision. It is often the loss of one's job, one's privacy, one's dignity and one's independence."

Since June 1982, she has overseen the Carroll Center's residential rehabilitation training program where blind people from all over New England participate in a 16-week, intensive program of cane travel, daily living skills and communication techniques.

The program employs a holistic approach to rehabilitation, integrating classes in braille, typewriting, yoga, fencing, woodworking, housekeeping and mobility to reinforce skills and self-confidence. According to Mazzio, the live-in arrangement encourages clients to help and support one another, building a peer network and overcoming the social isolation that so often accompanies blindness. For Mazzio there is a tremendous professional reward as newly blinded adults make rapid progress towards rehabilitation.

"Where else could one see such physical, social and psychological adjustment in such a short period of time?" she said.

Mazzio serves as a board member of the American Association of Workers for the Blind. She has four daughters, one a recent college graduate, two in college and one attending high school in Needham.

We're big.
But don't let that fool you.

With assets of well over one billion dollars, Mutual Bank is one of the five biggest banks in Boston.

But if "big bank" calls up images of stone columns and even stonier faces, you don't know Mutual Bank.

You see, while we're a big bank, we're also a mutual bank. And that makes a great big difference.

Most of the big banks in Boston have stockholders to answer to—investors whose principal gauge of success is the performance of their stock. They care about Wall Street.

At Mutual Bank, we care about the way we perform on Franklin Street, Centre Street, Boylston Street and the 20 other locations where we come face-to-face with our customers.

That's what it means to be a mutual bank—no stockholders, just customers. Ours is a banking institution whose sole obligation is to its depositors and borrowers.

We think this difference shows in the responsiveness of our people—the quality of our products and services—the commitment of our resources to the betterment of the communities we're located in.

So if you think all big banks are the same, you don't just have the wrong impression.

You have the wrong bank.

Dennis C. Macro, vice president for institutional advancement at Bryant College in Smithfield, R.I., will become director of development at Boston College on July 1.

The appointment was announced by Dr. James P. McIntyre, vice president for university relations at Boston College.

Macro has been a vice president at Bryant College for the past three years. He replaces Karl Salathe, who left Boston College last summer to become executive vice president at Clark University in Worcester.

Macro served in the U.S. Army from 1959-60. He received his bachelor degree in sociology in 1967 and his M.B.A. in 1974 at Canisius College in Buffalo.

At Canisius College he was assistant director of development from 1971 to 1974 and director of alumni relations from 1974-76. He was director of alumni affairs and annual support programs from 1976-79 and then director of development at the University of Rhode Island until 1980, when he joined the administration of Bryant College.

Mark Volk, a Newton native and son of Mrs. Gerald Volk of Newton, received his M.D. degree from Loyola University Stritch School of Medicine on June 11. Dr. Volk is also a dentist. He is a graduate of Newton High School and Brandeis University.

Wendy L. Noyes of Newton has been promoted from acting vice president to vice president of student services at Framingham State College (FSC).

A member of the FSC staff since 1973, Noyes has served as associate dean of students, resident director of Larned Hall and director of Housing.

Enrolled in a doctoral program at Boston College, Noyes received her master's degree in counseling from the University of Bridgeport, Conn., and a bachelor's in English from Nasson College, Maine.

She hold memberships in the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators, the Massachusetts Association of Women Deans, Administrators and Counselors, and the Massachusetts College Personnel Association.

Charlotte Thompson, a science teacher at Day Junior High School in Newton, was among some 40 selected secondary school science teachers and department heads from throughout New England who recently attended a three-day laboratory safety course at Curry College in Milton.

The course was offered by the Health and Safety Committee of the Northeastern Section of the American Chemical Society. It was developed by the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) and is being supported by a $5,000 grant from the Cabot Corporation Foundation. Dr. James Kaufman of the Curry College science faculty is coordinator of the program.

Anita M. Granoff of Newton has been named Public Relations Coordinator for Project ReEntry, a career internship for women at the Career and Volunteer Advisory Service, Boston. Prior to joining the staff at Project ReEntry, Granoff was Publications Coordinator for The Artists Foundation, Inc.

Dr. A. Albert Krips of Chestnut Hill, a general practitioner in Mattapan, was honored by the Massachusetts Dental Society at its Annual Session for his 50 years of service to dentistry.

Krips graduated from Tufts University School of Dental Medicine in 1933 and began his practice in September 1933.

The New England Regional Office of the College Board announces the appointment of Grace H. Muscarella of Newton as director of student financial management for UMass at Boston.

Muscarella has served as director of student financial management for UMass/Boston since 1980. Prior to that appointment, she was associate director from 1976-80, and assistant director from 1974-76.

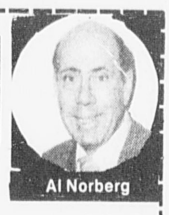
Kitchen and Bath

Design & Decor



When bathroom space is at a premium, compartmentalizing each fixture provides maximum utility. Often, for privacy, the toilet, itself, can be partitioned off from the rest of the room. In this way, two people can use the room at the same time and its efficiency is increased. Partitioning can be done with solid wall construction, dividers, sliding screens or other structures. Compartmentalizing a bathroom can also extend its use to include a washer-dryer area. In this case, existing water lines can be economically connected to the laundry equipment.

Though much attention is focused on utilization of cabinets in the kitchen area, such products can do much to enhance the bathroom space also. Style and decor can be created compatible with your preferences, needed storage space can be acquired and other functional considerations can be achieved. Turn old into new, dreams into reality and your home into the lifestyle of your choice. West Newton businesses eligible for loans

NEWTON — The state Executive Office of Communities and Development has approved the designation of West Newton Square as a Commercial Area Revitalization District (CARD), authorizing special, low-interest building loans to eligible neighborhood businesses.

"Businesses in West Newton are also now eligible to participate in various state mortgage insurance programs and the Massachusetts Urban Job Incentive Program," according to Mayor Theodore Mann.

The mayor emphasized, "The CARD approval is an important step in this administration's continuing efforts to revitalize commercial areas in the city. I am committed to revitalization of the West Newton commercial district for the benefit of West Newton and for the city as a whole."

The mayor explained that the designation was a result of an application prepared by the city's Economic Development Office, with the support of the Board of Aldermen and the Newton/Needham Chamber of Commerce.

Reaction to the CARD designation was mixed among West Newton businessmen. According to one Ward 3 alderman, some merchants in the square thought "revitalization" of the area would translate to even higher rents than they are already paying.

Other area businessmen said "revitalization" of the square would be for nought unless more parking were provided. A state grant of $96,000 for a new parking lot at the west end of the square has been sitting idle for months while the aldermen argued about how the lot should be designed.

Mann commented Tuesday that the plans for the West Newton lot have been "unnecessarily delayed."

A recently published list of parking ticket scofflaws revealed a disproportionate number work in or around West Newton Square. The lack of parking in the square was cited as the reason for so many tickets being issued there.

Three other CARD's have already been designated in Newton: Newton Corner, Nonantum and Pettee Square in Newton Upper Falls.

Residents honored at retirement dinner

BOSTON — Retiring employees of Boston University, including several Newton residents, were recently honored at a dinner in the University's George Sherman Union Ballroom. Also honored were those who have been employed for 25 years, and for ten years.

Retiring employees were presented with captain's chairs. "Perpetual-motion" clocks were given to those with 25 years of service, and silver Revere bowls were given to those with ten years of service.

The list of honored employees includes:

I. Alden Macchi of Roundwood Rd., Newton Upper Falls, 26 years in the College of Liberal Arts.

Robert L. Treese of Parker Ave., Newton, 27 years in the School of Theology.

Henry M. Goldman of Grant Ave., Newton Centre, 25 years in the School of Dentistry.

Kids rally for teacher

In addition to circulating a petition, the students approached William Jesdale, Brown school principal. Jesdale declined to comment on the students' action but said Reed is "a great teacher by everyone's admission."

Reed has been employed by Newton schools for 17 years. Several years ago he left the system and returned, but had lost his tenure, according to Alderman Creem.

Students also sent letters to letters to Mayor Theodore Mann and John Strand, school superintendent. Randall said Mann responded promptly to the students' letter and wrote that Dr. Thomas P. O'Conor, head of school personnel, "would take care of the matter in a positive way." O'Conor could not be reached for comment. Mann is unavailable for comment because he is attending a U.S. Conference of Mayors through this Friday.

Creem, who was contacted by the students, said the youngsters "had used all the proper channels" in their effort to keep Reed at the school.

"I was so impressed with these students," Creem said. "They did everthing very professionally. They went through all the proper channels."

Creem, who contacted School Committee Chairman Nancy Mann about the matter, said the school department may have been "more favorably disposed to someone who is appreciated" and that the students "should feel there was a benefit derived from their efforts."

"We feel really good about it," said Randall. "We feel like we did him a favor and the school a favor."

Randall said Reed was "very happy" when they learned he would remain at the school.

More asbestos woes in schools

played a major part" in the decision to remove asbestos on the lower floors of the high school. School committee member James Mnookin asked whether vandalism might become a factor on the fourth floor. "I find it perplexing that students on the first floor are vandals, and on the fourth floor they're angels. How can I bank on inconsistent behavior?"

Lyn Rossman, a teacher at Newton North, expressed her dismay at Spooner's news. "I don't recall even being told there was asbestos on the fourth floor. To come here tonight is very disheartening."

Recently, chunks of asbestos-containing material were found in "isolated areas" on the fourth floor, said Spooner. But, he said, these chunks may pose less of a danger than removal of the asbestos.

"The cure can be worse than the disease," he said, explaining that removal could contaminate the air with asbestos fibers.

School committee member Susan Sibley pointed out there was no known contamination resulting from asbestos removal on the lower floors of the high school. "If we've had three without contamination, she asked, is it like rolling the dice" to remove more asbestos?

"The science of asbestos is really not that far along," Spooner cautioned.

The school committee voted to remove the asbestos from the fourth floor of Newton North. Building commissioner James Cameron said the earliest removal would be next summer.

Just hours before last night's meeting, the committee received a memo from Roy Cornelius, Jr., Director of Support Services, stating that test on materials taken from the school indicated the presence of asbestos in varying amounts.

"We were given ten samples from two classrooms and a sample from the auditorium," said Spooner. "The prudent thing would be to take more samples" before making any decisions, he added.

The Massachussetts Legislative Commission on Asbestos examined Newton South in 1979, "but they were only looking for very friable material," said Spooner. "The commission was looking for sprayed-on fireproofing," not the plaster-like asbestos found at Newton South.

"Friability," he explained, "can be defined as, can the material be crumbled in your hand? Friability is subjective, to a point."

Cornelius described the condition of the material, which indicated a need for testing. "A couple of rooms have roof leaks, the material got wet and bunched up, and EPA regulations" mandated such material be tested for friability, he said.

The asbestos wasn't discovered sooner, said Spooner, because technology and expertise in asbestos discovery is still evolving.

The School Committee passed a motion to "request that the Mayor or his appropriate designee have further examination and testing done at South High School and recommend to the School Committee no later than mid Spetember what action should be taken for either removal or encapsulation of asbestos."

The Great Race began in Newton

Although reports are sketchey, it appears that a West German driver won a transcontinental road race that began in the Newton Marriott Hotel parking lot June 10.

Mike Schulman, public relations agent for the Newton Marriott, could only confirm that an unknown driver from the Federal Republic of Germany took the top prize of $10,000 for having the best elapsed time between Newton and San Diego, Ca. Other finishers split an additional $4,000, he said.

"When they hit their time cards," explained race organizer Mark Preston of Chelmsford, "they are entirely on their own. It's physically and mentally brutal."

Last year's winner of the Michael A. Preston Memorial Four Ball Rally, which is hosted by East-West Services, Inc., of Chelmsford, finished the transcontinental trip in 37 hours and 18 minutes for an average speed of 80 m.p.h.

This year entrants have come from 25 states, as well as Japan, Canada and West Germany. Teams consisting of two drivers will "pilot" everything from Trans Ams, Camaros and Mustangs, to more exotic high performance cars like Lotus', Panteras and Porshes.

The two major rules of the race stipulate that the same vehicle starting the race must finish, and that one of the two original drivers must finish the race as well.

To be competitive most of the vehicles have been modified in some way, including oversized fuel tanks and supercharged engines.

"No one wants to divulge any information to anyone else," Preston said about the drivers. "Most keep their driving routes secret."

The 1982 winners of the Four Ball Rally were Californians Mike Begley and Steve Cook. They drove a 1982 Mercedezs 380 SL over a record route of 2,986 miles in 37 hours and 18 minutes. During the race the team made only two stops for gas. To warn them of speed traps they also took along two radar deterctors.

Consistent disciplinary policy sought

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON- What happens if a student is caught with an ounce of marijuana at Newton North High School? Will school officials call the police if a student at Newton South High School is caught drinking a beer behind the school?

"When do the police get involved?" asked School Committee member Leonard Gentile during Monday night's School Committee meeting.

Gentile suggested that a policy outlining disciplinary procedures be drawn up to insure consistency of disciplinary measures.

School Superintendent John Strand tempered his approval with a word of caution. "It lends some authority to the principal if there is a general policy, but not so specific" that it precludes a principal exercising his own judgement.

"There's so much judgement involved in individual cases, but there's room for a general statement," said Strand.

Principals are empowered to suspend students for up to five days; the School Committee can suspend a student for longer periods of time, or expel a student from school.

School Committee member Susan Silbey said she thought it was a good idea to put a disciplinary policy on record.

"It seems just plain honest to make latent policies explicit," she said, suggesting that perhaps students could be involved in drawing up the rules.

Committee members agreed to work on the matter on their own, with the goal of formulating some kind of policy in the fall.

In other business, Superintendent Strand appointed Jerrold Katz of Newton Highlands as principal of the Bowen School. Katz is presently associate director of the Harvard Graduate School of Education Principals' Center in Cambridge.

Good Deed

Mayor Theodore Mann and the Newton Crime Commission presented its first Good Citizen Award to Andres Yeh Weijan, 16, of Auburndale. Last March Weijan, a native of Taiwan and a North High School student, turned over to the Newton police a bag containing $35,000 worth of jewelry he had found on a bus. John Ombelets photo

Committee seeks more METCO funds

NEWTON - The School Committee voted unanimously last night to submit to the state a METCO budget that is 8.5 percent higher than last year's.

"We prepared a budget that made sense to us, based on the number of children in the program," said Director of Pupil Personnel John Cullanie. Increased personnel and transportation costs led to the increase, he said. The proposed budget of $1,050,000 includes $750,000 for transportation costs.

Governor Michael Dukakis has submitted a request to the legislature for a 10 percent increase in METCO funds, said Newton METCO coordinator Joe Delgardo. METCO has been level-funded for the past few years, he said.

In spite of fiscal limitations, "there are a lot of positive things going on" in the program, said Delgardo. A METCO student was elected president of his class at Newton North, he said.

Delgardo acknowledged that the attendance rate in the program "isn't as good as it could be," perhaps because of a recurrent problem with late buses.But "many students are involved in extracurricular activities," and eighty percent of Newton METCO students go to college after high school graduation, he added.

"It's not true that Newton pays for the METCO students. The program pays for itself," he said.

Delardo said he was "not satisfied" with the host family program, adding that with more women working fulltime, it's not easy to find a household with a mother at home in the afternoon.

"Fifty to sixty percent" of METCO students do not have host families, said Delgardo .School committee member Marica Mitchell agreed that "something needs to be done to communicate awareness of the program," and suggested she would be willing to participate in that effort.

School Committee member Katherine Jones expressed concern about the apparent lack of a support system for the 415 METCO students distributed evenly through the Newton school system.

"They (the METCO students) do get isolated," said School Superintendent John Strand."Maybe there should be some pattern" other than distributing the students so sparsely in the schools, he added.

School Committee member Leonard Gentile lauded Newton's METCO program for bringing in students "for all the right reasons," instead of sneaking them in to enrich athletic teams.

Order True Sisters meets

Noemi No. 11 Lodge, United Order True Sisters, Inc., an organization dedicated to helping orthopedically handicapped children, opened its 1983-1984 season with a Kick-Off Luncheon at the home of Mrs. Sheldon Rudnick, yesterday June 14.

Each year Noemi No. 11 raises money to buy special equipment for the Orthopedic Department of the Children's Hospital Medical Center. This year the objective is to purchase two instruments which are necessary to make progress in the study of skeletal diseases. One is a special freezing ultra microtome and the other is a light photo-microscope.

Dr. Sandra Thomson and Dr. Frederick Shapiro were at the Kick-Off Luncheon to explain to the members the advantages of this special equipment as diagnostic tools for the Growth Clinic.

Additionally, Dr. Beatrice Lewis spoke on "Advanced Environment," a discussion of handicapped children relating to their families.

The slate of officers for the new year consists of: President, Mrs. Ralph Levy; Vice-president.

Creative arts summer 'SPACE' program begins

NEWTON — Creative Arts/S.P.A.C.E. is alive and well in Newton.

In past years many students have participated in the Newton Creative Arts Center program. S.P.A.C.E. is an extension of the arts center program. All Newton families with children in kindergarten through grade eight have received the green S.P.A.C.E. Summer Program flyer.

In addition to a program of theater, ceramics, 'two and three dimensional art,' dance and music, are programs in academic and recreational arts.

This year, students with teacher Charlotte Brumit will produce "Bye, Bye Birdie." Casting will be held during the first week of classes at the center.

There will also be an opportunity for children who speak English as a second language to study English language lessons.

Students entering kindergarten through 4th grade in the fall will be in an art based program. They will create with hands-on experience in all arts and ceramics classes. Music, dance, drama with reading and math if parents wish, are included. Students entering grades five through nine may select from a variety of offerings in all areas of arts, arts related academics and afternoon recreational activities. A popular program has been the summer musical.

Certain programs become filled rapidly. Applications should be sent in as soon as possible.

Registration dates have been extended. For information, call 552-7631 or 552-7625.

FinCom Chairman wants civilian animal officers

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — While Newton's Animal Control Unit is top-rated, one alderman would like to see civilians doing the job rather than police officers.

"I am in no way criticizing the present officers who have done an excellent job, but the only question is, can lesser paid employees do the job as well ?," asks Chairman of the aldermanic Finance Committee Edward Richmond.

Richmond has asked the aldermanic Public Safety and Transportation Committee to look into a civilian animal control unit, but the committee chairman is not in favor of such a move.

"There does not appear to be any support for that item," said Public Safety and Transportation Chairman Joseph DePasquale on Monday.

Richmond says he has been trying to get action on the item for a number of years.

Newton's animal control service faces cutbacks because of a reduction in overtime funding, Newton Police Chief William Quinn has stated. Chief Quinn was not available Tuesday to discuss the current status of his overtime budget.

The Animal Control Unit is staffed by three police officers, but lack of overtime pay could mean less coverage during vacation and sick leave, according to the police.

One argument for police officers continuing in the job, aside from their professionalism, is the officers help in deterring crime.

"The animal control officers are around the city constantly and they can both deter crime and respond to accidents," said DePasquale.

Technical training program reviewed

NEWTON — An experimental partnership between the Newton school system and the city in training trade apprentices has completed a successful first year and will expand in the coming year.

Four Newton North High School seniors worked for 40 hours a week during the summer and 20 hours a week during the school year as apprentices to city craftspeople at a salary of 50 percent of the journeyman rate.

Student Lisa Waldvogel was apprenticed in the city drafting department to municipal workers Richard Griffin, Thomas Hayes and Robert Ouelette.

Student William Luce worked in the city electrical department with Vincent Antonellis and Larry Slattery. Student William Sweeney worked in heating, ventilation and air-conditioning with Russ Ebel and Dick Fryar and student Joseph Newton learned steamfitting with Michael Murphy.

The students' schedules are arranged so that they can work as apprentices from 7:30 to 11:30 a.m. each day and then return to the high school for their academic classes. The city staff and the school faculty keep in close touch and coordinate the practical experience with classroom instruction.

The cooperative work experience is available to vocational education majors in their final year of study and is specifically designed as an extension of the regular in-school program. Five students have been placed for the coming year with city supervisors: Salvatore Cerra, John Dorsey, John Marston, Matthew Ligor and Jason Zolotow will work in Drafting, Electrical Work, and Heating, Ventilation and Air-Conditioning.

The program provides specific learning experiences for technical-vocational students which would otherwise be unavailable. The role of the city staff is voluntary. The city receives no compensation. The program was planned by Richard Corbett, Newton Building Department Assistant Maintenance Supervisor and Patrick Nicholas, Assistant Director of Vocational Education in the Newton Public Schools.

Look before you reap.

There are many good ways to make your money work for you. And some not so good. So don't leap into anything without taking a long, hard look. Especially if you have no savings in reserve.

And if you don't have enough savings, look into U.S. Savings Bonds. Because Bonds do make sense.

They guarantee the interest. They're guaranteed against loss, fire, and theft. And the Payroll Savings Plan is a sure, easy way to guarantee savings. Federal income tax may be deferred and there's no state or local income tax.

A little is set aside each payday for U.S. Savings Bonds. Your savings will grow until you're ready to reap the rewards of regular saving.

Saving is one of the most important financial decisions you'll ever make.

Take stock in America.

Sales up 21 percent in early June

By Micheline Maynard
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — Domestic automakers turned in their best early June performance in five years, a 21 percent increase that analysts credited to cut-rate financing programs and other incentives.

The six automakers said Tuesday they sold 210,188 cars in the June 1-10 period, up 21 percent from 173,648 last year. The daily selling rate of 23,354 was the best since 1978, the industry's last boom year.

Analysts said sales translated to a strong annual rate of 7.4 million, compared to 6.2 million rate in 1982. They noted that June last year was the industry's worst month.

So far this year, the six companies have sold 2,868,744 cars, up 8 percent from 2,657,040 to date in 1982.

The Big Three automakers alone reported a 19.7 percent increase in sales for the first 10 days of the month. The top three companies have had a 6.3 percent increase in sales so far in 1982.

General Motors and Ford both are offering 8.8 percent financing on small and compact cars while Ford and Chrysler also are offering rebates. Chrysler has 8.7 percent financing on some models.

GM's sales were up 30.5 percent for the period. It sold 131,729 cars compared to 100,967 last year when the end of rebate programs resulted in a big drop in sales. For the year to date, GM sales are up 5.6 percent.

GM Vice President for Sales Robert D. Lund said the selling rate was the highest for the period since 1978 — the automaker's peak selling year.

"This continued improvement in GM sales reinforces our belief in the strength of the automotive recovery," Lund said.

Ford sales of 45,951 cars were down 4 percent for the period compared to 47,881 last year. Unlike GM, Ford in 1982 continued its incentive programs into June. Ford sales for the year are up 2.2 percent.

Chrysler had a 22 percent increase in sales for the 10 day period. It sold 25,197 cars compared to 20,622 last year. For the year to date, Chrysler sales are up 18.9 percent.

Among the smaller companies, American Motors Corp., which has been having triple-digit increases, saw sales rise only 50 percent in the first 10 days. AMC sold 3,600 cars versus 2,400 last year. AMC sales for the year are up 118 percent.

Volkswagen of America, the last automaker to report, said it sold 2,093 cars in the June 1-10 period, up 17.7 percent from 1,778 last year. This was VW's first increase in several months. So far this year, VW sales are down 13.4 percent.

Honda, which started building cars in Marysville, Ohio, earlier this year, said it sold 1,618 American-made cars in the first 10 days. So far this year, Honda sales of U.S.-built cars are 4,906.

Open road, now bumpier, still beckons family vacationers

By Murray J. Brown
UPI Travel Editor

Vacation travel in the family auto could become popular during the balance of the 1980s, echoing the "See the U.S.A." tours most popular in the 1960s.

So says Donald S. Knight, executive director of the non-profit research group TRIP (The Road Information Program) based in Washington, D.C. TRIP is funded by highway contractors, insurance companies, vehicle manufacturers and other highway-related enterprises.

Knight noted auto travel dipped in the 1970s as higher fuel prices, gas guzzlers and crowded highways cooled Americans' love of the open road.

But even while fuel prices shot up, and fuel use fell, he said U.S. roads and bridges were subjected to mounting wear and tear.

Travel by car not only got more expensive but bumpier.

"During the 1960s we were opening up America with a new Interstate highway system. Taxes on gasoline paid for the new network. Auto travel became quick, easy and inexpensive almost overnight," Knight said in a recent interview.

"But oil shortages starting in the early 1970s changed all that. Fuel sometimes got scarce and people grew fearful of venturing too far from home in their cars.

"As fuel went up in price, motorists cut back on purchases and bought less. That meant less revenue was collected on fuel taxes, so we had less money to keep our road systems in good shape. It was perceived that vacationing close to home simply was smarter and cheaper."

TRIP studies show a decade-long trend of decay on all major road systems throughout the country.

Rep. James J. Howard (D-N.J.), chairman of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee, warned recently much of the system is crumbling.

He said about 26,000 of the 42,500 miles in the Interstate Highway system "are in desperate need of repair." In addition, he said 233,000 bridges — or 42.5 percent — "are either structurally deficient or functionally obsolete."

Knight said that by the late 1970s the Interstate highway system, begun in 1956, made up less than 1 percent of all the nation's roads but was carrying more than one-fifth of all the traffic.

"These roads were designed back in the 1950s in the interests of commerce and defense," he said. "The idea was to offer rapid movement of goods, services and military supplies from coast to coast."

But he said it was obvious that the roads are serving a whole new set of customers today.

"While Interstates still play vital roles in commerce and defense, they also are used heavily by average motorists on vacation or just trying to get to work," Knight said.

"The problem is that all this use has led to expensive repair problems. Over the last few years Interstates have been wearing out at a rate of 2,000-miles-a-year faster than we have been able to repair them."

Road repairs, like most everything else, has gotten very expensive. Although inflation has cooled in recent months, more than a decade of price increases has made repairing the roads nearly as expensive as it was to build them a generation ago, according to TRIP studies.

Federal and state governments have been passing legislation over the last two years at near-record pace to help meet the challenge. More than 15 states recently boosted their gasoline taxes and Congress hiked the federal fuel tax from 4 cents to 9 cents a gallon in April, the first increase in more than 20 years. The 5-cent hike is expected to raise about $5.5 billion a year.

The increase might be hard on the motorists' pocketbooks but Knight pointed out that recent drops in fuel prices because of the worldwide glut should help cushion the blow.

Regular gasoline was selling at an all-time average high of $1.395 a gallon in April 1981. Currently, the national average price is $1.167 a gallon, including the federal tax increase.

Knight said the new revenues should help speed road and bridge repairs.

"And barring any major disruptions in our oil supplies, indications are that vacation travel by automobile will become popular once again," he said.

"The major problems motorists might have to contend with this summer are occassional detours because of road repairs," Knight said.

"But when given the choice of taking a detour or slamming into pot holes, I don't think most people will mind the temporary inconveniences."

Parade set by Masons

NEEDHAM — The year 1983 marks the 250th anniversary of Freemasonry in Massachusetts, and is a significant date for the entire Masonic "family" — the Freemasons, the Shriners, the Eastern Star, the DeMolay, the Rainbow Girls, and others.

The occasion of the July Fourth Parade will be marked by special activities sponsored by Massachusetts Masonry.

There will be a 40-foot float in the parade, bearing facsimilies of notable Revolutionary buildings and figures, and accompanied by representatives of the various Masonically-related bodies approximately clad in historical costumes.

There is to be a four by eight foot cake set up on Needham's Memorial Field, under a large tent furnished with information tables and spokespersons of the different groups.

The public is invited to visit the big tent and enjoy a piece of cake and refreshments, after the parade is over.

Coast Guard band performs July 4

NEEDHAM — The United States Coast Guard Band, under the direction of Lt. Lewis J. Buckley, will perform a varied program of marches, classics and showtunes as part of the 35th annual Independance Day celebration at Needham Memorial Park on July 3 at 7:30 p.m.

Featured in the program will be Giovanni Picchi's Fantasia Original, with euphonium soloist Roger L. Behrend. Also appearing on the program will be Rossini's William Tell Overture, Morton Gould's Fourth of July, Leroy Anderson's Serenata, and Nelhybel's Festivo. Three marches will be performed: Karl King's The Attorney general, Sousa's The Black Horse Troop, and Fillmore's Americans We, the latter being conducted by the Band's Assistant Director, James L. Dygert. Two medley's will also be presented: The Magic of Manilow and Cole Porter.

An appearance by the Coast Guard Dixieland Jazz Band will round out the program. The group has appeared throughout the continental United States.

Since 1975, the United States Coast Guard Band has traveled over 350,000 miles to perform in 30 states, Washington, D.C., and Canada.

Admission to this concert by the United States Coast Guard Band is free and open to the public.

Correction

NEWTON - An obituary for Bentley College Professor E. William Dandes of Newton, which appeared in the Newton Graphic two weeks ago omitted several details.

Officiants at funeral services for Mr. Dandes were Rabbi Allan Lazaroff and Cantor Theodore Schnd Schneider. Eulogies were delivered by Vice-president Emeritus and Professor Robert Weafer and Dean and Professor Rae D. Anderson, both of Bentley College.

Donations in his memory may be made to the E. William Dandes Scholarship Fund at Bentley College, Waltham.

The Graphic regrets the errors.

Police

NEWTON — A man who claimed he was employed by a driveway-paving company apparently flim-flammed a Colonial Avenue resident out of $1,000, according to a report received by police Monday.

The man told the resident he worked for the company that had installed the resident's driveway last year and that it needed a protective sealant.

After he finished the job, the man told her it would cost $1300 unless she paid cash. The price in cash was $1000, which the resident paid.

Later, an employee of the company that installed the driveway told the resident that it had no employee that matched the description of the man who charged the $1000 and added that the sealing job was worth only $200.

Police said the suspect is white, short, and was driving a white truck with black markings. There was a woman and boy in his truck.

NEWTON CENTRE — A burglar stole silver and gold antique coins and jewelry from a Parker Street home, according to a report received by police Monday.

The thief took a ladder from the garage on the property to climb into the house. The values of the stolen items were not known.

NEWTON — A man driving an old red American-model car allegedly exposed himself to two 12-year-old girls walking on Waverley Avenue, according to a report received by police about 3 p.m. Monday.

The man is in his late 20s and had brown hair and a beard at the time of the alleged incident.

LOWER FALLS — A Tennesee man told police he was walking on the exit ramp at Rtes. 128 and 16 Monday morning when five men in a car stopped, got out and stole his two suitcases, $50 and his identification.

The robbers then got into their car and left. The Tennesee man was not hurt, police said.

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A city resident found and gave to police a purse with the identification of a California woman inside, according to a police spokeswoman.

The Newton resident found the purse in the new plaza in Newton Highlands Square and turned it in Monday.

NEWTON CENTRE — Residents of the Lakeview Rest Home, 38 Lake Ave., were evacuated shortly before midnight last Thursday when a fire broke out.

Details of the origin and extent of the blaze were unavailable this morning but the Newton Fire Department did report that the incident was called a "working fire" at 12:11 a.m. today. Engines 3,6,7, Ladder 2 and Asst. Chief Goulding responded to the intial alarm and Engine 5 and Ladder 3 responded a few minutes later.

Film portrays blind adults

NEWTON — Arthur O'Neill of the Carroll Center for the Blind, recently completed a documentary of two of the center's blind graduates that was this week on Newton Community Cable T.V..

The 15-minute videotape shows the many adjustments the individual who has experienced a loss of vision must make. The first profile is a woman in her late twenties who is married with two children and employed by a nearby computer firm.

The second person highlighted is an active young Newton resident who is professionally employed and almost totally blind from a hereditary eye disease.

The short movie is a sensitive portrayal of the constant determination that one must have in order to overcome obstacles in a sightless life.

Red Cross needs help

NEWTON — The Red Cross has launched an emergeny disaster relief campaign for contributions for assisting victims of natural disaster nationwide.

"This is a crisis situation," according to David Nixon, chairman of the Board of Directors of the West Suburban Chapter American Red Cross. "We are depending on the generosity of local residents to help their fellow Americans. It is unfortunate that the disaster relief budget has been exhausted just at a time when the potential demands are the greatest demand are the greatest on Red Cross."

In the Mass Bay area alone this year, Red Cross has provided disaster relief assistance to over 1,800 persons in need.

Tax-deductible contributions may be made to "Red Cross Disaster Relief", in care of American Red Cross, 21 Foster Street, Newton, MA 02160.

Clothing requested by Goodwill

NEWTONVILLE — Dresses and skirts are urgently needed by Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries at its attended donation trailer at the municipal parking lot on Austin Street in Newtonville.

Residents of Newton may leave donations only between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday. The attendant will give you a tax receipt.

Any clothing in good condition as well as home furnishings are welcome at the trailer. Mattresses, box springs, large appliances (e.g. stoves) and large furniture cannot be accepted.

In need of assistance?

Death Notices may be phoned in by calling 329-5000 and asking for Vicki King. The best time to call with death notices is from 6 p.m. to midnight, Mondays through Fridays, for publication in the next day's paper.

However, death notices will be taken at your convenience starting Sunday evenings at 6 p.m. through Friday afternoons at 5 p.m.

Centre church opens lawn

NEWTON CENTRE — The First Baptist Church located at Beacon and Centre Streets this summer will make its lawn available to Newton's young people from 3 to 11 p.m. each day.

Counselors will be present on the lawn for those hours.

The cooperative project is being partially funded by the First Baptist Church, Newton-Wellesley-Weston-Needham Multi-Service Center, Newton Community Service Center, Newton Outreach Program, residents and youth.

Businesses are invited to participate in this project.

Pupils earn math honors

NEWTON — Two Newton students achieved the only two awards for high scores in the New England Mathematics League this year.

Steven Lookner of Mason-Rice School and Peter Edmonston of the Williams School both got a score of 39 out of a possible 40. Adam Lupu-Sax of Mason-Rice placed third with a score of 38. Mason-Rice, Peirce and Williams ranked in the top 24 schools for total team score, and Mason-Rice tied for third place in Middlesex County.

In a junior high school mathematical league which holds meetings several times a year throughout the greater Boston area, Bigelow finished second· told he was being retired because of his injury.

He contends, and his doctor concurred, that he could continue perform clerical duties in the office of the Police Department. Three physicians told the city's retirement board he was incapable of performing all the duties of a police officer.

City Comptroller Larry Marino, ex-officio member of the retirement board who says he is especially concerned with the rising cost of city pensions, commented that he thought it "ridiculous" that Ciccone would be ordered to retire and new man hired to fill his spot. Marino added that he voted for his retirement because he could not contradict the testimony of three physicians.

Ciccone said he thinks he was treated unfairly and is the victim of Chief Quinn's personal vendetta.

Quinn pointed out that three physicians advocated Ciccone's retirement. He also pointed out that Ciccone is running for the Board of Aldermen and refused to comment on his situation, saying, "I'm not going to give him any ink."

"Quinn and I got along good until I wrote the letter," Ciccone said. "The letter" is the one he sent the Board of Aldermen several years ago informing them of gross inefficiencies in the Police Department. He was head of the Newton branch of the Massachusetts Police Officers Association at the time.

In Ciccone's words, he "was attacking waste" in the letter. Facing the first brutal effects of Proposition 2½, Quinn said cutbacks were inevitable, according to Ciccone.

The ex-union head said his constituents preferred to be laid off and then brought back on the force when the first fiscal restraints had been lifted, rather than cut back on hours worked.

"We need the bodies," he quoted Quinn as saying. "You've got bodies in the closets," was Ciccone's response, implying the department's numbers were inflated.

The order to go out on a beat or stay home sick was a result of the letter, according to Ciccone. "He didn't want me in the police station at all," he said.

Ciccone, in speaking of the turn of his career over the last few years, refers to Quinn often simply as "him."

Quinn forced the situation to the end, according to Ciccone. "He runs you out of sick time, and he forces you to go back to work," he said.

As evidence of further harassment, Ciccone contended that Quinn refused to authorize payment of his physical rehabilitation expenses. On July 15, 1981, Quinn wrote the New England Rehabilitation Hospital in Woburn that he could not authorize payment of Ciccone's bills because his "symptoms are not job related."

In June, 1982, the entire $2,184.50 bill was paid because Ciccone's "injury was sustained in the line of duty," according to another Quinn letter.

Ciccone said his time in rehabilitation was deducted from his pay, "something which was never done before."

Ciccone's doctor wrote, in February of this year, "My opinion is that the patient would benefit, psychologically and physically, if he and his wife could take a vacation together to try to escape some of their problems."

Chief Quinn denied that request, according to Ciccone, "and he refused to give me anything in writing. Every school vacation, I was denied permission to take my family anywhere."

All that ended recently when Ciccone received notice of his "involuntary accidental disability retirement," which declared that he was "presently unable to perform all the duties of a police officer," and that his "incapacity for duty is likely to be permanent."

He said the cost of an appeal of the decision in district court would be "astronomical. Plus, I'd be under the gun again. I'd be working for him (Quinn) again."

So, ex-officer Ciccone sits in the cool, dark dining room of his Newtonville home studying life insurance brochures, which are spread out on the table. His pension will stop when he dies, he says, "So, my family gets zero."

His wife's father was a cop who died in the line of duty, he says, "and they got $600 and a flag. So, I have to buy life insurance to protect my family."

"We are turning from an industrial base to an informational base," said Strand, adding the change will require many innovations.

Newton North School principal Marya Levenson said, "The class of 1983 made my work more enjoyable."

Newton North certainly prepared their students in quick calculations as evidenced by student speaker Ellen Waldorf.

"Tonight we leave behind 3,132 hours of English, 2010 hours of math and 1080 hours of social studies, but we will take new ideals with us," said Waldorf.

Student speaker Stephen G. Miller told the class at that moment they stand on a middle ground, between graduating from school and commencing a new life.

A random sampling of the graduates plans revealed the following:

Joseph Clemente of West Newton will be working in a print shop this summer.

James Berrigan of Newton Corner will work as a security guard at a TV station and attend Massachusetts Maritime Academy in the fall.

Jill Cohen of Waban plans to work in a clothes store and will attend New Hampshire College.

Steve DeAngelis of Newton Lower Falls, who pounded out Pomp and Circumstance on the drums during the ceremonies, hopes to attend the Boston Conservatory of Music.

Paul Aswad of Newtonville will be going to Boston College.

While the speakers gave their advice to the Class of 1983, two translators for deaf people moved their hands and arms conveying this year's messages to the audience.

Youth boxing tickets free to Newton vets

NEWTON — Newton veterans, can get free tickets for the Emerald Society Youth Boxing Show which will be held at the IBEW Hall, 545 Main St., Waltham at 7:30 p.m. on June 15.

Tickets can be obtained at the Newton Department of Veterans' Services, Newton City Hall. Carleton Merrill, Newton veterans' agent, stated that the program is sponsored by the Boston Police Emerald Society and that the funds raised will be used for youth scholarship funds as well as for youth sports leagues supported by the Emerald Society.

Tickets for veterans have been made available to the Newton veterans' agent by the society, through donations from business firms. Merrill said 100 tickets are available to veterans' and they will be given out on a first come, first serve basis. The free tickets may be reserved for pick-up at the veterans' department by calling 552-7025 between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Merrill said tickets are available to children of veterans so dad and his kids can attend the show together. The program features amateur youth boxing with kids of all ages participating.

Health Department extending hours of library health clinic

NEWTON — On the third Thursday of each month, the Newton Health Department will extend the present hours of its Newtonville Library Health Maintenance Clinic located at 345 Walnut St. The clinic will be open on Thursday, June 16 from 5 to 7:30 p.m., as well as its regularly scheduled daytime hours.

In addition to providing blood pressure checks, Mrs. Betty Sacks, R.N., Public Health Nurse, who staffs the clinic, is available to discuss health related problems, provide health teaching regarding medical conditions, diet, medications and healthy living habits. Simple diagnostic screening tests are available.

Daytime health maintenance clinics are ongoing at the Newtonville Library Drop-In Center, Beethoven Drop-In Center at Zervas School, Nonantum Multi-Service Center. Clinics are open to adults of all ages, and are free.

For further information on the clinics and other health-related programs call the Health Department at 552-7058.

Calling it quits

Alderman Morris bows out after 10 years

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — "The cumulative effect of four years of balancing so many roles: family, school, job and politics" has led Terry Morris, a ten-year veteran of the Board of Aldermen, to decide not to run for a sixth term.

Morris just graduated from Suffolk Law School, where he has been studying nights for his law degree for the past four years. His job as deputy director of the Massachusetts Comission Against Discrimination continues to devour his days. His role as a father continues to expand as his children approach adolescence.

Of the four hats he has been wearing for so long, that of an alderman is the only one he can shed, he decided after months of deliberation.

As chairman of the Land Use Committee, Morris has become the city's premier authority on land use theory, and he plans to continue to lend the city his expertise. He said Wednesday that he hopes, as a member of a task force made up of citizens and city officials, to determine the course of future development in the city and to help formulate plans to best accomodate it.

He said he is looking forward to studying land use questions away from the day-to-day pressure of reacting to citizens' petitions. "You never get out from under the flood of petitions," he said of working on the Land Use Committee.

"I've often been accused of being a frustrated city planner," he said. "With my limited time, I can now focus on the area where I can contribute the most."

Asked if the recent turn toward confrontation on the Board of Aldermen had anything to do with his decision not to run, Morris commented that he shares the concern of some of the elder aldermen who say things used to be done differently.

More than once, over the past several months, Morris has received criticism from a couple of his colleagues on the floor of the board that bordered on personal abuse. He shook it off at the time, but now he says that the argumentative atmosphere in the chambers "makes my decision not to run easier."

Morris emphasized that the temper of the board did not determine his decision. In fact, he said that factor left him in a quandry regarding his decision. "In one sense, you say to yourself, 'Who needs it?' In another, you have to ask yourself, 'Do I really want that

City plays hardball in tax appeals

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Hungry for additional revenue the city has decided to get tough on property tax cases pending before the State Appellate Tax Board (ATB).

The city will no longer settle automatically out of court with disatisfied taxpayers who appeal city tax decisions to the time-consuming ATB judicial process, according to City Solicitor Daniel Funk.

Under the new policy, the city will make a quick settlement depending on the size of the abatement ahe principle involved in the case, said Funk.

"Cases are settled when it's a time-saver, but it varies from case to case," he said.

The city's record in defending its property tax decision before the ATP is dismal. "We have not really won any cases," Palmer said last week.

Residents file with the ATB if they believe the city did not grant them a fair abatement, according to City Solicitor Funk. He did not have a count on how many the tax cases have been settled.

"It's gotten to the point where we have everything we can do just to keep pace with it," said Funk.

One member of the Revaluation Committee believes settling out of court quickly is the road to take.

"I feel if it's to the benefit of a citizen and the city, then this is the road we should take," said Alderman Robert Tennant regarding the city's policy to settle quickly.

By settling quickly the city keeps court costs to a minimum, said Palmer.

Once people know the city wants to save attorney's fees in favor of settling, then they will figure it is worth filing papers before the ATB, fears Bauckman.

"Go to the ATB because you're going to get something," Alderman Wendell Bauckman said will be the word around the city.

Palmer said there are 1,178 cases pending before the ATB. Most are from the years 1977 to 1982, with 364 cases from 1983.

While a taxpayer's case is before the tax board, the resident has to pay only part of their disputed real estate tax, according to Palmer.

"Most people feel their tax is reasonable, but at such time when people begin to file 'just to get something,' "we will go the full court route, said Palmer.

"If the assessors deny it (the abatement) or don't act on it, people have the right to appeal to the ATB," said Funk.

Best and the brightest

NEWTON - Newton resident Veronica Sebok, 22, Harvard graduate, Phi Beta Kappa, captain of the Radcliffe Sailing Team, voted New England's Outstanding Woman Sailor, walked off with yet another honor during commencement week: the prestigious Radcliffe College Presidential Commendation.

At the annual Radcliffe Garden Party last week, Radcliffe President Matina Horner presented Sebok with a book entitled "Notable American Women" - the kind of book in which Sebok might one day find mention of herself.

Sebok, a graduate of Newton South High School, received a combined AB/MS degree in engineering and applied science from Harvard/Radcliffe. She took graduate level courses on artificial intelligence, database management systems, and software engineering at Harvard and MIT. She received straight A's during her final three semesters. As a teaching fellow, she taught three courses - on math and computers - at Harvard during her sophomore and junior years.

Her athletic achievements are equally impressive. As team captain, she led the Radcliffe Sailing Team to its first qualification in six years for the National Championship in Seattle. Last year, the team won a New England Fall Championship.

Sebok returned to Cambridge from a sailing meet in Texas less than an hour before the recipient of the Presidential Commendation was to be announced.

"It was really crazy," she recalled."I'd just gotten off the plane, and the garden party was a half hour later, when it was announced. My mom went wild!"

Sebok is taking a few weeks to relax at her parents' summer home on Cape Cod before she leaves for California to start researching and designing computer products at Apple, Inc., a job which she describes as a "perfect opportunity."

"They say Silicon Valley is a few years ahead technically.I want a fast-paced environment, while I still have the energy!" she said.

For someone who has already accomplished so much, what might the future hold?

"I probably will not end up going back to the university environment, though I might teach in the computer industry," she said, adding that she saw herself doing "some form of consulting, helping people develop software programs for their own needs."

As far as the future in publishing goes, if and when "Notable American Women - Part Two" hits the bookstores, don't be surprised if Veronica Sebok is listed in the table of contents.

Staff changes hurt assessors

By Stephen Capoccia

NEWTON — The Board of Assessors, criticized by a management consultant for high personnel turnover in the department, is officially short two members and has hired a new Deputy Director of Assessment.

The consulting firm of Touche Ross earlier this year cited a lack of continuity in assessing personnel as a cause for the department's failure to keep up with its huge work load.

Assessor Harold Brady recently retired and Assessor Mary E. Champagne's term of office officially expired in February, according to city records.

Champagne remains on the job, according to the only official assessor Robert Palmer

"So we have one assessor who is official," said Alderman Carol Ann Shea late last week at a Revaluation Commmittee meeting.

Mayor Theodore Mann is required to make appointments to the Board of Assessors.

"Hopefully we will get someone in as quickly as possible," said Palmer.

Brady's departure has left a gap in the office since he handled many of the Appellate Tax Board cases and hardship exemptions in the city, according to Palmer. "We've had to piece things together," Palmer said.

Working to implement the recommendations of the management consultant's report on the assessing office is Deputy Director of Assessment Dick Moynihan, who will earn $25,000 a year in the newly created position, according to Palmer.

The consulting firm recommended the creation of Moynihan's job because of the confusion in the Assessing Department.

Blame for the lack of direction in the department was partially put on the more than 6,000 abatement applications that came pouring into the office after revaluation in the city.

Moynihan's management background will help him tackle the problems of maintaining continuity in the office and updating inadequate office procedures, cited by the consultant's report.

"We had an open competition for the job and interviewed seven or eight people," said Palmer.

Moynihan had been acting deputy director for some months after the management consultant firm of Touche Ross made a scathing analysis of the Assessing Department.

"There was no question he was going to be the one anyway," said aldermanic President Emeritus Wendell Bauckman late last week.

"I'm not at all surprised" about Moynihan as the choice, said Coletti, adding that he was skeptical at first.

During the interview process Moynihan took a lot of heat about the revaluation process from the selection committee. He explained what happened and "he won me over," said Coletti.

Setting the department back a little was the sudden retirement of Assessor Brady, according to Palmer.

Since Assessor Brady's departure, Palmer has been receiving numerous calls from residents who say Brady had promised a certain kind of action in their tax case.

Given the large amount of abatements there have been relatively few problems of people falling between the cracks, said Palmer.

"It will be one and a-half to two-years before all of the problems are corrected, but there is no where near the number of problems that we had," said Palmer.

Officials differ over library safety

By Stephen Capoccia

NEWTON CORNER — Library officials differ sharply with city administrators over the structural condition of the century-old main branch library in Newton Corner.

"There are minor code violations, but to terminate all of our old buildings because they are old is wrong," said Fire Chief Edward Reilly on Friday. The chief stressed the building's condition is not a hazard, in response to a statement by Library Trustess calling it one.

"The present building is a hazard for workers and users alike," stated the Library Board of Trustess late last week.

While the trustees have not asked the building be condemned, they are seeking aldermanic support for a Proposition 2½ override referendum on November's ballot to exempt a $8 million bond issue from the constraint of the tax cap.

The bond is needed to pay for a new library at the corner of Homer and Walnut Streets across from City Hall and the bond would add 35 to 40 cents to residents' taxes, according to Library Trustee Michael Lipof. Newton's residential tax rate is $21.84 per thousand and Proposition 2½ limits the rate to $25.

The estimated cost of construction of the new building is $10 million, according to trustees.

Minor safety violations in the Newton Corner branch are inadequate emergency lighting and exits, according to Fire Chief Reilly.

"I had the building inspected about a month ago by Captain Carmine Tedesco and outside of the minor things, the Captain didn't think there were any problems," said Reilly. The minor problems could be easily fixed, he said.

A fire alarm system was installed in the building, but fire sprinklers have not been, according to the fire chief.

Building Commissioner James Cameron agreed with Reilly saying, no hazard to library patrons or workers exists.

A report was compiled by city building inspector Paul Foley as recently as the end of last week, but because City Hall workers were on holiday on Friday the report was unavailable, according to Cameron.

In response to the two main city officials in charge of the public's safety in buildings saying the building is not a hazard, Chairman of the Board of Library Trustees Dorothy Reichard said on Fri-

Misuse of User Fee charges alderman

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Upset that user fees from Water/Sewer charges are going into the city's general coffers rather than being set aside to upgrade the system one alderman wants them rescinded.

"I have docketed an item to rescind the water/sewer use tax," said Chairman of Public Facilities Committee Richard McGrath on Wednesday, June 16.

McGrath says putting the user fees into the general coffer is contrary to the purpose of the enabling state legislation that allowed the city to assess the charges on its citizens.

"Revenues generated by water/sewer user fees are being used for purposes other than upgrading the sewer system, which in my opinion is contrary to the law which enables us to make the charges," said McGrath.

Money received from the charges "goes into general funds," confirmed City Treasurer Theodore Scafidi on Wedneday.

May's financial report from the City Comptroller's office states $4,084,623 in Water/Sewer charges had been collected, including money from last year and $2,340,651, plus a couple of million dollars for MDC water charges was expended, according to City Comptroller Larry Marino on Wednesday. Health insurance and retirement costs from the department are not included in the total, he added.

"I'm sure the state legislation's intent was to make-up for their (the city's) loss of revenue (from Proposition 2½)," said Representative Joseph DeNucci on Wednesday.

"It is available to cities and towns to allow them to raise revenues and how they spend it is up to them," said DeNucci.

"Water money is supposed to be used strictly for the water department," said Public Safety and Transportation Chairman Joseph DePasquale on Wednesday.

DePasquale said he was the sole vote against the establishment of the user fee a few years ago, because he was opposed to the "back door charge under the guise of user fees."

"In my opinion it should never have been implemented, because a lot of people are upset," said DePasquale.

The bills are a burden on people when they were accustomed to paying $50 a year and now they pay a few hundred, said DePasquale. "A few hundred here and there hurts," he said.

Water rates are based on usage and range from 55 cents per 100 for the first 4,000 cubic feet consumed, 65 cents per 100 for the next 4,000 cubic feet and 75 cents per 100 cubic feet for all use over 8,000 cubic feet, according to the Water/Sewer Department. Sewer charges are 75 percent of the water charges.

Since new water meters were installed in the city, residents' use of water is now measured more accurately and this generates revenues in excess of the money needed to operate the Water/Sewe Department, said McGrath.

In April Public Works Commissioner John Sulik admitted ther were "inadvertant overcharges on bills received by residents be ween January and April.

Credits ranging from 17 cents t $21 were issued to residents, state Sulik.

The city is conducting smok testing of sewer lines as part c total package for improving som sewer systems, but money spent o this project is 90 percet reim bursable Newton from state an federal funds, according to Cit Engineer Paul Giunta.

"The sewers are in basicall good condition, considering thei age, but some sections nee renovation," said Giunta. Cor struction that has taken place ove the years has put a greater burde on the system as well, said Giunta.

There are no plans under th jurisdiction of the Engineerin Department for improving an water lines, according to Giunta.

Keeping cool is healthy

By Carolyn Berg

NEWTON - Hot, muggy weather isn't just uncomfortable; it can also pose a health hazard to people who have certain health problems.

People with heart disease or respiratory problems should avoid going outside on extremely warm, humid days, according to Dr. William Holgerson of Newton Wellesley Hospital. The heat raises blood pressure and increases pulse rate, he said.

Although "the increased water content in the air gives the sensation that you're not getting as much air per breath," it's just a sensation, Dr. Holgerson explained."There's no actual change in blood-oxygen level in a normal person," he said. Those with respiratory problems may, however, experience a drop in blood-oxygen level.

High humidity also traps pollutants in the air. "Smog in Boston proper is a problem, because it doesn't diffuse as well in hot humid weather," said Dr. Holgerson, adding that the best preventive medicine is to stay in an air-conditioned room, decrease physical activity, and increase intake of fluids.

Even those in excellent health should take precautions, said Dr. Holgerson. "If you're in good health and you jog, say, 20 miles a week, you're able to do it in hot weather, but you must adequately hydrate yourself. People who know what they're doing, carry plastic water bottles."

"Hot muggy weather can be a risk for everyone. If you're working out in the sun, the normal mechanisms for cooling the body are hampered," he said, adding that no one should work outside for more than an hour at a time when heat and humidity are oppressive.

Police seek funds for drunk driving crackdown

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The police chief said last week he is awaiting word on a $10,000 government grant which the police department plans to use for setting up special patrols to nab drunk drivers and other traffic violators.

Chief William F. Quinn also said he has been meeting during the last few weeks with representatives of the Middlesex County District Attorney's Office to discuss the program's legalities.

Quinn recently applied for the State Highway Safety grant to fund the program and said he feels positive that the grant will be awarded. The chief said he learned that there is a good chance Newton will be awarded the grant though he has not received official notification.

Details of the traffic program are still being discussed with the Police Traffic Bureau, headed by Capt. John J. Bartinelli. Quinn initiated the program which officials indicate is primarily to catch drunk drivers.

"Hopefully it will begin in a couple of weeks," Quinn said.

Describing the patrols, the chief said, "Teams of officers will be situated at certain locations which we consider to be prime accident areas. The patrols will probably be set up from dusk until the early morning hours."

Capt. Bartinelli said police would not initiate a "mass stopping of vehicles, only those in which there is a question of sobriety and erratic driving."

The patrols will initially involve high-accident locations, Bartinelli said, but will eventually include other areas, Bartinelli said. The five top accident locations are Centre Street and Commonwealth Avenue, Centre and Washington Streets, Walnut and Washington Streets, Beacon and Centre Streets and Walnut and Watertown Streets according to recent traffic statistics.

Kitchen and Bath Design & Decor

While a U-shaped kitchen is considered by many to be a most efficient design, kitchen planning must take into account the amount of time, effort and energy that will be expended in cooking and cleaning. A countertop that is either too high or too low can become very tiresome for the food preparer. Although the standard kitchen counter surface is 36 inches high, the ideal counter should be 2 to 3 inches below the cook's elbow height. A counter that is used for baking should be 5 to 6 inches below elbow height. A good place for the location of a special-height counter is usually next to the refrigerator since this is where most food preparation takes place.
No matter how you "shape it," the option is available today for a kitchen that is both utilitarian and decoratively pleasing. The answer to both these goals is CHARL MARC KITCHEN & BATH CENTER, 4174 Washington St., Roslindale. Let us show you the option of design, price and material that will allow your dream kitchen to become a reality and your decor to become a dream. Tel. 325-9400. Searching for a few good educational administrators

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON - The Newton School Committee, at two special meetings June 14 and 15, interviewed three applicants for each of two newly created positions: Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum and Instruction, and Director of Secondary Education/Special Assistant to the Superintendent.

Interviewed for the position of Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum and Instruction were: Joseph Blackman, currently an independent film producer and formerly an assistant school superintendent in Santa Cruz, California; Barbara Carlson, director of the Newton Advanced Challenge Project; and William Spohn, assistant superintendent of the Salem School District in Salem, New Hampshire.

Blackman was the first candidate to face questioning from the School Committee. Committee member Robert Ricles asked Blackman why he left the education field and why he wanted to get back into it. Blackman replied that he hadn't "felt challenged by the position" of superintendent, and pointed out that the films he produces are educational in nature. "I never left schools mentally, or in my heart," Blackman said, adding that time away from the field had increased his objectivity and left him "revitalized."

Asked what he would do if he were appointed to the position, Blackman said he would try to establish "a sense of direction" for the school system."I don't think people know what they're innovating for," he said, while allowing that Newton "has good instructional programs, and a dedicated, professional staff."

School committee member Marcia Mitchell expressed concern about a possible contagion of "California - itis," alluding to the philosophical differences between the East and West coast educational approaches. According to his resume, Blackman is a member of the Holistic Health Institute Board of Directors and has produced training tapes for 300 Yoga centers.

"I was born in Illinois, and only lived eight years in California," said Blackman. Acknowledging the difference between California and Boston- area lifestyles, Blackman said he felt more comfortable on the East Coast, and that he did not subscribe to any dogmatic educational theory. "There is no one best way to educate people. You've got to match learning styles and interest with teaching styles and interests," he told the School Committee.

Marcia Miller pointed out that Blackman's resume indicated that he had lived in California for at least twelve years. He acknowledged the correction.

Barbara Carlson was the next to be interviewed. Looking over his copy of her resume, Robert Riccles asked for a description of a curriculum development project entitled "Territoriality in Crayfish."

Carlson recalled that the project was unsuccessful." We thought children would be very interested in what happened to five crayfish when they tried to crawl under four flower pots. Naturally, the smallest crayfish was left out. However, the children were more interested in which were the mommy crayfish and which were the daddies."

Carlson said one of her priorities, if offered the position, would be to "find a way to bring scientists in to speak with the children and teachers," in addition to taking other steps to improve science education."We have much more to do" to familiarize teachers with computers, she said, suggesting that perhaps a committee could be formed to deal with science curricula.

"This position is a window on the world outside the classroom," said the former piano teacher and wallpaper designer. "I want to be a conduit for the outside resources of research, industry, and the arts."

William Spohn was the last of the three to field questions from School Committee members.

If he were offered the position, Spohn said, he would work toward three major goals: "To get to know Newton's curricular structure and needs; to communicate with all the levels of instruction in the district; and to make myself available to people."

In response to School Committee member Susan Silbey's question regarding his opinion of one-track high schools, Spohn replied, "I'm eclectic enough that I can accept what will function best" in a given setting. People have to "buy into" any system to make it work, he said.

The next night, the School Committee interviewed candidates for the position of Director of Secondary Education/Special Assistant to the Superintendent.

Interviewed were: Judith Malone Neville, a housemaster at Newton South High School since 1976 and a Ph. D. candidate at Brandeis; Frederick Hill, Jr., Special Assistant to the Superintendent for Achievement in East Orange, New Jersey;and Elizabeth Quinn, principal of the Bigelow Junior High School.

Neville was the first to field questions from School Committee members. Asked how she would handle the job if offered the position, she replied that she saw it as "a creative job. Since it is a new position, the job will define itself as someone is filling the role." Neville added that the job required someone with the ability "to listen, observe carefully, to reflect on what is observed."

Neville indicated that she would pay special attention to teacher morale, which she said needed bolstering in the face of declining student enrollment and limited budgets. "Teachers are feeling saggy, and need to be propped up in some ways," she told the committee. "The most important person in the school system is the classroom teacher," she said.

Questioned about her lack of experience as a principal, Neville pointed out that "the housemaster role is a supervisory role," and that her "house" is bigger than some of Newton's elementary schools. Her responsibilities as housemaster included evaluating and supervising teachers, and meeting with parents, she said.

Responding to a question about the role of the secondary school, Neville emphasized that a school should not be responsible for teaching morality or ethics. "I get distressed when schools are called upon to play the role of parent," she said." A school's role is to educate."

Frederick Hill, Jr., was the second applicant to be interviewed.Hill said "the overriding issue" is the need to "minimize the impact of declining student enrollment" on the quality of education. Hill also said he perceived "a need for greater coordination at the secondary school level."

Asked about the current national attitude toward education, Hill said he noted "a change of emphasis...more schools are moving back to the basics. As an educator, I see a need for that."

Hill indicated that computer literacy may soon become part of the core curriculum. "We are moving into a high-tech society and we have to educate children to function in that society," he said.

Elizabeth Quinn was the last to be questioned by the committee. She expressed concern that many secondary schools are producing "a nation of passive learners," and told commmittee members that the first priority of education is "to produce people who are life-long learners."

Education should also "train students to deal with the scope of the world," she said, and eventually to "manage a world in which WE will be the dependents."

"The schools in Newton have different personalities, but the goals are very similar," she said.

County puzzle

County government is always puzzling, but even more so these days when pseudo-reformers and the legislative architects are traveling in different directions. Try to figure out, if you can, how the present Board of County Commissioners can be striving to enlarge its scope of activity while the General Court is moving toward state absorption of more county functions.

And where are the advisory boards, armed with budget control, in all of this?

First the reason for that pseudo word, a regrettable choice because Thomas Larkin, the chief commission honcho, has been pursuing reform since elected. Yet he, through his executive assistant, Bill Gustis, has announced a sweeping reorganization that can only mean added costs. Here is a direct quote from a Lowell Sun news story relating to a commission meeting:

"Efforts will be made to fit as many current employees as possible into the new structure and 200 new positions, 17 janitorial and three administrative, will be created with that additional cost to the county, said Gustis."

At the same time, predictions are being made that the Legislature will take over all courthouses now under county direction. Also, the Committee on Counties is considering a shift of the Probate and Deed Courts to the state.

So why any kind of restructuring at this time? And, advisory boards, where are you?

Spotlight on gang rape cases

Dedham court and the Holbrook gang rape trial have been the focus of national attention this week.

After a final burst of publicity over the verdict, the case will fade.

The spotlight will swing to the "Big Dan's" tavern gang-rape case in New Bedford.

Still more gang-rape cases are waiting in the wings after that one. Each will have its day in court.

Finally, after all the verdicts come down, larger questions will remain:

Why has the state had the sudden spate of these cases?

Is it an age-old horror just coming to light, or a new perversion?

Do common threads weave through the cases?

Has publicity on one case triggered others?

Can government, medicine, the police or the rest of us do anything to stop the seeming trend?

Of course, these are not questions for judges and juries, who must stick to the facts of particular cases.

But they are questions crying out to all of us for answers.

Perhaps the gang-rape trials will render up some kernels of knowledge that will make the gang-rape headline a thing of the past.

We can only hope so.

Newton Graphic Opinions

He's off to a good start

By J.J. Smith

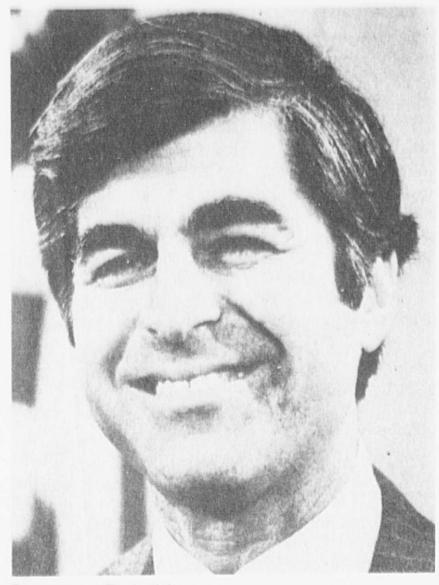
Some quarters would have us believe that the now-famed "coalition" that helped trigger Michael S. Dukakis' return to the governorship last fall was something infamous or shady, or is now falling apart at the seams. Not true.

Based upon his first half-year in office, Mike Dukakis has shown he is deeply concerned not only with maintaining but expanding his coalition. More importantly, at first blush, it appears the second-term chief executive also is concerned as deeply with good government. He has shown that what is politically astute also makes good public relations and good policy.

Governor Dukakis, and this is surprising to many, is making major policy decisions not only with regard to their policy implications but also with serious consideration as to their impact upon his coalition. More than anything else, maybe, this reflects the "new" Dukakis vis a vis the "old Dukakis."

In the process, certainly, questions are raised as to the political morality of the process. The final test, of course, is whether maintenance and "stroking" of the coalition can be consistent with good public policy.

Nowhere was the potential conflict pointed up more markedly than with the collective bargaining agreement reached with the largest union of public employees, the Alliance. The eminently satisfactory results for all concerned led to suggestions of favoritism for a past supporter, the Service Employees International Union (SEIU) and a past political enemy, the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal



Governor Dukakis

Employees (AFSCME), a bloc of 30,000 members and their families.

This agreement, the critics suggest, was the "stroking" of one past ally and the wooing of a past opponent. In this case it would seem that good politics and good government blended in an agreement that was fair and reasonable to both the Commonwealth and public workers.

Would anyone suggest seriously that the protracted and divisive warfare that erupted between the governor and public employees in the first Dukakis administration provides a better alternative? Without boring the reader with figures, the agreement, while still below the average and annual rate of inflation, gave salary hikes that allow state employees to try to keep pace with the anticipated increase in the cost of living, while also being a fair settlement for the state.

An integral part of the Dukakis coalition in the election was the state's minorities: their support was overwhelming. This was not surprising, given former Governor King's almost total lack of concern in this area. Also, again not so surprising, Dukakis has emphasized affirmative action once again in all state hiring including appointments to his personal staff.

As for Human services, the record there too is clear - he's confronted the problems of the homeless, and budgetary proposals offer a clothing allowance for welfare recipients and cost-of-living hikes for mental health and social service providers.

With his proposed local aid package and its distribution formula, Dukakis will help the state's municipalities most in need - something hailed by many of the mayors and elected representatives of the cities and towns, who, almost to a man, were with Ed King in the last election. Doing this, and by directing local aid funds through the Chapter 70 schools assistance formula, the governor has firmed up the backing of the Massachusetts Teachers Association.

Sure, there are areas where the governor has stumbled, and misread public opinion. But, for the most part, Mike Dukakis is off to a good start as the first six months of his administration winds down.

Educational politics

By Robert Walters

> If Mondale is nominated and wins next year's election, the NEA can expect to receive from his administration an equally unjustifiable massive increase in federal education expenditures...

Rather than provide enlightened leadership in the quest to improve the nation's troubled public schools, both major political parties apparently prefer to manipulate the issue for their own partisan advantage.

A series of critical reports issued in recent months by prestigious commissions and committees has focused public attention on the plight of the country's schools. But for almost a decade the Democrats have, in effect, delegated to the National Education Association whatever responsibility they might have for enhancing the quality of education.

In theory, the NEA is a professional organization representing 1.7 million teachers who care about their students and their schools as well as themselves. In practice, it has acquired all of the characteristics of a labor union dedicated to promoting the narrow concerns of its members — even when those goals conflict with the broader public interest.

Moreover, the NEA has conducted a determined campaign of dubious value to become highly politicized and to insinuate itself into the affairs of the Democratic Party.

At the Democrats' two most recent presidential nominating conventions, the NEA marshaled what was arguably the largest but unquestionably the best organized delegation representing a single commitment to Jimmy Carter when he was seeking the party's 1976 presidential nomination, the NEA received as its reward the creation of the federal Department of Education.

Not satisfied with the wholly unwarranted expansion of the Washington bureaucracy, the NEA has again become intimately involved in Democratic politics and is leaning toward endorsing former Vice President Walter F. Mondale as the party's 1984 presidential candidate.

If Mondale is nominated and wins next year's election, the NEA can expect to receive from his administration an equally unjustifiable massive increase in federal education expenditures -- accompanied by concomitant growth in federal influence over educational policy.

President Reagan repeatedly promised during the 1980 campaign that he would press for the abolition of the Department of Education.

With a national consensus rapidly forming around the need for a major effort to substantially upgrade the educational system, Reagan suddenly has developed an expanded interest in the subject and is scurrying about making speeches on the subject in Tennessee, Minnesota and New Mexico.

The centerpiece of the president's program is a call for merit pay scales which would reward the most talented teachers — a position which his senior aides candidly acknowledge was embraced precisely because it is stridently opposed by the NEA and its allies in the Democratic Party.

(Like most other large organizations, the NEA apparently believes it has an obligation to protect even its most mediocre members — and they obviously would not be the beneficiaries of a merit pay system.)

Reagan also has been dishonest about his handling of the federal education budget. "The truth of the matter is we haven't cut any budgets," he claimed recently in Hopkins, Minn. "Each (annual) budget is still bigger than the last one."

The "truth of the matter" is as follows: In 1981, the president's first year in office, the federal education budget totaled $15 billion. This year's budget is $14.4 billion and the president is calling for $13.5 billion next year.

With friends like Reagan and Mondale, the beleaguered educational system doesn't need any enemies.

Let the show go on Saturday, June 11, at the Newton Highlands Village day three young men who ride in trick bicycle exhibitions were told that they would not be allowed to present their BMX trick show. A rational justification for this refusal was not given. A police officer, allegedly in charge of bicycle safety, was very rude and vindictive to the youmg men and their parents. If he had the patience to investigate the matter he would have discovered many things, such as: three months ago the three young men went to the Highlands Town Meeting with the explanation and pictures of what they were going to do. They, the three young men, were then given permission to participate in the Village Day and were printed in the program as a scheduled event. Since that time they have spent hundreds of dollars upgrading their equipment, hundreds of hours (yes, hundreds!) practicing their exhibition, they have received a sponsorship from a local motorcycle and BMX dealerhip, they have given a trick show at Newton North High, and last week they successfully gave an exhibition at the Brookline High Fair. The town of Brookline extended an invitation to them to perform again next year.

The aforementioned officer said that their exhibition was not safe before observing or inquiring as to what was going to occur. What the officer assumed was dangerous was actually exhaustively practiced and choreographed by these young men, among the best in the area in the increasingly popular sport of freestyle BMX. Also, as done in Brookline, an announcement was to be made that the tricks would not be attempted without adequate preparation and protective equipment. These three young men had enough equipment to "joust" safely, never mind riding a bicycle. This officer, in his haste and callousness, not only discouraged the three young men willing to participate in a community event, but also deprived friends, sponsors, spectators, and relatives (who had traveled great distances) from viewing an exciting exhibition performed by these talented and safe young men. Thus, we would like to draw attention to this arbitratry decision by the Newton Police officer, who in a fevered second wiped out three months of hard work and hope. The insensibility and rudeness of the officer does not speak well of him as a Newton police officer and we would like to believe this is an isolated incident.

day, "We base our comments on a report by Mary Adelstein. She had professionals go through the building."

Adelstein, a member of the Friends of the Newton Free Library, was asked by the group to conduct the structural study of the main branch, she said.

"We consulted a structural engineer, who has done work on libraries, several architects, fire safety people and library professionals," said Adelstein on Friday.

Some of the structural problems are: a rotted beam in a basement crawl space, water leaking on electrical fixtures and inadequate fire exits, according to Adelstein.

"I know the Building and Fire Departments think the building is okay, but it doesn't seem worthwhile to put any more money into the building," said Adelstein.

To renovate the old structure will require an expenditure that "could easily approach that of a new structure," say the trustees.

Built with private funds in 1870, the main branch has had three other additions. One in 1886, the second in 1928 when another floor was added and in 1951 a new wing was built.

Since the 1940s various Boards of Library Trustees have campaigned unsuccessfully for a new main branch, according to a pamphlet issued by the current board.

The sale of the main branch "and very likely one or more of the nearer branches" will contribute to the cost of the new building, stated the trustees.

Somewhat contradicting the above statement on branch sales is another in the same letter saying, "No decision on branch closings has been made, or should be made until we have seen what new patterns of use develop after the new facility is open."

Property tax exemptions

City leads the way in hardship cases

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city has taken a pioneering role in attempting to establish specific criteria for judging the worth of applications for hardship exemptions from property taxes.

Mayor Theodore Mann has announced the appointment of a special advisory committee "to assist the Board of Assessors in developing objective criteria for awarding Clause 18 financial hardship abatements."

Chief Assessor Robert Palmer and John Rogers, president of the taxpayers group Save Our Homes II (SOH II), have been discussing the lack of set guidelines for granting exemptions since last December, according to Rogers. They had a special meeting with alderman Paul Coletti, chairman of the Revaluation Committee, more than a month ago to discuss the possibility of setting up an independent board that would pass on recommendations to the assessors in hardship cases.

They have considered asking the Board of Aldermen and the mayor to petition the state legislature for Home Rule legislation which would allow for special advisory committees to be set up throughout the state to pass judgement on hardship exemptions.

Rogers said he would hope the Newton advisory committee would serve as a prototype when the Home Rule petition is finally submittee to the state legislature.

Under the existing statutes, the assessors of each municipality are the sole judges in hardship cases. Rogers contends, and he has presented the documents to prove it, that assessors are not always prepared to pass judgement on hardship exemptions.

The head of SOH II, after considerable digging, has produced legal records which suggest some municipalities have granted or denied hardship applications "whimsically." Assessors have varied their exemptions from zero to 100-percent of the property tax bill, changing their judgement from year to year without any change in an applicant's financial picture, according to Rogers' research.

He emphasized that his efforts were not spurred by any such capriciousness on the part of the Newton Board of Assessors. "I've said, several times, that I don't consider this a problem in Newton. No one has been treated unfairly. In a city of 22,000 homeowners who pay taxes, 350 applications for hardship exemptions are not very many," Rogers commented Friday.

He added that his proposal to form an advisory committee, which would be made up of professionals trained in the social sciences, "seems like a reasonable thing to do. I don't see why Newton shouldn't take a leadership position in this."

Palmer said, last month, that all but a handful of the applications for Clause 18 exemptions have been approved. He also agreed with Rogers that, while assessors are well-trained to appraise property values, they might not be the best group to judge the more humane criteria applicable to hardship exemptions.

Following Palmer's recommendation, the mayor stated, "I have appointed a broad-based advisory committee, consisting of representatives of widespread community groups, with the hope that we can advise the Assessing Department as to guidelines that should be used in evaluating the financial resources of applicants for tax relief."

He also evidenced concern for the rights of those taxpayers who will be picking up the slack left by the exempted taxes. "A critical part of the committee's work will be developing guidelines which balance the needs of needy residents against the additional demands which hardship abatements place on all other taxpayers," he stated.

The advisory committee will include, besides Rogers, Sandra Butzel of the League of Women Voters; Howard Lipton, director of human services for the city; Alderman Paul Coletti; Joseph Alexander of the Newton Taxpayers Association; Ouida Young, assistant City Solicitor, and Joan Chiasson of the Human Rights Commission.

Public library hearing

NEWTON — The aldermen have scheduled a public hearing on a referendum question for November's ballot which would allow voters to decide if they wanted to override Proposition 2½ with a bond issue that would finance a new central library.

President of the Board of Aldermen Matthew Jefferson's original proposal for a meeting of "a committee of the whole" was roundly criticized by aldermen who said they did not want to appear to be "spearheading" a drive for a new library.

"I don't want to attend anything but a public hearing" on a new library, alderman Paul Coletti said, stressing that he did not want the aldermen to get caught up in the politics already surrounding the issue.

"I want to hear from the people, not the mayor or the trustees," alderman Richard Bullwinkle told his colleagues.

Alderman Rodney Barker commented that a public hearing on the question was unnecessary. If the aldermen and the mayor would approve the library question for the fall ballot, Barker said, "There will be four months of public hearings."

Alderman Edward Richmond said he thought any action taken before a determination was made on the fate of the city's branch libraries would be "irrelevant."

The public hearing was set for Wednesday, June 29, 7:45 p.m. at City Hall. President Matthew Jefferson said he did not want to set the date in July because he anticipated critics saying the board held its important public hearings when interested citizens were away on vacation. "We'll be castigated for having a public hearing when everyone is at the beach," he commented.

Mayor Mann hospitalized

Newton Mayor Theodore Mann was "doing well" after being admitted to Newton-Wellesley Hospital for bronchitis.

Mann's wife said her husband was admitted over the weekend but that it was "nothing terribly serious." She said he had been coughing but that: "He's going well."

Mrs. Mann said she expected her husband to stay in the hospital for a couple of days.

Mann's regular weekly press conference scheduled for this week was canceled. Mann late last week returned from Denver, where he attended a mayors conference.

to become the rule of the day?'" he commented.

The 37-year-old Newtonville resident said he has accomplished many of the goals he set for himself when he first ran for alderman ten years ago. While he admitted there are always new goals coming up, he added, "I don't want to be like the aging athlete who stays on past his prime."

Alderman Ethel Sheehan, a cohort of Morris' on the Land Use Committee who is also opting not to run again, commented that his stepping down from the board is "a terrible loss to the city. I've been fortunate to be on Land Use with Elliot Cohen and Terry Morris — two very dedicated, hard working persons."

Sheehan added, "It's been particularly interesting to watch Terry grow in stature and intelligence over the years," and she commented that she had to wonder who, among the other aldermen, could fill his shoes as chairman of the Land Use Committee.

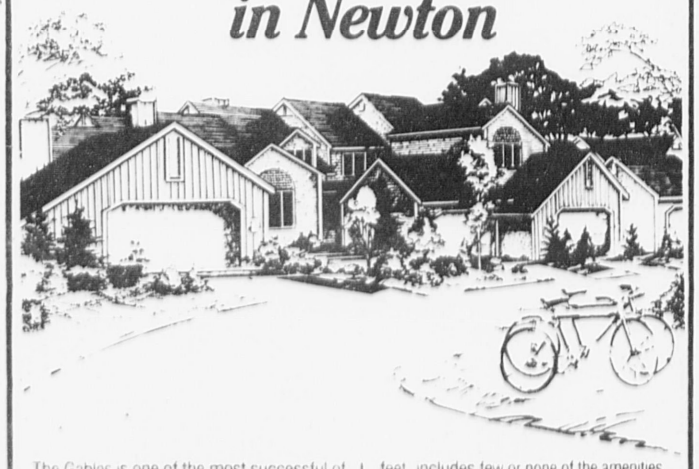
A Better Choice Than Ever...
The Gables in Newton



The Gables is one of the most successful of the long string of exceptional communities built by The Green Company. Phase III, announced just last fall, is selling so rapidly that we are underway with the additional two and three bedroom homes in the fourth and final phase. So, right now you have a better choice than ever at Newton's choicest location—The Gables, directly adjoining the Charles River Country Club.
The five distinctive styles range from a three bedroom, 3100 square foot home at $400,000 to a 1900 square foot two-bedroom at just $265,000* Exceptional values when you consider that today's average, yet very expensive, three bedroom home offers less than 1200 square feet, includes few or none of the amenities and certainly not the location of The Gables.
Homes feature unusual touches like soaring cathedral and Bermuda ceilings, a wonderful flow between rooms, unexpected fireplaces in kitchens and master bedrooms, attached two-car garages with direct indoor access, large very private deck and/or courtyard areas, and full basements. There's a private clubhouse overlooking a sunning area, swimming pool, whirlpool, and two tennis courts.
Models are open every day from 9 to 5 at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets, Newton. Telephone (617) 969-0200 for an appointment.

Commissioner gets roasted by pols

By Paul Dinger, Staff Writer

WATERTOWN — Gov. Michael S. Dukakis and a bevy of Middlesex County pols, county workers, and others attended a roast Wednesday night to honor the chairman of the Middlesex County Commissioners — who just graduated from the Kennedy School of Government.

Chairman Tom Larkin, who will be running for re-election in 1984, was poked in fun by county wits and non-wits at a $20-a-plate dinner at the Greek Community Center.

Among the local guests were Watertown Town Clerk James Fahey, School Committee member Carolyn Kroll and state Sen. George Bachrach, D-Watertown.

Middlesex County is the largest county in the state, emcompassing Waltham, Watertown, Newton and Weston in the west suburbs. Watertown was chosen as the roast site because of its accessibility, according to Diane Mahoney, a member of the Committee to elect Tom Larkin, who organized the event.

"This is the largest Armenian community in the county and we're in a Greek hall," quipped the first roaster, Paul Haley, a former Somerville city solicitor.

Haley asked Larkin if he still bought his suits at Cumberland Farms.

Bachrach, one of the most outspoken critics of Middlesex County government in the Senate, spoke briefly. He noted that "charisma is something you have the day after you win," and called Larkin a "fair and adequate county commissioner."

State Sen. Dick Kraus, D-West Arlington, called Watertown "Bachrach-land."

Middlesex County Registrar of Deeds John Zamparelli, who was moderator of the roast, referred to Bachrach as the "Omar Sharif of the Senate."

County Treasurer Rocco Antonelli asked Larkin, "How can you endorse a governor who wants to take away your job, and a Legislature that wants to take away your building?"

Somerville Alderman Salvatore Albano said Larkin has been telling people his campaign was picking up speed. "Isn't that what happens when you're going downhill?" he wondered.

Dukakis, who came in near the end of the affair, along with Metropolitan District Commissioner Bill Geary, wanted to know how many Greeks were in the audience, before congratulating Larkin. Dukakis taught at the Kennedy School while Larkin was there.

Former Acton Selectman Greg Jarboe compared Larkin's position as county commissioner to that of lieutenant governor. "Nobody knows what he does," Jarboe explained.

The other two county commissioners, Bill Schmidt and Mike McLaughlin, attended the dinner. But only Schmidt stayed for the roasting.

NEWTON — Sharon Rounds, M.D., of West Newton, assistant professor of medicine at Boston University School of Medicine and medical director of respiratory therapy at University Hospital, has been selected as an Edward Livingston Trudeau Scholar by the American Lung Association.

F. Sessions Cole, M.D., of Newton Highlands, assistant professor of pediatrics at Harvard Medical School and pediatrician, as well as neonatologist, at Chidren's Hospital Medical Center, has also been selected as an Edward Livingston Trudeau Scholar by the American Lung Association, as part of the lung association's continuing research and education effort.

Rounds is a pulmonary physician, and a member of the American and Massachusetts Thoracic Societies. She graduated from Wellesley College in 1968 and from Tufts University School of Medicine in 1972.

She was awarded an American Lung Association training fellowship in the 1976-1978 period, and was also a Trudeau Scholar from 1981-84. She is a native of Portland, Maine, and has contributed many articles and abstracts to scientific journals as well as producing chapters for books related to pulmonary difficulties.

Cole is a 1969 graduate of Amherst College and a 1973 graduate of Yale University School of Medicine cum laude. While at Yale, he was a member of Alpha Omega Alpha. He is a native of Providence, R.I.

Thelma Hewitt, President of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, located in Walpole says, "The American Lung Association provides Christmas Seal funds for the Edward Livingston Trudeau Scholar Awards so that promising young physicians in schools of medicine or osteopathy will have an opportunity to stay in academic medicine and prove themselves as teachers, coordinators of teaching, and investigators in the field of prevention and control of lung disease."

Cable firm watches for service theft

Continental Cablevision, which operates in Newton, is on the watch for theft of its cable service and will prosecute under the present law as well as the new, tougher state law when it takes effect in August, District Manager Jeffrey B. Carroll announced recently.

"Tampering with equipment or an illegal hook-up to the cable system will not be tolerated," Carroll said. "It's a crime and we will treat it accordingly."

Communities effected by the initiative are Newton, Beverly, Needham, Reading, Saugus, Watertown, Wellesley, and Winchester.

The present law, which is on a sticker attached to each subscriber's cable converter, states that "any unauthorized person who attaches a wire cable or any other device to any wire, cable, or any part of the transmitting units" will be punished "by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by imprisonment in state prison for not more than five years, or in jail or house of correction for not more than 2½ years," or both.

Under the law, Continental recently has successfully prosecuted in Watertown and is pursuing a case in Winchester. "Both the Watertown and Winchester police departments have been very cooperative and Continental appreciates their efforts," Carroll noted.

On May 25, a Watertown resident was found guilty of theft of service in Waltham District Court and fined $500. Continental Chief Technician Frank Beauchner noticed the illegal hook-up from the street, and with police, traced it to the resident's home.

The new law, effective Aug. 16, makes it a crime to obtain cable television by falso representation, false statement, or stratagem by installing or tampering with facilities or equipment, or by any other means. This is aimed at the individual who illegally hooks-up or steals pay services and carries penalties of $100, 30 days, or both.

In addition, it's a crime to make, sell, or possess any instrument, equipment, apparatus, or device used or designed to fraudulently obtain cable television service. This is geared toward vendors of pirate boxes, and manufacutrers of the same, and carries a stiffer penalty of $2,000, 12 months or both.

Newton residents Mr. and Mrs. Irving Usen, center, have been generous supporters of Newton-Wellesley Hospital for more than 30 years. In recognition of their most recent gift of $100,000 for the renovation of the hospital's Neurophysiology Unit, they were presented with a Waterford crystal champagne cooler at the recent Second Century Society's Gala Celebration held at the DeCordova Museum. Shown above with the Usens are NWH President Felix M. Pilla, left, and H. Bradlee Perry, chairman of the hospital.

Completion dates announced for Pearl Street construction

NEWTON CORNER — The groundbreaking ceremony for the Pearl Street Improvement Project was held on May 16.

The estimated completion date for this project is Sept. 15, 1983. Funding for improvements for Pearl Street in Nonantum has been allocated through the Community Development Program, with an anticipated construction date of July 1, 1984.

The project will consist of street reconstruction through reclamation of the existing street; new curb and sidewalk installation where needed; and new water main installation.

The portion of Pearl Street to be improved extends from Jackson Road to Bacon Street.

Mayor Theodore Mann said the funding for this project will be provided through three different funding sources. The total project cost will be $319,082.

The federally funded Community Development Block Grant will provide $264,061 for improvements to the street, curbs, sidewalks and a portion of the water main improvements, the city will contribute $29,673 for a portion of the water main improvements, and the state will provide $25,348 through a grant from the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs for the remaining portion of the water main improvements.

The reclamation process to be utilized for the street reconstruction is a new time and cost saving process which was recently used for the reconstruction of Elliot Street in Newton Upper Falls. It is anticipated that the city will save approximately $30,000 on the Pearl Street as a result of the reclamation process, according to Mayor Mann.

The process consists of grinding up the existing pavement into a fine material which is then used as the base for the new street. The new process eliminates the costs of disposing of the old pavement material and of purchasing and transporting new gravel for the base of the new street.

Clergymen to meet at B.C.

CHESTNUT HILL — Approximately 130 of the nation's top clergymen inlcuding bishops, priests, nuns and laypeople, will gather at Boston College through June 22 to attend a National Liturgical Consultation.

The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss the state of the liturgical movement in the 1940s and to appraise its efforts in the past four decades.

Participants will also discuss gathering items for future historical evaluation of American Catholicism in the 20th century.

Group members will be also discuss ways of improving liturgical life and worship within and outside the church.

Participants will view and discuss the religious items which comprise Boston College's Liturgical Collection. The collection is part of the university's special library holdings and is the only one of its kind in the country.

Fr. William Leonard, S.J., curator of the Liturgical Collection and Special Collections at Boston College, is responsible for the collection and was the key organizer for the consultation, sponsored by the Boston College Theology Department.

Conference participants will include the Most Rev. Charles Buswell, retired bishop of Pueblo, Co.; the Most Rev. John Cummins, bishop of Oakland, Ca.; Sister Mary Pierre Ellebracht, C.PP.S., professor of Liturgy, Kenrick Seminary and Cardinal Glennon College, St. Louis, Mo.; the Most Rev. James W. Malone, bishop of Youngstown, Pa.; and Dr. James F. White, professor of Liturgy at University of Notre Dame.

Commissioners back county treasurer

Gary Dorion
Middlesex News Service

CAMBRIDGE — The Middlesex County Commissioners expect to have a letter of recommendation ready this week to give to County Treasurer Rocco J. Antonelli for possible use in his upcoming criminal trial on a conflict of interest charge.

Antonelli, accused of misusing $1.1 million in county funds and county retirement monies, is scheduled for trial in Middlesex Superior Court in early July. Antonelli was indicted on the misdemeanor aspect of the conflict of interest statute last fall for allegedly using his official capacity to secure a $1.95 million refinancing package for a Somerville real estate development project in which he had a strong interest.

The county funds were deposited in non-interest bearing accounts with the Coolidge Bank.

Antonelli recently failed in his bid to have a judge dismiss the indictment against him on the grounds of extensive pre-trial publicity and other grounds.

On Friday, County Commision Chairman Thomas Larkin said Antonelli has performed his work as county treasurer in a "professional manner" since Larkin became a commissioner. Antonelli's alleged illegal activity predated Larkin's term in office, however.

Larkin said he will propose that he and commissioners Bill Schmidt and Michael McLaughlin draft their own letters of recommendation for Antonelli. Larkin noted Antonelli's office earned about $1 million in interest for the county last year.

A bid last week by McLaughlin to get a similar letter approved by the commission was withdrawn after Schmidt indicated he could only make recommendations on Antonelli's performance as of January, 1983, when Schmidt took office.

McLaughlin's draft letter stated "In our dealings with Mr. Antonelli, we have found that he carries out his statutory duties according to the highest professional and ethical standards."

Worker favored in $1.3 million negligence case

By Gary Dorion
Middlesex News Service

CAMBRIDGE — A Middlesex jury last week awarded a $1.3 million judgement against a Wayland company and a Pennsylvania firm for negligence in the case of a West Newton man who was severly injured when he fell from a scaffold at a Bedford work site.

The incident occurred September 26, 1978.

According to testimony in the civil trial, Domenic Corsetti, 39, fell through a scaffolding manufactured by Deal Products Co. of Pennsylvania. The incident happened while Corsetti was laying bricks on an outside wall of an elevator shaft at the Computor Vision firm in Bedford.

Corsetti, then a sub-contractor at the Stone Company of Wayland, suffered broken arms and serious back injuries when he fell through the scaffoilding and landed forty feet down. It was alleged that the manufacturer of the scaffolding was negligent because a side bracket let go, causing the fall and that the company failed to indicate on the scaffolding how old the structure was.

The Stone Company also was found negligent. It was alleged that the firm violated occupatioanl standards because Corsetti was not wearing a safety line when he fell.

Corsetti's lawyer, Frederick N. Halstrom, told reporters it has not yet been determined what percentage of the judgement the Stone Company and Deal Products company will pay. Corsetti reprtedly has not worked at a job since the incident.

Real estate leaders meet at Boston College

CHESTNUT HILL — About 50 Boston College alumni and leaders in the real estate community are expected to attend a dinner with Father J. Donald Monan S.J., president of Boston College on June 22.

The dinner is being organized by the Boston College Real Estate Professionals Committee. It will be held at the Governor Oliver Ames Mansion, 355 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, with a cocktail hour to precede the dinner at 6 p.m. Dinner will be served at 7.

It will mark the start of a fundraising campaign among approximately 400 Boston College alumni in the real estate business.

The goal of the campaign is to raise $500,000 to establish an endowed chair.

John M. Corcoran, president of John M. Corcoran Co., is the chairman of the Boston College Real Estate Professionals Committee. The other members are Patrick Carney, president of Claremont Company; Joseph E. Corcoran, president of Corcoran, Mullins, Jennison; Paul A. Faraca, president of Faraca Co., which is housed in the Gov. Oliver Ames Mansion; John R. Gallagher III, general partner of State Street Development Corp.; E. Paul Robsham, president of Robsham Realty Corp. and E. Denis Walsh, president of E. Denis Walsh Associates.

Those attending include:

Paul A. Faraca of Chestnut Hill, John F. Lee of Waltham, David L. Pergola of Belmont, Kevin C. Phelan of Wellesley, Peter J. Romano of Belmont, Francis W. Smith of Lexington, and Thomas A. Walsh of Wellesley.

Mrs. Jonathan T. Donaldson Hargreaves Studio photo

Roberta Fortin is bride of Jonathan T. Donaldson

Roberta V. Fortin of Newtonville became the bride of Jonathan T. Donaldson of Newton in a ceremony June 12 at St. Teresa of the Child Jesus Church in Pawtucket, R.I.

Rev. Joseph P. Hynes officiated and was assisted by the groom's grandfather, the Rev. Dr. William Murry Taylor. A reception followed at the Pawtucket Country Club.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert G. Fortin of Pawtucket. The groom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Franklin Donaldson of Auburndale.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white organza with a high round lace collar decorated with seeded pearls. The sheer yoke extended into the shoulder of the puffed lace sleeves accented with alencon lace and pearls on the bodice. The corselet waist was over a full organza skirt with an alencon lace border extending through the train. Her veil was a white cathedral illusion with a fresh flower wreath. She carried an arm bouquet of gardenias surrounded by white gladiolas, stephanotis and English ivy.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Mrs. Melanie Long of Tulsa, Okla.

Best man was Mark Webster of Newton.

Bridesmaids were Miss Nancy LaFreniere of Newton and Miss Martha Donaldson of Newton, the groom's sister.

Serving as ushers were Robert G. Fortin of Pawtucket, the bride's brother, and Bradley Strand of Minneapolis, Minn.

The bride is a graduate of Tolman High School in Pawtucket and a 1977 graduate of the University of Connecticut. She is a cardiology technician for New England Medical Center.

The groom, a graduate of Newton North High School, received his bachelor's degree in 1980 from Carleton College, Northfield, Minn.

He recently completed his first year at the Boston University School of Medicine.

Following a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will live in West Newton.

Cohens have new daughter

A daughter, Lindsay Jill, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Cohen of Wayland. Lindsay Jill is the couple's second child. She was born May 27 and Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

The grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Philip W. Cohen of Newton and Mr. and Florida and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Cohen of Manhattan, New York. Greatgrandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Danzig of Hallandale, Florida.

Policy on photos

NEWTON — The Newton Graphic welcomes wedding or engagement announcements. There is no charge.

The discreet charm of homemade ice cream

The handcrank has given way to the electric motor, but the result is still heavenly

Barbara Lamothe and Pat Kelley enjoy a cooling summer treat at the Bubbling Brook in Westwood.

By Sarah Droney McGurrin
Food Editor

Ice cream is that divine food that is enjoyed by all and positively worshipped by most. Homemade ice cream is so superior to store-bought that it's absolutely addicting.

Electric ice cream churners have replaced the old cranks so there's no longer any excuse not to make your own. The electric models, available at low prices, $18-20 on sale, make for easy preparation though perfectionists still insist on hand churning.

When I was a child, making ice cream was a day long event that occupied the entire neighborhood.

All the kids on the block would take turns churning the sweet nectar for hours. The end was always worth the work though — for the sweetest creamiest concoction ever.

Back in my mother's childhood, ice cream making was even more of an event since the ice had to be ordered specially from the ice man.

No wonder that ice cream parlors featuring homemade goodies are so popular. There is just no comparison between homemade and freezer packed.

You need ice, salt (1 box full) and water to fill the space between the cream can and the ice bucket. The icy salt water mixture is what lowers the temperature of cream mixture to its freezing point.

Layer the freezing mixture; 1 cup of water, a layer of ice cubes one cube deep and about 6 tablespoons of salt. Continue building the ice/salt layers until the bucket is full.

Sprinkle on any remaining salt and slowly pour another cup of water evenly over the top layer.

For a coarser texture, add more salt and process the cream faster. For a finer texture use less salt and process the cream slower.

You should fill the ice cream can with the ingredients before starting the freezing mixture process.

The cream ingredients level should be below the fill line in the container to leave room for expansion.

With an electric churner, the job should take anywhere between 20 and 50 minutes, depending on temperature of ingredients and desired texture.

To ripen or harden the mixture, stir the ingredients with a wooden spoon and pack down to eliminate air pockets.

Place a piece of plastic or waxed paper over the mouth of the cream can and snap on lid — or spoon the mixture into a plastic bowl and snap on lid. Put it in freezer for 1 to 2 hours.

For fruit ice cream, you need a basic vanilla ice cream recipe to which you add either frozen or fresh fruit. I prefer fresh fruit.

Slice 1 to 2 cups of ripe fruit into bite-sized pieces. In a small bowl, combine half of the sugar called for in the basic ice cream recipe and mix with fruit. Cover and allow to sit for 24 hours in the refrigerator. Then you'll have the flavored syrup.

Set aside some fruit to add as whole pieces and puree the rest in a blender. Add the pureed fruit and syrup to the basic cream mixture just before processing. Mix in the reserved pieces by hand after processing and before hardening.

If using frozen fruit, let thaw and add to cream mixture before processing.

One of the best things about ice cream is the variety of things that can go on top. Any number of items around the house can top off ice cream to make a more elegant dessert. Flavored liqueurs, chopped nuts, crushed macaroons, shredded coconut, and shaved chocolate all are tasty on ice cream.

The following are some favorite ice cream recipes as well as the sweetest and easiest chocolate sauce recipe I've ever found.

Vanilla Ice Cream

2 cups heavy cream
2 cups light cream
1 cup sugar
1 1/2 pure vanilla extract
1/8 teasp. salt

Pour cream directly into cream can. Add sugar, vanilla and salt. Stir with wooden spoon until sugar dissolves. Then process.

Chocolate sauce

4 squares unsweentened chocolate
1 cup sugar
2/3 cup hot milk, cream or coffee
1 teasp. vanilla
dash of salt

Cut chocolate into pieces. Put all ingredients into a blender and blend on high speed until mixed well. Store in refrigerator and heat whenever the urge strikes for a hot fudge sundae.

Cover and blend store in frigerator

Striking out on her own

Beth Karagianis
Staff Writer

Danielle Gagnon Torrez, the 30-year-old French-Canadian model who was married to former Red Sox pitcher Mike Torrez, is dressed in Gloria Vanderbilt jeans, a navy blue Lacoste sweater over a white blouse and white leather flats. She is taking tea bags from a cabinet in the kitchen of her Westwood house and as she reaches across the counter, her diamond earrings glisten in the light. She lifts the black teacups and waves her perfect pink fingernails, gesturing the visitor into a sitting room.

She sinks into a white velour sofa beside the telephone. By the phone was where she spent much of the eight years she was married to Mike Torrez, waiting for him to call. As she tucks her legs under her, she is saying in a faint French accent, "I don't blame Mike. There were too many pressures that came between us to blame him.

"We had too many easy-way outs, too many friends, too much freedom, too much money at once, too many opportunists, too much flattery, too much hypocrisy, too many gifts, too, too, too."

Danielle Torrez has collaborated on a just-published book, "High Inside," the story of life with her ex-husband, who now pitches for the New York Mets. She wrote the book for all baseball wives, women whose voices are muffled by the roar of the crowd.

"I wrote the book for women who suppress every self-interest, ambition, desire and dream for the sake of the ball club, and who are bribed into silence," she said.

Danielle Torrez liked the idea of being a baseball wife but didn't like revolving her life around Mike Torrez. She didn't like sitting by the telephone while he was away on road trips, or the 200 days a year she was alone, rooting for him long-distance. For the eight years they were married, she put him first, but rumors of his infidelity were the last straw. She grew up believing she was pretty and special and infidelity didn't fit in.

Last year, she divorced Mike Torrez because, "Life had become suicide. Common sense told me I had to. I have a lot more to celebrate than to mourn."

Danielle Torrez is now on her own for the first time. After the separation, she bought a French chateau-style house in Westwood for $237,500, where she lives with her six-year-old son, Iannick.

"I was scared out of my mind," she said. "If I was prepared to be on my own, I probably would have managed much better. Until I bought the house, I never had paid a phone bill."

Her life had been insulated, and baseball was the safety net.

"Baseball made things automatically easy," she said. "You have that name, Mrs. Whoever. Things fall from the sky for you.

"It doesn't work that way anymore. I have to rely on myself. But when you do and are accepted for yourself, it's great."

Danielle Torrez was seduced by baseball and now wants people to know what she learned the hard way. "Baseball is a prison. It is a huge golden cage where you cannot feel anything real."

She also learned the hard way that being the wife of a baseball player wasn't always glamorous.

"When I got married, I gave up my career, changed my name and my country. I went from an active, ambitious young woman to a lonely woman without a purpose. My body reflected the new me. I cut my hair, dyed it brown and gained 40 pounds. I became depressed, deprived and lonely. From April to October is a lot of lonely hours."

She was born an only child on April 2, 1953 to Jean and Lucille Gagnon, a Montreal bus driver and part-time waitress, whom she said smothered her with love. At 13, she began modeling and became a teen fashion queen. She was a television star and one of the squares in the French version of Hollywood Squares, when she met Mike Torrez at Harlow's, a chic Montreal disco, when she was 19.

Danielle Torrez

She was a personality before she was entirely a person. He was a pitcher for the Montreal Expos. They both loved the spotlight. It made sense they would find each other.

Two years later, on Oct. 26, 1974, Danielle Annette Gagnon and Michael Augustine Torrez were married at St. Joachim Church in Montreal. After a prime roast beef dinner and a trip to Acapulco, they moved into a luxurious high-rise apartment, prepared to live happily ever after. Three weeks later, Torrez was traded to the Baltimore Orioles, then to the Oakland A's and the New York Yankees. Then came a child, dashed expectations, the move to Boston, emotional withdrawal, rumors of infidelity, suspicions, insults, doubts. On Oct. 26, 1982, their eighth wedding anniversary, Mike and Danielle Torrez were divorced in Dedham Probate Court.

Danielle Torrez is turning the pages of her wedding album, looking into the face of the man she married, a man whom she is saying is not the man she divorced.

"See this man?" she says, smoothing her hand over the photograph. "I didn't divorce him. The man I divorced was not this man."

Of every human relationship she ever had, she most values her relationship with Mike. Their marriage had been the best and worst parts of her life.

"The greatest highs of my life were with Mike," she said. "It also was the most painful."

On April 8, 1977, she had a son. Complications developed and she lapsed into a coma. While a priest gave her last rites in Montreal, Torrez shut out the Chicago White Sox in Oakland.

In the fifth inning, the scoreboard lit up. "Congratulations to Mike and Danielle Torrez on the birth of their son." It was how he learned he had become a father.

For 17 months after the birth, Danielle was sick. She was in a coma and given last rites several times. She later miscarried three children. It put a terrible strain on the marriage. Torrez wanted a big family.

"God, I never thought I would (divorce him.) I never thought I could do it," she said.

"But the fear of leaving my husband and the easy life was being outweighed by this terrific fear that Mike was becoming someone I didn't know anymore. Our values and goals were slipping away and I could see it coming."

In May 1980, her lawyer sent Torrez a telegram. It said she wanted a divorce.

"Mike called and said, 'What's the joke?' I said, 'It's not a joke.' When she convinced him, she said, he broke into a rage. Then, he cried.

"I never knew if he were crying because he was losing me or because it would mean possible financial disaster. I'd always wondered about that. I still do, but now I figure," she said, leaning forward and pointing a long finger, "that it was 70 percent he was crying for me and 30 percent over the money.

"I never asked him. I don't want to know."

Danielle Torrez is walking the visitor to the front door. As she steps inside the foyer under a gold chandelier, she is saying she has begun a new life.

She still reads the sports pages and watches baseball on television but "the easy life" and Mike Torrez are now part of the past. She is engaged to Wallace Trapilo Jr., a 36-year-old engineer whom she met through friends, and she is working on a second book, "Illusions," based on illusions in the fashion industry.

She moves into a triangle of light cast through the open door and leans against the door frame. Life with Mike Torrez, she says, made her feel a little like Alice in Wonderland.

"I would like to compare notes with Alice in Wonderland. In ways, I was the Alice in Wonderland.

"She experienced the unnatural. The characters in her dreams were magical. She met the good, the bad, the comic and the tragic, and she went through fantastic changes. I don't think anyone but Alice could carry that in her heart.

"Too bad Alice wasn't real."

Recreation notes

NEWTON — The Newton Parks and Recreation Department announced its summer calendar of events.

Farmers' Market- The popular Farmers' Market will be opening for its fourth season on Tuesday, July 12. The Market is open every Tuesday through October 25 from 2:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. in the Newton City hall War Memorial Circle. Featured are fresh fruits and vegetables, flowers, plants, dried flowers, herbs, fresh frozen turkey pies, eggs, maple syrup, and honey.

Tennis Lessons: The Newton Parks and Recreation Department will be sponsoring summer tennis lessons (July-August) for children and adults. Registration for these lessons will be Monday, June 27, and Wednesday, June 29, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Newton Centre Hut on Tyler Terrace in Newton Centre. There will be day and evening lessons. The registration fee for the 7-week session (7 lessons) will be $20 for adults and $10 for children. For further information, call Sue King at 552-7120.

Albemarle Acres Summer Program: The Newton Parks and Recreation Department is again sponsoring Albemarle Acres Summer Program held at the Albemarle Playground adjoining the Horace MANN School from July 5 - Aug. 12. Swimming lessons, outdoor adventure, super games and fitness, track and field, arts and crafts, music and drama are among the activities offered during the program, which runs from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday thru Friday. The cost is $35 per week per child. There are still openings in weeks 5 and 6, but the first four weeks of the program are filled. For further information, call the Parks and Recreation Office at 552-7120.

Summer Swim Facilities: Gath Pool on Albemarle Road, Newtonville, opened on a pre-season schedule on Saturday, June 11. The pre-season schedule is Monday-Friday, 2 p.m.-4:55 p.m. General Swim, 5 p.m.-5:55 p.m. Swim Team Practice, 6 p.m.-6:55 p.m. Family/Adult Swim, and 7 p.m.-dusk Adult Swim.

Crystal lake on Rogers Street, Newton Highlands, will open on Saturday, June 18. The pre-season schedule is Monday-Friday, 2 p.m.-dusk General Swim and Saturday-Sunday, 1-dusk General Swim.

Swim Team: Practices for the Newton Parks and Recreation Department Swim Team started at Gath Pool on Monday, June 13. Anyone interested in joining the team may sign up Monday-Friday at Gath Pool from 5 p.m.-6 p.m. The swim team fees this year are: $30 per individual and $50 for a family.

Fillies League Finals: The 1983 Fillies Softball League ended Thursday, June 2, at Albemarle Field with the Turtles defeating the Stones by a score of 7 to 4. The Turtles, coached by Kevin Kelley, compiled a 7 and 1 regular season record and defeated the Candy Girls in semi-final play Wednesday, June 1. The Stones, who had captured the championship in 1982, were 6-0-1-1 in the regular season and arrived in the finals defeating Fox Pharmacy in the semi-final round.

In addition to the championship game, a presentation was made to the winners of the League's major award for sportsmanship. This year the trophy was won by D & B's Tees, coached by Bussy Adam and Dan Coakley. The Sportsmanship award is presented annually to the team who throughout the season exhibits the best qualitites of sportsmanship. The winner is chosen by vote of the umpires and teams.

Women's Summer Volleyball League: The Newton Parks and Recreation Department will sponsor a Women's Summer Volleyball League for women 17 and over at the Hamilton School Field on Monday and Thursday evenings. Two practice clinics will be held on Thursday, July 6, and Monday, July 11, at 6:30 p.m. League play will start Thursday, July 14. For further information, call Sue King at 552-7120.

Tennis Permits: The 1983 tennis permits are now on sale. Residents may purchase themn at the ofice through September, Monday through Friday, 98 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The fees for the permits are: family $25 (includes each member of the family); adults $15 (18 and older); and students $10 (under 18 or full-time college students up to age 25). Applicants must show proof of residency. The tennis permit is required on all supervised courts, which include Newton Centre, Burr Park, Newton North and Newton South High Schools. The reservation season runs from April 30 to Sept. 5.

Dirt Bike Program: The Dirt Bike Program, under the direction of Dick Corbett, is open. The program is held on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. from April through November. The program ;is open to Newton residents aged 8 to 17 and the fee is $5 per vehicle per season, plus $1 for each additional rider. For more information, contact Joe Connors at 552-7120.

Senior Adult News: Two of our Newton senior walkers reached the 50-mile mark. The group meets at the First Baptist Church, Monday and Friday, corner of Center and Beacon Street, Newton Centre at 10 a.m. Each participant keeps their own daily record. When they have walked a total of 50 miles, each senior will be presented with a physical fitness award. On Wednedays we meet at the Beethoven Drop-In Center, Beethoven Avenue, Waban (Zervas School) and walk the Life Course at Cold Spring Playground.

Swim Program: Monday through Friday all summer, Newton seniors are invited to participate in Aquacises Swim Program at Gath Pool from 12:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Classes for non-swimmers, beginners and intermediate programs are absolutely free of charge.

Swim planned

NEWTON — The Charles River Watershed Association's Charles River swim is set for 11 a.m., Saturday, June 25.

Swimmers will meet at the M.D.C.'s Forest Grover reservation in Waltham for a swim to Fox Island about 50 yards off shore. The third annual swim is open to everyone.

CRWA Executive Director Rita Barron said water quality at Forest Grove is "very good" and the only threat to swimmers is cuts from broken glass.

An informal picnic at Forest Grove follows the swim. Call CRWA at 527-2799.

TO THE PARENTS AND STUDENTS OF NEWTON:

Commonwealth Coach would like to thank you for the patience and understanding you have shown us during the recent crisis.

As most of you are aware, sometime on Sunday morning, June 5th a well-organized vandalism effort destroyed the engine of Newton's Public Schools buses and burned the office trailer to the ground at our site in Newton.

Through help from other bus companies in the state, and in cooperation with Newton Public Schools, we were able to provide coverage on 22 of the 32 bus routes on Monday morning, less than 24 hours after the incident. On Tuesday A.M. all 32 of the routes were in full operation.

Our flexibility for field trips and the response to problems has been limited by the number of buses and also greatly hampered by our limited radio availability, as our local radio base station was destroyed in the fire causing us to dispatch our calls through our Medford location until our new base station arrives.

We sincerely apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused you and pledge our most sincere efforts toward restoring equipment to A-1 condition and service to the highest quality attainable.

Thank you again.

Sincerely yours,
Kenneth L. Hoggard

Personal computer buyers beware

By Cynthia Piechowiak
UPI Business Writer

Personal computers, stars of an advertising blitz as potent as those hawking cars, soap and toothpaste, might well become as commonplace as refrigerators in homes of the future.

But before succumbing to the high-tech hard sell, experts warn, consumers should recall a time-honored proverb: Let the buyer beware.

There's no question that personal computers can be worthwhile investments. The difficulty comes in choosing the right one — or none at all.

Experts urge prospective buyers to take their time, do plenty of research and keep a firm hold on their wallets.

Otherwise, a consumer — bombarded by advertisements, anxious to give his children the best or just plain eager to dive into the computer age — might wind up with a unit that sits in the corner gathering dust.

"When people aren't familiar with the field, it's easy to get taken," said Tom Bajzek, associate director of the Computation Center at Carnegie-Mellon University, one of the nation's most computer-conscious institutions.

"Even when an ad is technically correct, it can be misleading," he said. "It's still a very dangerous thing for a novice to get into.

"I don't think everybody necessarily needs one, but some of the ads push people into buying one just because they're there," Bajzek said.

Since coming on the market in the mid-1970s, personal computers have become widely available through discount, department and specialty computer stores at a variety of prices.

For as little as $50, you can buy a simple unit that connects to a television set so you can play video games or balance your checkbook.

A more sophisticated product, including its own color monitor, printer and other features, will copy resumes or teach you Spanish for $2,000 to $3,000.

Some 3 million to 4 million people already own personal computers and up to 150 million worldwide could make good use of them, said Stan DeVaughn, spokesman for Apple Computers in Cupertino, Calif.

"We think that by the early 1990s personal computers will have become for most people their third most important possession, behind their homes and automobiles," DeVaughn said.

Frequently, first-time buyers are overwhelmed by a vast assortment of products and a barrage of intimidating technical terms.

"Competing claims about bits and bytes, rams and roms, and software availability can make anyone's head spin," said Harold Vogel, a computer industry analyst and vice president of the Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith brokerage in New York.

Some frustrated shoppers just toss up their hands and leave everything to the computer salesman — a move akin to letting a car dealer choose their new auto.

"Imagine someone who doesn't know anything about cars going into a car dealer with only the vaguest notion of how many people he'll carry or how much distance he'll travel and putting the decision into the hands of the salesman," said Bill Sholar, Carnegie-Mellon's coordinator for personal computers.

A number of computer companies market their products as easy-to-handle household helpers — "user friendly," in the technical jargon — that will file recipes, figure taxes and maintain a Christmas card list. But experts say that unless you use those products to learn how to program a computer, you're probably throwing away time and money.

"If I wanted a computer just to balance my books and file recipes, it would be a useless investment," said Dona Meilach, author of "Before You Buy a Computer," a first-time buyers guide.

"Who's going to sit there and type all that information? You are. It's easier just to paste things in a recipe book," she said.

A computer purchased for such a limited purpose probably will go to waste, Meilach warned.

"If you only use it monthly, you'll forget how," she said.

But Meilach and others agreed that a well-chosen computer can be a useful investment, especially for parents who want to give their children a head start in the computer age.

"The future's going to be divided between the haves and the have-nots — the kids raised with computers are going to have such an advantage over those who do not," Meilach said.

Personal computers also can be timesavers for many adults who want to manage businesses at home, do free-lance writing, copy form letters or resumes, or learn computer programming.

"Any home that has a file cabinet, a typewriter and a calculator might find itself well served by a home computer," said Sholar.

Cable TV pirates, watching without paying

By Jonathn S. Landay

More than a million Americans are watching free cable television, depriving the nation's cable industry of hundreds of millions of dollars in potential revenues.

They are known as cable pirates: people who, through either their own skills or those of others out for hire, have their sets illegally hooked into the cables outside their apartment doors or on the telephone poles outside their homes.

What legitimate viewers pay an average of $17 a month to see, an estimated 1.6 million cable pirates are receiving free: Home Box Office, Showtime, Prism, Cinemax and other premier entertainment channels.

It is the largest problem now confronting the nation's $4.9 billion a year cable industry, which says the 500-odd systems now in operation nationwide are losing more than $220 million in potential revenues annually through pirating.

The loss of those revenues also deprives states and municipalities of millions of dollars in franchise taxes and, industry officials say, forces cable systems to raise rates of legitimate customers.

"It's the same as shoplifting," said Ed Dooley, vice president of public affairs for the National Cable Television Association.

"It's a big, big problem," said Stanley Singer, executive director of the Pennsylvania Cable Television Association. "It's just like sneaking out of a hotel and down the back stairs without paying your bill."

"I would suggest to you there is an illegal situation here on our system that is costing us up to 10 percent of our gross revenues," said Hank Magers, of U-A Columbia Inc., which serves 115,000 homes in four New Jersey counties.

The converter is the key to unlocking free cable TV

The New Jersey Cable Television Association said theft of programming deprives the state's cable systems of between $15 million and $25 million annually.

Eight of the nine cable companies on Long Island, N.Y., reported losses of $1 million in potential revenues — only a fraction of the estimated $80 million being lost every year by systems throughout the entire state.

Continental Cablevision, in Lansing, Mich., says up to 15 percent of the residents in its area are illegally tapping at least $1.5 million worth of free pay services a year.

Cable pirates, according to industry officials, come in a variety of shades.

"The primary theft involves a homeowner or someone he hires who gets a ladder, climbs a utility pole, taps into the cable company's coaxial wires and runs an illegal line into the house," said Hank Boerner, a spokesman for the Long Island Cable Television Council, which was formed specifically to fight cable theft.

The line then is connected to a converter, which is wired into the television and allows the viewer to select channels.

"Another ploy is to buy the service for one set and then purchase converters for more sets in the house," said Boerner.

The converter is the key to unlocking free cable television.

The devices are provided to customers by cable firms for a monthly charge similar to the telephone lease fees levied by telephone companies. The charge depends on the type of service ordered.

Complete Cable Co. of Madison, Wis., is currently suing a number of electronic shops for selling for $64 each filters that allowed pirates to receive the Showtime movie service for free. A company official said the devices wholesale for $8.

Those who decide to pirate cable services can obtain converters from legitimate electronic stores in states where sales are permitted, from mail order houses, or on the "black market" from cable company or converter manufacturer employees.

Pat Dillon, products manager for the Jerrold Electonics Division of General Instruments Corp., of Hatboro, Pa., the largest manufacturer of converters, said a "sizeable" shipment of devices was recently stolen from an export firm in Miami, Fla.

One of the devices was later recovered in New York City.

"It's a very, very profitable business, as drugs and prostitution are," he said.

The problem, Dillon said, has led Jerrold to step up its own internal security and inventory systems.

In addition to providing an illegal supply of converters, cable company employees and other electronically adept entrepeneurs have been caught running businesses in which, for a one-time fee, they climb telephone polls to patch homeowners into free cable service.

"This is the most severe type of thing we face," said Cliff Paul, an official with the 18,000-customer Service Electric Cable Television, of Sparta, N.J. "We keep our eyes closely on ex-employees, ex-utility company employees and ex-tree climbers. They're the guys who really know how to do it."

'It's a very, very profitable business, as drugs and prostitution are.'

State officials in Pennsylvania in April announced they had uncovered the largest such operation in the United States to date.

According to the officials, some 2,700 residents of northeastern Pennsylvania had been enjoying free cable television services for the past five years.

Charged with masterminding the scheme was Frank Cardamone, of Taylor, Pa., a 23-year-old electronics whiz who dubbed himself the "HBO Kid," a sobriquet he brashly displayed on his calling cards and the license plate of his sports car.

Officials said for a fee of $50 to $125, Cardamone and members of an alleged ring of pirates he headed provided residents with illegal, homemade converters and hooked them into their local cables.

Authorities said the ring members even made service calls.

Cardamone was charged with personally hooking up some 1,140 of the more than 2,700 illegal connections made by the gang in the Scranton-Wilkes Barre area.

The cost in lost revenues to five cable companies was estimated at $250,000 a year.

3 Newton girls head for volleyball Jr. Olympics

NEWTON — Laura Slamin, Nancy Sullivan and Midge Connolly all of Newton have been selected to represent Massachusetts in the National AAU/USA Junior Olympic Volleyball Championship to be held at Illinois Benedictine College starting Saturday through Tuesday.

Nancy and Laura were chosen for the 13 and under division along with six other girls from suburban communities. The All-Star team is being coached by Susan Callahan, who plays volleyball for North Eastern College where she is a student, and Ray Whitehouse, who coached the Quincy High girls' volleyball team to a state championship this season.

Both Laura and Nancy played volleyball this past season for the Newton Division of the New England Junior Olympic Volleyball team. Their team finished in third place.

Laura is a 7th grader at Bigelow Junior High School. She plays volleyball, basketball and softball for the Newton Recreation Department's Junior High School Leagues. Laura also plays the clarinet in the Bigelow Junior High band. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Slamin.

Nancy is an 8th grader at F.A. Day Junior High, where she played volleyball and softball. She was the only 8th grader selected to play on the Day All-Star team.

Nancy also played volleyball, basketball and softball for the Junior High Leagues. An avid swimmer, Nancy is a member of the recreation department swim team. She is unbeaten in the 100 butterfly in her division. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sullivan.

Midge Connolly, a junior at Newton North High, will be attending the National Championship as a member of the 17 and under Massachusetts All-Star team. An outstanding athlete, Midge is on the track, basketball and volleyball teams at Newton North.

Midge is a veteran of national volleyball competition. A year ago, she played on the Massachusetts' 15 and under All-Star team and played in the tourney held in Knoxville, Kentucky. Midge is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Connolly.

Midge's team is being coached by the New England Junior Olympic Volleyball Director, Art Carmichael, who is the volleyball coach at the University of Rhode Island. He is also the Director of the New England Junior Olympic developmental camp.

The purpose of this tournament is to provide national exposure for top young athletes and to provide a feeder program for collegiate and olympic teams.

Judith Slamin (L) and Nancy Sullivan are headed for the volleyball junior olympics

Melideo cops low gross trophy

Greeley Post 440 victor

By Frank Murphy
Sports Editor

NEWTON — Bill Greeley, a captain in the Newton Fire Department, hadn't missed playing in the annual Nonantum American Post 440 Golf Tournament for a dozen years. He had never won a major prize, either.

He changed all that Friday at Sandy Burr Country Club when he recorded a low net of 56 and walked away with the top award, the Domenic F. Marrocco Memorial Trophy. Greeley scored an 88 for the round an wound up the winner via the Calloway system. Six blind holes were implemented in the competitive event.

Bill hasn't been playing golf too often this season. In fact, it was only his third outing of the year. He usually shoots in the high 80's or the low 90's. Friday, he chalked up a birdie on the second hole and had a half dozen pars. Coupled with a couple of bad holes that gave him an advantage over the rest of the field in the Calloway scoring.

Greeley, 53, is a former Our Lady's High three-sport athlete He captained the 1948 football team coached by Gus Sullivan. In addition to winning the Marrocco Trophy, Bill received a brand new set of irons. "I can use them, but I don't know if they will help my game any," he quipped.

Val Melideo, a consistent performer in local golf tournaments throughout the years, was the other major trophy winner. He captured the Past Commanders Trophy which is awarded to the Legion member shooting the low gross score.

Melideo, who previously won the trophy in 1979, fired a three-over-par 75 at Sandy Burr on Friday. He went out in 38 and came back in 37. Val, who admitted: "I putted pretty well but didn't hit the ball that well," had a birdie on the third hole and double bogey on the 8th, knocking his tee shot out of bounds.

The 55-year-old golfer Newton firefighter is a member at Wayland Country Club where he won the Cosgrove Golf Tournament last September. He carries an eight handicap at Wayland.

Frank Castagnino of West Newton had the low score of the day, beating par by one stroke. He put together a 35 and 36 to win the low gross guest prize. Castagnino is a member of the newly formed West Newton Golf Association. Ed Foy, with a 79-59, was the low net guest winner.

Other award winners were as follows: second low net members–Neal Dwyer and Ed Delaney, 64's; second low gross members–Paul Leone and Anthony Leone, 77's; Second low gross guests--Jack Neville, 72; Bob Barron 75; Deek Clancy, 76.

A total of 138 players participated in the golf tourney.

The 14th Annual Pat and Vito Capello Memorial Bocce Tournament, held on the Legion Post 440 grounds, was won by the West Newton Golf Association. The team was captained by Tony Pellegrini and included Rich Faherty, Frank Castagnino and J.J. Walsh. The Silver Lakers were the runner-ups and were formed by Pudge Dalicandro, Tom Giusti, Bob Franchi and Tony Colella.

A roast beef dinner and awards presentation followed Friday night at the Legion ballroom. A moment of prayer was held for deceased participants Steve Palmer, Jim Harmon and Bernard Frechette, Legion members, and the late Guy Tedesco of New Seabury.

Chairman of the event was Dick Cronin with Nick Gentile serving as honorary chairman. Head table guests included Cmdr.-elect Roy Harris, Rep. Joseph DeNucci, Charles Graceffa, Gerry Marrocco, Police Capt. Walter Drew and pro Jack Neville of Ponkapoag G.C.

Edward Boudreau and Ed Hickey served as golf scorers, Robert Burke, awards; Robert Vasilotti, Fats Pellegrini and Don McAdam were bocce co-chairmen with Nick McGrath and Jim Kiley assisting.

Liz Natale earns national rating

Newton's Liz Natale, who recently completed her freshman year at the University of Tennessee, continues to make rapid strides in her brilliant track career.

The former Newton North High star earned All-American honors, which is accorded the the first six finishers in the NCAA Championships. The NCAA's were held last week in Houston, Texas.

Liz, who will turn 19 on June 11th, competed against 36 other girls in 1500 meter (just short of a mile) qualifying heats on Wednesday. The top finishers in each heat raced again on Friday. She qualified for the final heat by covering the distance in a time of 4:18. She finished first among the freshman girls and was sixth overall.

The next competition for Natale will be The Athletic Congress meet (TAC) at Bloomington, Ind., to be held June 17-18. Elite runners from all over the nation qualify with a time of 4:20.

During her frosh year at Tennessee, Natale ran cross-country and indoor and outdoor track (800 meters and mile). The Lady Vols finished fourth in the country in the recent NCCA meet. Tennessee is the top ranked college team in the country for its overall female track program, according to U.S. Track and Field Magazine, the bible of track.

As a senior at Newton North, Liz set the school record in the mile and was the 1981 State cross-country champion. She ran one of the fastest miles in the country that year in the Kendall Classica at Boston College with a clocking of 4:47.

Natale attributes her success this past season, not only on the demanding track workouts, but nautilus and time spent in the swimming pool, which has given her body strength.

The Newton Centre resident, who plans to run in some area 10 kilometer races during the summer months, has potential for the 1984 Olympics.

North's Reilly bound for Maine

Newton North High School's Suburban League All-Star Dan Reilly will be enrolling at the University of Maine at Orno in the fall.

Maine football head coach Ron Rogerson says the 6-4, 240-pound Reilly could see action at center next season. "He has a super attitude and moves wee," says Rogerson, "and his experience at snapping for field goals and punts could be a real plus."

Donna Proia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Proia of Newton, was the catcher for the Cazenovia College (N.Y.) softball this spring. Ranked fifth in New York State, the team won its division in the Liberty Baptist Invitational Tournament held in Lynchburg, Virginia this April. The team's season record was 14 wins and three losses.

Donna, an equine studies major, had a batting average of .438. She is a former Newton North High softball scintillant.

Cazenovia is a two-year private college for men and women located near Syracuse.

The First Team All-Scholastic was also a Division One All-Star and a member of the Shriners Football All-Star squad. Reilly is also a fine lacrosse player. He played varsity for three years at Newton North.

Dan is the son of William and Marie Reilly of 295 River St., West Newton.

Last season the Black Bears won seven and lost four and were co-champions of the Yankee Conference.

Mark Rogan, a 1980 graduate of Newton North, has been elected captain of the Providence College varsity lacrosse team for the 1983-84 season. This spring he played defense midfield. Providence College had a record of 7-2-1.

Mark was a varsity swimmer for Newton North. He is currently a junior at P.C., enrolled in the Engineering program, and will graduate in 1984. He is a Newton Centre resident, the son of John and Marie Logan.

Hinteregger hurls Yankees to final

NEWTON — Pitcher Peter Hinteregger captured his eighth straight victory of the season against no losses to pilot the Yankees to a 14-1 triumph over the Giants Sunday night in a semi-final contest of the Newton Central Little League at Cabot Park.

The Yankees will face the Phillies (6-4 winners over the Twins) Tuesday night in the first game of the best of three final series at Cabot Park. It will be a rematch of last year's finals. Hinteregger allowed just two hits and struck out 10 batters en route to the win.

The Yankees broke open a scoreless tie with a run in the fourth inning. Sean Becker belted a double to drive in a run, while Dan Menitoff cracked a two-run single in the fifth inning. Harley Malter turned in a fine pitching performance in relief.

The Phillies got a strong relief effort from Steve Leonard to defeat the Twins. Leonard came on with the bases loaded and one out in the first frame to pitch five and two thirds innings of one-hit relief.

Rebounding from a 3-0 deficit, the Phillies got a two-run homer from Rob Wilkinson in the third inning. It was his fifth round-tripper of the year. The Phillies took the lead for good with three runs in the fifth inning.

Scott Devore drove in a pair of runs with a single. Jeff Pike also sparked the inning with a double. Mike Cosgrove singled in the fifth and eventual winning run for the Phillies. Bill Murphy added an insurance RBI-single in the sixth for the winners.

In the South Little League finals, Gavin Dreyer allowed three hits to lead the Tigers to a 14-0 victory over the Yankees at Richardson Field. The win gave the Tigers a one game to none advantage in the best of three series.

In Central Little League action Friday, Thad Peterson banged out three safeties to power the Yankees to a 13-2 victory over the Twins. Hinteregger had three hits and two RBIs, while Becker had two hits and three RBIs for the winners.

In Central Minor League play, the Indians upset the Brewers, 3-2, in the semi-finals. The Indians will play the Astros Tuesday night for the title. Alex Hawiger's solo homer in the fourth inning proved to be the difference for the Indians.

George Maxcey, a catcher for the Newton North Little League Indians became the first player in the history of the league to hit three home runs in a game. He powered the Indains to a 9-5 win over the Yankees at Albemarle Field last Thursday.

Maxcey slugged a solo homer in the first and belted a three-run home run in the third.

He walloped a grand-slam in the eighth to break a 5-5 tie and win the game for the Indians.

Peter Kochansky, who cmae in on relief in the seventh, pitched a two inning no-hitter.

Paul Fay pitched six innings for he Yankees and smacked two doubles.

Newton's Chaloff ends NU pitching career

Chris Chaloff, a senior from Newton, recently completed his last season of pitching for the Northeastern University baseball team.

Chaloff pitched consistently throughout the season and proved to be a true game-saver coming out of the bullpen. He appeared in eight games and finished in a tie for second place in saves.

Northeastern finished off its rebuilding year with a record of 16-17, a dramatic turnaround from their 1982 mark of 8-17-1. The Huskies got off to a quick start on their first-ever trip to Florida where they zipped to a 6-1 record. Back in New England, the Huskies proved to be most competitive during the season, scoring victories over Division I rivals Boston College, New Hampshire, Vermont and ECAC finalist Providence.

One of the biggest highlights of the season for this young Husky team was an exciting no-hit game against Brown. It was only the third no-hitter, which dates back to 1921.

Chaloff is one of seven seniors the Huskies lose to graduation. Expectations run high for next season as 22 lettermen are slated to return to action at Parson Field. Head Coach Charlie O'Malley feels the team has the talent to be a contender for the Greater Boston League title in 1984.

Chaloff is a 1979 graduate of Newton South High School, where he took part in baseball and swimming. He was named to the All-League team and was the recipient of the Bill Hamill Award in 1979. Chaloff also excelled in swimming and was named to the All-City team for his talent.

Chaloff is a Business major at Northeastern.

9 Tigers lacrosse All-Stars

NEWTON — The Newton North lacrosse team dominated the Southern Division All-Star team by having nine players named to the squad.

All everything goalie Ed Cohen was a first team selection along with strong midfielders Tim Mulvey and Tom Whiting. On defense, junior Kevin Blake was named to the first team.

Second team members were Kyle Schiller, Tom Ryan, Jim Quinn, John Callahan and Ted Broderick. Schiller and Ryan will form a strong attack combination next season. Schiller scored 24 goals with 20 assists. Ryan, meanwhile, pumped in 22 goals with 25 assists.

Quinn and Callahan were selected to the second team midfield. Quinn, a junior, will be the mainstay of the Newton North midfield next season. Callahan, a senior, did a solid job for the Tigers. Broderick will anchor a strong defense along with Blake next season.

"We've got a solid core of returning players," said Newton North coach Rick Clark, whose team made it to the EMass finals. "We also have some strong candidates coming up from the junior varsity and junior high school program. There'll definitely be some sophomores contending and pushing for spots on the varsity."

The Tigers ended the 1983 season with a 15-3 record overall. The official end to the Newton North campaign will come Sunday June 26 at 2 p.m. when the Tigers will face an alumni squad.

Insurance golf qualifier set for Putterham

Think you can outdrive former Masters champ Charles Coody, outputt Forrest Fezler or outshoot touring pro Larry Ziegler?

Players 17-and-under have a unique opportunity to do just that in the 15th Annual Big "I" Insurance Youth Classic, the nation's most prestigious teenage golf tournament.

The insurance agents of Newton will sponsor a qualifying round for the state finals of the Big "I" in the Newton-Brookline community.

The qualifying round will be held Monday, June 27, at Putterham Meadows Golf Course in Brookline. The local qualifying round is a prelude to the state, with 150 teenagers from across the country going to Vista Valley C.C., Vista, Calif., August 4-9, for the national tourney.

The Big "I" symbol is the familiar insignia of the independent insurance agent in the nation's communities.

4 ex-Newton North players Regis softball standouts

WESTON — Four former Newton North High School softball players were the nucleus of the Regis College softball team this spring. Pitcher Tina Gentile, catcher Patty McGrath, first baseman Liz Antonellis and shortstop Patty Antonellis made up two-thirds of the Regis starting infield. The Newton athletes helped Regis to an 11-4 record and a bid in the state collegiate tournament.

Gentile, a Regis freshman and a 1982 Newton North graduate, started every game on the mound for the Beacons. The hard-throwing right-hander finished her first collegiate season with an 11-4 record and a sprakling 1.11 earned-run-average. Tina's outstanding efforts earned her the Most Valuable PLayer Award for the 1983 season.

"Tina displayed a tremendous amount of poise this year. She adjusted very well to intercollegiate competition. In fact, Tina pitched best in pressure situations against the top teams," said Regis coach Debbie Caban.

Tina's batterymate McGrath is also a freshman and an '82 Newton North grad. Tina and Patty have been teammates in basketball and softball for four years, three years at Newton North and one at Regis College. Patty, the starting catcher for the Beacons, was third on the team in RBI production and did an excellent defensive job behind the plate. An all-around athlete, Patty is a reserve forward on the Regis basketball team and received the Coach's Award.

"Patty was thrown into the fire this season and she did a superb job. Our starting catcher was injured during pre-season practice which forced me to mve Patty in from the outfield. She's a hustler and is only beginning to realize her potential," commented Coach Caban.

The Antonellis sisters complete the other half of the Newton contingent. Liz, a junior first baseman, led the Regis Beacons with a .980 fielding average. Her younger sister Patty was the leadoff batter and finished the season with an outstanding .471 mark. The right-handed shortsotp also led the team in runs scored, hits and stolen bases. Liz is the elder statesman of the group, graduating from Newton North in 1979. Patty is a sophomore and a 1981 Newton North graduate.

"Liz is a model of consistency. She rarely makes mistakes and is a steady influence on our relatively young team. Patty is an exceptional athlete who has good speed and strength. What is amazing is how well Liz and Patty get along. They compete with each other but it is a friendly competition that helps each one improve," commented the Regis coach.

Regis earned a bid to the M.A.I.W. (Massachusetts Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) softball tournament this rping. The Beacons met Emmanuel College in the semi-final round and lost 5-4 in extra innings.

The future appears bright for Regis and the Newton players. Only one Rgeis starter will be lost to graduation and Liz Antonellis is the lone starting junior.

Coach Caban says, "I'm looking forward to the next few seasons. We have some talented players who also know the value of quality practice. The Newton players are a credit to their high school coach Carolyn Harrington and the entire athletic/recreation program in Newton. In fact, Tina and Patty are playing for a summer league team in Ne wton which can only add to their softball experience."

DiMartino top Wesleyan hitter

DELAWARE,OHIO — Former Newton North High athlete Eric DiMartino, a junior at Wesleyan University, was one of the leading hitters for this spring's Battling Bishop baseball team.

DiMartino led the Bishops in runs-batted-in with 19 and was second in batting average at .297. He was third in hits (30) and second in doubles (5), home runs (2) and total bases (41).

The Medford native narrowly missed his third straight .300 season. The second baseman hit .391 (18-46) during the second half of the season.

The 5-10, 190-pounder also played a steady second base, fielding .973 and setting the all-time single-season assist record at 70.

An accounting and sports administration double major, he was also an honorable mention All-America linebacker on the gridiron last fall. He will return to lead both the football and baseball teams in 1983-84. He'll share the captaincy of the baseball team with Fody Frentsos of Hayes, Delaware.

He is the son of Ms. Janice Wintergrass of Medford.

Newton North tennis player overcomes handicap

By Steve Tiberi, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Jonas Mascartolo of Newton came into this world with a handicap, but he was also born with the spirit to overcome it.

The 18-year-old graduating senior of Newton North High School believes it's better to enjoy and appreciate life. He has used sports, particularly tennis, as a vehicle of enjoyment and escape.

Jonas was born with severe scoliosis. His spine was curved and a special operation was needed to correct the problem. At the age of 10, Jonas spent three weeks in the hospital for an operation in which a metallic rod was clipped to both ends of his spine to straighten it.

The operation was a success, but it also has limited Jonas' growth. After the three-week stay in the hospital, Jonas was forced to spend six months in a body cast. He came out of the ordeal with a positive attitude and the willingness to adjust.

"I was a little down after the operation," said Jonas, who was a co-captain for the Newton North boys' tennis team. "But my family and friends picked me up. They wouldn't allow me to feel sorry for myself. I owe a lot to them."

A love for sports has helped Jonas stay active and keep in shape. He has played hockey, little league baseball, lifted weights and in the eighth grade he picked up a tennis racquet. Things haven't been the same for him since.

"I love sports," said Jonas, who still has a scar running the length of his back to serve as a reminder of the operation. "But, tennis is without a doubt my favorite. It allows me to meet new people and make new friends. Being a part of the Newton North tennis team for three years gave me a feeling of belonging. I think one of greatest feelings in the world is being a member of a team."

A student of the game, Jonas plays tennis year round. In the winter, he plays twice a week on indoor courts. In the summer, however, he can be found smacking tennis balls on the Newton North tennis courts with just about anybody willing to smack them back.

"Tennis and sports in general give me something to do," continued Jonas. "It allows me to set up a day-to-day routine and it gives me something to look forward to and plan for.

"I'm not a super intense competitor," said Jonas. "I do love to play singles matches because it's one-on-one."

For the Tigers this past season, Jonas played doubles with fellow senior Jim Berrigan. The duo was unbeaten in nine matches this season. Jonas' favorite match was tight win over a North Quincy team.

"We were leading 5-0 and I thought we had the match won," said Jonas, "but they came back to tie us. We really started to communicate at that point. We won the match, 7-5, and I'll never let up when I'm up 5-0 again.

"Sometimes opposing players may look at me and underestimate me," said Jonas. "I can sense this at times. I usually like to get it on my backhand in that situation because my backhand is my strongest shot. I try to drill down the line to give them something to think about."

John and Delphia Moscartolo, Jonas' parents, have allowed Jonas to choose his own path. John is an artist and Art Specialist at the Lawrence Elementary School. Delphia is the Senior Vice President and Director of Nursing at the Waltham Hospital.

"Jonas has always been active, well coordinated and positive," said Delphia. "He has a tremendous amount of energy and we have tried to foster and independence in him. He's learned to appreciate life's gift. As a nurse I'm always talking about good health and Jonas takes good care of himself."

Through weight-lifting, Jonas has built up a considerable amount of strenghth. He has benched 186 pounds and regularly does curls of 70 pounds. He must be careful when lifting because of his back.

"There are just certain exercises I have to be careful on," said Jonas. "I've done a lot of lifting and I feel I know what I'm doing. I like to help other people, who may just be starting. You have to start out with lighter weights. If you try to lift to much too soon you could pull a muscle."

At the present time, Jonas is in the midst of a change all graduating high school seniors must go through. He plans on attending Tulane University in the fall where he'll major in liberal arts with a goal for pre-law.

And this coming Wednesday, Jonas will travel to Hyannis on Cape Cod to start a summer job at Burger King.

"I'm very excited about going away to school," said Jonas. "I went to New Orleans in April and I loved it. The weather is a lot warmer and I love to eat oysters. I'm going to miss my friends, but I'm also looking forward to making new friends at college. I'm definitely hoping to get a chance to watch a football game in the Superdome."

"Jonas is in the top three percent of his class," said Delphia Moscartolo. "He's very bright and insightfull. He's good in math, science and english. We're very proud of him."

Jonas' brother Jason, 16, is a sophomore Newton North High. Jason is a gifted guitarist and he is in his own band. "Jason is really interested in sports," said Jonas, "but he has an incredible musical gift."

Jonas also has an incredible gift.

Yaffe selected Jewish All-America

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Brown sophomore forward Donna Yaffe of Newton has been named First Team All-American on the 1982-83 Jewish Women's All-American basketball squad, it was announced today. The team is selected by the Jewish Post and OPinion in New York City.

Yaffe's selection was anothjer in a long list of accolades she has received since her career began at Brown in 1981. This year she was named third team All-American by Women's Varsity Sports Magazine, was named Ivy League Player of the Year, was an Acdemic All-American, and was First Team All-Ivy.

Yaffe is already regarded as the finest player in Brown women's basketball history. She is only the second Brown player to score 1,000 career points and now has 1,029 in two season, just seven away from the school record of 1,036 thatvtook four years to establish.

This past year she ranked among the top 10 in the nation in free throw percentage (.816) and was among the top 30 in scoring with a 21.3 average. She led the team in rebounding (8.8), in scoring 16 times and in rebounding 15 times.

In twwo seasons she has averaged 21.4 points and 8.6 rebounds a game, chipped in with 87 assists and has established 11 Brown game, season and career records.

Last year Yaffe was a first team All-Ivy selection and was also named the league's Rookie of the Year.

A graduate of Newton North High School, she is a daughter of Monte and Judith Yaffe of 65 Mary Ellen Rd., Newton, and is a psychology major at Brown.

Hot Embassy hurler halts Post 440

WALTHAM — Newton Post 440 ran into a hot pitcher in an 8-3 loss to Embassy Sunday at Jake Dennis Field in a Stan Musial League contest.

Righthander Rich Healy of Weston went the route to earn the victory. The Embassy offense gave Healy some early runs to work with. Cliff Richardson singled in a run in the first inning.

In the second inning, Embassy loaded the bases. Len Gauvin walked to force in a run and Bob Cappadona cracked a two-run single. John Giusti drove in the fourth run with a sacrifice fly.

Embassy added three more in the fourth inning. Cappadona drove in a pair with a double. Giusti singled in another run.

George Bassiacos was the hitting power behind Post 440's 13-9 win Friday night at Albermarle Field over Framingham.

Post 440 stormed to a 10-0 lead in the first inning. Bassiacos gave Framingham a preview of things to come when he drilled a double on his first time at bat. The two-bagger drove Russell Nicoletti in to score.

Ralph Berry, Robbie Abromson and Greg Kassabian all slapped out singles to load the bases. John Corsi followed with another hit ot drive in a run.

With the bases loaded Bassiacos stepped up to the plate and walloped a grand-slam homer over the centerfielder's head. That was the last scoring for the inning, but Framingham was already beaten. The summaries:

EMBASSY(8)-Gauvin 1-0; Cappadona 4-2; Richardson 3-1; Giusti 3-1; LeLeivre 3-0; Provencher 2-0; S. Scafidi 3-1; Aylward 3-1; M. Scafidi 2-1. Tot. 24-7.

POST 440(3)-Kasabain 3-1; Caliguri 4-1; Berry 3-0; Corsi 4-1; Segal 2-0; Biladeau 1-0; Yursi 1-0; Novicki 3-0; Minnellli 2-0; Abramson 1-1; Welsh 2-0. Tot. 26-4.

Alleged cocaine dealers in jail

NEWTON — Two local men who are alleged drug dealers are in jail today after a judge set their bail last Friday at $250,000 single surety or $25,000 cash.

Michael Caira, 23, of 7 West St. and Jerry Caira, 25, of 62 Dalby St. both were arraigned in District Court Friday on charges of trafficking in cocaine and of possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

A detective Friday testified the apparent cocaine was "conservatively" worth $25,000. The arrests and seizure were the result of six months of work by Newton detectives. Additional charges may be brought later, police said.

In order to bring a charge for trafficking in cocaine, police must seize 28 grams or more of the powdery substance.The suspected cocaine and marijuana have been sent to the state police laboratory for analysis. The suspected marijuana had an estimated value of $500.

Police entered a Dalby Street residence and a cafe at 7 West St. simoultaniously last Thursday shortly after 9 p.m. and seized the drugs, other drug paraphernalia and arrested the Cairas, police said.

After hearing the evidence Friday in District Court, Judge Mark Laughton set the high bail and continued the case to next month.

Pool watched after gas leak

NEWTON — Two residents were taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital last Saturday evening after they inhaled chlorine gas leaking from a cylinder in the basement of the Gath swimming pool, police said.

Joseph Dezotell, 17, of 435 Crafts St. and Lawrence Dore, 21, of 275 Auburndale Ave. were not admitted to the hospital, according to a spokeswoman.

Police and firefighters went to the building about 7:45 p.m. Saturday after the men developed difficulty breathing and it had been discovered the gas was leaking. An ambulance took the men to the hospital for treatment.

Firefighters vented the building and police watched the pool through the night as a safeguard.

Manager nabs shoplifter

NEWTON — When the night manager of the Purity Supreme on Washington Street realized one night last week that a man was stealing three cartons of cigarettes, he ran after the suspect.

Someone had stolen a case of cigarettes from the store about a week earlier. So the night manager was determined that this time, a thief wouldn't get away.

The chase led him toward Emerald Street as police — who were alerted by another store employee — were on their way.

About one-quarter mile from the store, the manager and police caught the suspect, Robert W. Oberson, 37, of 340 Limwood Ave.

In District Court Wednesday, Oberson admitted to sufficient facts on a charge of shoplifting. Judge Monty Basbas found him guilty of the charge and fined Oberson $100 for taking the three cartons of cigarettes.

A sufficient facts admission is an acknowledgement by a defendant of having committed an offence without a plea of guilty. That protects a defendant's right of appeal. If a defendant pleads guilty, he or she cannot appeal.

Hood Street home is burglarized

NEWTON — Someone broke into a Hood Street home through a rear kitchen window and ransacked the house, according to a report received by police Tuesday.

It was not immediately known what was missing.

Burglars hit two houses

NEWTON — A burglar cut the screen and broke the window of a Prospect Avenue home and stole valuables including a 12-piece antique silver flatware setting, according to a report received by police Wednesday.

Police said jewlery including a solid gold tie pin, a cassette recorder, a black-and-white television and more were reported stolen.

The values of the items were not immediately known.

Someone broke into a Jackson Road home and stole a color television, a video cassette recorder and other belongings, according to a report received by police Wednesday.

Roadwork may be completed by August

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON - The extensive roadwork going on at the intersection of Commonwealth Ave. and Centre St. should be completed in about a month, according to traffic engineer David Tannozzini of the Public Works Department.

That should be welcome news to Newton drivers, who may have considered buying a jeep after jouncing over the rough dirt road surface.

"We anticipate having a base pavement down in two weeks," Tannozzini said Thursday, " and the whole project will get finishing touches in about 30 days."

Funded by a state grant of $762,000, the project also involves roadwork at four other Newton intersections.

The intersection of Commonwealth Ave. and Centre St. is "the city's highest accident location, about 30 accidents a year," Tannozzini said."That large open pavement area on Comm. Ave. caused a lot of confusion," he added.

To make traffic flow more easily and safely through the intersection, "the carriage road will be brought into the two-way side before the driver reaches the intersection," explained Tannozzini. "Commonwealth's two-way side will be two lanes in each direction through the intersection. There will also be a parking lane in front of the stores.

Centre St. will have one through-lane in each direction," so drivers making left turns will tie up traffic, he said.

The grassy median strip on Commonwealth Ave. has lost a good deal of its length during the process of redesigning the intersection.But Tannozzini said part of the project involves a "trade-off" of sorts: the section of the carriage road that had been closed off for years will be filled in and landscaped with juniper bushes.

Aldermen approve tow companies' higher rates

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Tow companies starting Tuesday can charge $10 a-day again for storing cars that have been impounded under the city's "tow and hold" ordinance.

Monday's Full Board of Aldermen voted 21 to 0 to approve the higher storage rate.

When the controversial program started in April the storage rate was $10 per day, but city officials uncovered an ordinance a few weeks ago setting the daily rate at a $1.50.

The low rate took local tow service companies by surprise and they wanted the program stopped until the city straightened the matter out, according to John Donahue of Tody's Tow Service.

"Once it was realized there was an ordinance of a $1.50 a day it (storage rates) was set at that," said Alderman Joseph DePasquale.

A $1.50 a day was insufficient to cover the cost of keeping the vehicles in their lots, according to the car haulers.

"Now we are trying to update the ordinance. It was an oversight that should have been picked-up in the beginning," said DePasquale.

Confusion over the storage fees were only a part of the criticism leveled at the city's strict policy.

Initial implementation of the program drew aldermanic criticism after car owners were not notified they would be towed, unless they paid their outstanding tickets.

The strict policy was suspended in early June after numerous citizen complaints stemming from a lack of prior notice that their car would be towed.

Newton now gives advance notice when a car is to be towed so an owner knows what happened to their vehicle, according to DePasquale.

Cars having five or more tickets can be towed and their owners must pay all charges before the car can be claimed, according to DePasquale.

Charges are $25 for towing, $5 storage if a parking ticket scofflaw pays their tickets in less than 24-hours after the car has been towed and $10 a day if the car is not claimed soon enough, said DePasquale.

"This is what we wanted," said Donahue of Tody's Tow Service.

Donahue, Nuzzi Brothers Towing, and Testa's Newtonville Texaco also want the city to outline a program for disposing of cars that are unclaimed by their owners.

"We want the city to clarify what we should do with cars that are left," said Donahue. Boston sells unclaimed cars after 30 days, he added.

Some car owners parking tickets add up to more than the value of the car and they cannot justify paying for the fines, according to Donahue.

Pine Manor College receives $50,000 for computer equipment

CHESTNUT HILL — Pine Manor College was awarded a $50,000 grant from the Surdna Foundation, Inc. of New York, to purchase computer and video equipment for the college's library and the soon-to-be constructed Communications Center.

The center and an expanded library are part of a $2.8 million project launched in October, 1982. The project began after the announcement of the $1 million anonymous Challenge grant that required the college to raise $1.8 million by Dec. 31, 1983.

The library and communications center will include an expanded stack area to accommodate 100,000 volumes; a 24-hour study room; a fully equipped computer laboratory and a video production studio with editing room facilities.

The Surdna Foundation, Inc., founded in 1917, awards grants to institutions operating in the areas of higher education, medical education, social concerns and cultural programs.

Franklin School's Italian Cultural Program

Roman culture revived

By Karen DePasquale
Special Correspondent

WEST NEWTON — There was lots of pasta with tomatoe sauce as well as plenty of bread and salad for teachers, family and friends who gathered Monday night to hear Italian music and art presentations at the Franklin School.

Roman history was recreated by students at Franklin School who prepared the finale celebration of the Italian Cultural Program.

As about 250 people dined on homemade Italian dishes, they were surrounded by pictures of Roman gods and notable Roman architecture including the Pantheon, Colliseum and the Leaning Tower of Pisa. Models of Venice and Pompeii represented a world far removed from these youngsters.

The ethnic celebration was initiated by teachers Tom Etre and Jack McMackin, two 13-year veterans of Franklin School who have been involved with the cultural program throughout the academic year.

"We thought it would be an appealing thing for the kids to work together. It's been a community situation, a great experience," Etre said. "The parents would come in at a certain time, we'd come in at a certain time. We couldn't have done it alone. We had to have the parental help."

Etre said he expected strong positive response from the community regarding the event because of the successful Italian Enrichment Program.

"We do have the Italian Enrichment Program. We knew the interest was there," Etre said. "We looked at an historical viewpoint."

The Italian Enrichment Program involves 31 students from grades one through six and is taught by one teacher on a volunteer basis. The program is offerred by the bi-lingual department to children of Italian descent who want to learn more about their heritage and language, one teacher said. Three groups meet once a week from 8:15 to 9 a.m., before classes begin, so the program does not interfere with class time.

"The children are very interested, attendance is fantastic and parents cooperate," a teacher said. "I see it as a liaison between school and home for these children."

Parents were full of praise for teachers Etre and McMacklin. They said they are dedicated teachers, whose enthusiam was reflected by the students during their presentations.

The students were energetic in describing their research and artistic methods in creating the various Romanesque structures.

Jeannette Rabbitt, 8, a third grader, discussed her involvement in constructing the model of the Pantheon.

"We took 10 columns which were made from paper towel holders and we used a shoebox and made it into a triangle for the roof," Rabbitt said. "We used a nerf ball for the dome of it and put paper mache over it."

Todd Sampson, age 9, also a third grader, explained his presentation of the Roman gods.

"First we took a book that had pictures and blew them up on a machine. Then we traced them and colored them. After that we outlined them in black paint," he said.

McMackin, commenting on his tenure as a sixth grade teacher, said, "The reason I've stayed teaching sixth grade is because it's different each year. This, the curriculum - that's the major motivation. Also, a chance to work with the kids."

Players searching for playwrights

NEWTON — Are you a budding playwright in search of a producer?

The Newton Country Players theater group has announced a playwrighting competition to be held this summer. The winning entry will be performed next spring.

The NCP will accept any unpublished original one act play by a Massachusetts resident. The play should be received before Aug. 31. All entries will be read by NCP judges with final judgment to be given by an independent panel.

The winning entry will be performed next spring as the Newton Country Players' annual spring production. It will also be the NCP entry in the 1984 New England Theater Conference Community Theater Drama Festival. Depending upon the number of entries received, there may also be a second one act play chosen to be performed as well.

Entries may be one act plays of any style — drama, comedy, or musical. The play must last no longer than 45 minutes. Three copies of each entry must be sent typed and double spaced to: Newton Country Players, P.O. Box 333, Newton, MA 02161.

The copies will be returned if a self-addressed stamped envelope is enclosed. The play must be original and unpublished and no royalty will be provided.

Now you can spend more time under the palms.

With the expansion of our restaurant facilities, now you can enjoy dining in our new Palm Garden Café from morning until night.

You'll find it's an ideal spot for a fast breakfast, a welcome lunch break or an afternoon treat for downtown visitors. Choose from a la carte or buffet offerings at both breakfast and lunch. And dinner can be as quick and early or as romantic and late as you'd like.

So on your next visit to the waterfront, spend some time under the palms.

Jewish center offers pre-school day care

NEWTON — Beginning this September, a full day pre-school program will be offered at the new Jewish Community Center in Newton.

The program, under the auspices of the center's early childhood education department, will combine licensed child care with a pre-school curriculum that emphasizes both personal and Jewish development.

It will be open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., 52 weeks a year.

According to Nettie Nathan, Regional Director of Early Childhood Education for the Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston, "the new Day Care program will be just like our pre-school classes. It will use many different tools, crafts, storytelling, music and dance and field trips to help make youngsters aware of a vibrnt Jewish cultural heritage." "And ," she adds, "we try to nurture Jewish identification throughout their lives in clubs, activities, and special events at the Jewish Community Center."

Built by the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston, the Jewish Community Campus brings a "holistic" approach communal service to Boston. The campus is located at 333 Nahanton Street and features, a Judaic gallery, health and fitness complex, art and dance studios, children's wing, 500-seat autitorium, and teen lounge.

Applications are now being accepted for children two years and older. Contact Nettie Nathan at 734-0800.

Newtonville drop-in center reopens after recent blaze

NEWTONVILLE — The Newtonville Senior Drop-In Center, located in the Newtonville Library on Walnut Street, has re-opened its doors.

An arson fire several weeks ago at the library had forced the facility to close temporarily.

Though the center itself was unaffected by the fire, visitors must now use the side entrance on Highland Avenue, until the entire library reopens later this summer.

All the senior center offerings, including the daily hot lunch program, legal assistance, Bingo, daily blood pressure clinics and other, will continue as usual.

New classes and programs, including a beginning drawing class, and a gardening program, start this month.

Upcoming events include a chocolate making demonstration scheduled for June 24.

The center is located at 345 Walnut St., and is sponsored by the Department of Human Services in cooperation with the Council on Aging. For more information, call Laurie Walker at 527-6770.

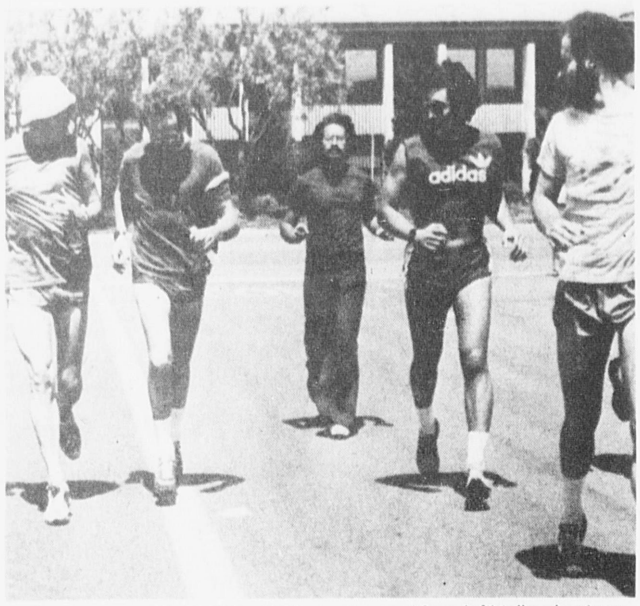
Running right: an expert's tips for injury free running

By Susan McKay

(CNS) Unfortunately for millions of runners, the road to cardiovascular fitness and good health has been paved with aches, pains, injuries and expensive doctor bills. Part of the reason runners get hurt and often give up running entirely is simple: they don't know how to run properly.

But there is definitely some hope for the ailing runner. The results of a recently completed study of runners by a team of experts from Etonic, the running shoe manufacturer, confirmed that there are a number of common flaws that can easily be corrected for safer, healthier running.



Running expert Dr. Rob Roy McGregor (second from left) talks about proper running technique while running with participants in an Etonic Safe and Healthy Running Workshop.

Over 2,000 runners were photographed and analyzed by John L.A. Wilson, former member of the British National Running Team, and Dr. Rob Roy McGregor, a sports medicine pioneer and author. Using a sophisticated graph-check sequence camera, the team took a large instant photograph of each runner's stride which consisted of eight smaller, stop-action photos. The runner's form was then compared to that of the "ideal" middle-distance runner.

"The flaws we discovered, in general, resulted in less-efficient running," said McGregor. He explained that energy efficiency is the key to proper running form and that running incorrectly wastes energy.

"We frequently saw people swinging their arms across their bodies, causing pelvic rotation and needless stress. This problem was especially prevalent among women runners who generally had had less coaching than the men we analyzed," McGregor added.

"The solution to that problem is quite simple actually," said Wilson. "Drop the arms straight down to their resting position. Cock the forearm so that it's at about a 90-degree angle. Then swing your arms in a pumping motion, brushing the tops of your running shorts with your fingertips. Keep your shoulders loose and have your arms swing forward - not from the lower part of the arm but from the shoulder - in a straight line.

"Another very common problem we discovered was forward lean with the top half of the body," McGregor said. "Forward lean changes the runner's center of gravity which causes increased work effort and fatigue.

"A majority of the people we saw needed to develop their quadriceps - thigh - muscles. Since they didn't lift their knees much, they developed very strong hamstrings in the back of their legs, but had weak quads resulting in muscle imbalance and a tendency toward knee injuries. Simply by running hills occasionally, doing leg lifts while lying flat on the floor or riding a stationary bike with a high resistance, they can help minimize the risk of injury.

"In addition to analysis, we also watched people warming up and stretching," said McGregor, "and it amazed me to see how many people made the mistake of bouncing while they stretched. Bouncing can overstress muscle fibers and cause muscle tears.

"One final note," McGregor said, "that both John and I stressed to the runners we analyzed: running should be fun even on a competitive level. If you're hurt, it's never going to be much fun. Staying healthy is part common sense and part good technique."

SUMMER LIVING

A beautiful way to add extra space

By Denise Dale

(CNS) Need more living space, but lack the money for a room addition? You can add extra living space to your home easily, inexpensively and beautifully - by adding a deck.

A flat wooden deck is one of the easiest do-it-yourself projects and requires very little experience and just a few basic tools for construction.

For most decks, a crosscut saw and hammer will do the trick, although you may want to drill the nail holes near the ends of your boards to prevent splitting. .

There are a number of do-it-yourself deck-building guides available, or you can make your own design to suit your lifestyle and your home.

Depending on the weather in your location, you can choose redwood lumber or pressure-treated wood for your deck. Either choice will provide a low-maintenance deck that you'll enjoy for generations.

Be sure to avoid any potential moisture problems by allowing for air circulation under your deck. Provide a little airspace between deck boards, also, and treat all cut ends with some type of preservative.

Hot-dipped, galvanized nails and non-ferrous metal fastenings will avoid rust streaks that could mar the beauty of your wood deck. But don't worry about protecting your wood from ground contact. One of the major advantages of pressure-treated wood is that it is highly resistant to decay and termites, just as redwood is.

The pressure treatment is applied to a variety of softwoods, like pine and hemlock. Preservatives are forced deep into the wood fibers, so the lumber can be used safely in direct contact with the ground. Other than that, there is no change in the characteristics or beauty of the wood.

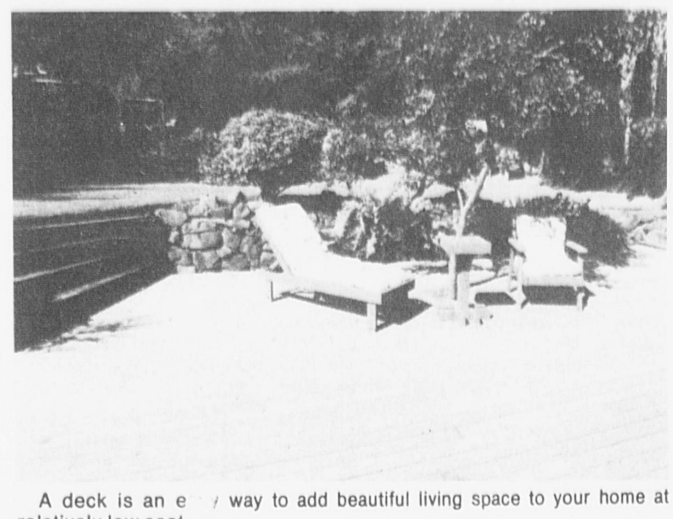
You can stain or paint pressure-treated wood, but you don't have to. Depending on the preservative used, pressure-treated wood ranges from natural wood tones to various shades of brown and green.

Let your imagination be your guide in designing and building your deck. Add trees, shrubs, screens or other attractive view-blockers to accent your addition and provide privacy for dig or relaxing. In colder climates, ou may want to add walls of some sort so you can enjoy the out-of-doors living space for a longer period of time.

A deck is a satisfying project and perfect for the beginning do-it-yourself home owner. A deck-building party is a delightful excuse for a gathering of family and friends. You can do all the work yourselves, but if you have problems you can check your local advertisements for a carpenter. Many can be hired for an hour or a day and can lend expertise where needed.

Ortho Books offers a splendid how-to for "Designing and Building Decks and Patios." With chapters on design baaics, selecting lumber and materials, information on building permits, balancing load factors and a variety of special features such as gates and benches, the illustrated book is perfect for the beginning or experienced builder.

Available at many hardware and retail stores, the book sells for under $5. It is also available through Ortho Books, Chevron Chemical Co., Consumer Products Division, 575 Market St., San Francisco, Calif. 94105.



A deck is an e / way to add beautiful living space to your home at relatively low cost.

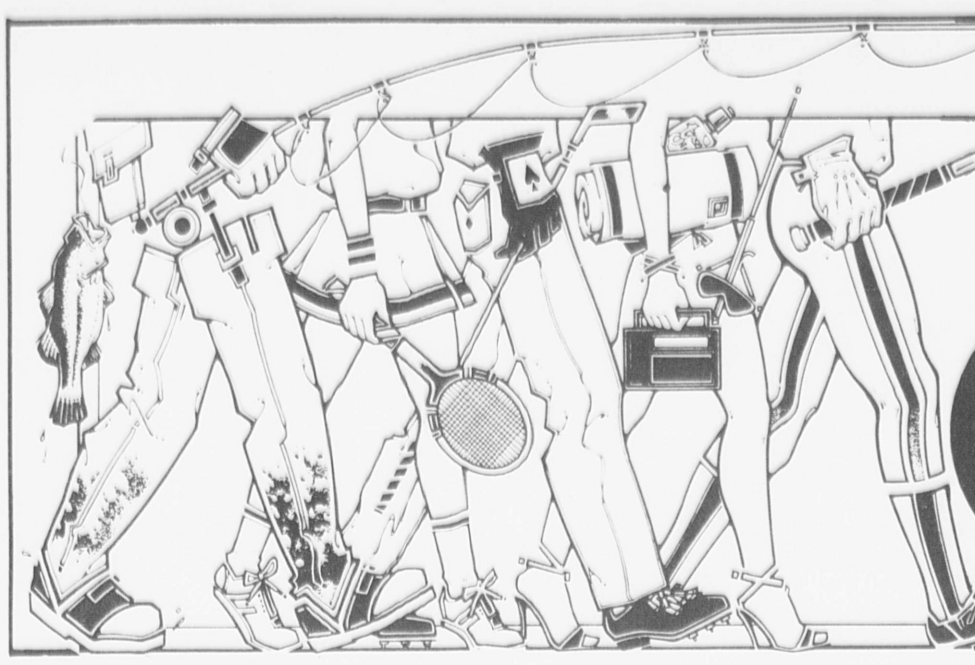
SIMONI'S FLOWERS ...the garden center leader.



SUMMER LIVING

A tour of exotic bulbs

By Clay Bryant

(CNS) If your itch to travel this summer can't be scratched due to lack of ready cash, relax. Why not travel through your garden? Summer is the season for exotic, breathtaking bulb flowers from the farthest reaches of the globe.

Savor the luxuriant dahlias native to Mexico, the gorgeous blooms of tuberous begonias found originally in the high Andes, gladiolus from East Africa and many other showy, long-lasting blooms with equally far-flung lineage.

Their modern, hybridized counterparts developed by Holland's famous bulb industry will thrive in temperate climates without losing their tropical brilliance or longevity. Some varieties need advance planting in pots and flats, and many must be lifted for winter storage. But all bear flowers that are sure to transport you into exotic landscapes.

Here's a brief guide to choosing and planting a few of this summer's bulb itinerary, with the focus on the season's more exotic types:

MONTBRETIA is a smaller relative of the gladiolus, and like its cousin is fine for cutting. Each bulb produces one to three stalks, 12 to 20 inches tall, bearing flowers in yellows, reds, oranges and combinations of these colors. It is one of the few summer bulbs that can remain in the soil all winter. It multiplies so quickly from one year to the next that its offshoots must be divided every few years.

Montbretias thrive in sun and well-drained soil. Plant the bulbs 3 to 5 inches deep and apart, watering occasionally in dry weather.

SPARAXIS is an ideal bulb for summer rock gardens and borders. The 2-inch-wide flowers bloom in red, yellow, blue, purple, mauve and white, with a bright yellow throat and a black accent at the flower's base.

Plant sparaxis in the fall, spacing bulbs 2 to 3 inches deep and apart. The bulbs may be left undisturbed for years.

When DAHLIAS were first brought from Mexico to Spain, the bulbs were the exclusive property of the king in Madrid. But dahlias are available to everyone now - and there's a variety of colors and sizes to suit anyone's particular fancy. What they all share is a need for sun and warmth and a long blooming season that lasts from midsummer until frost. Plant them about 5 to 6 inches deep and 24 inches apart in well-fertilized soil. Cover with 2 inches of soil. For taller varieties drive stakes in place now, so that when the stems reach about 2 feet, the supports will be ready.

GLADIOLUS is summer's most popular bulb. Its chief attraction is color — glorious shades and combinations for a border, bed or cutting garden.

Plant them in succession, 12 or more every two weeks until mid-June, so that they will flower all summer. The bulbs go 4 to 6 inches deep and 24 inches apart in any soil. Fertilize at planting and again when stalks reach about 6 inches.

Now that you've glimpsed the possibilities for "summer travel," make your own choices. Whatever you decide, you can be sure that beautiful sights await you.

"Light" is the word for more comfortable summer living

"Light" is the keynote for summer. Lighter clothing, lighter eating and a lighter look around the house will make the summer more comfortable and enjoyable, and lighten your own work load. After all, who wants to spend every weekend cleaning when you could be out having fun.

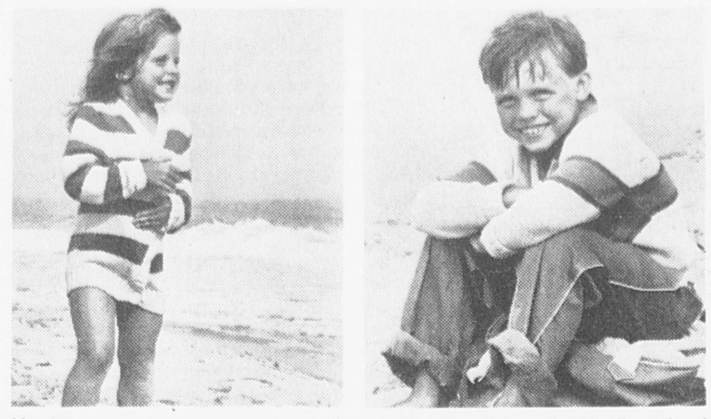
Judy Weinstein, who heads the consumer relations group for Stanley Home Products in Westfield, Mass., gives some tips for maintaining a clean, smooth-running house and giving yourself some free time. All it takes is a little preventive maintenance and creativity.

Take down curtains or drapes and use shades or blinds to give rooms a lighter, cooler look. If a curtain is necessary for privacy, gather a bright sheet on a rod.

Use multi-purpose cleaners to do several jobs at once. Look for all-in-one products that clean, shine and protect. Such products help in the 8athroom, kitchen and laundry room on the sink, tub, shower, refrigerator and dishwasher. Concentrated cleaners are also great on outdoor grills.

Clean and condition wooden furniture with a mineral oil-based furniture cream that applies a satiny protective coating without leaving a waxy buildup.

Seaside stripes



You're never too young to enjoy the seashore or these classically striped sweaters. Left, a skinny mini-cardigan is bold and beautiful. Cotton rugby sweater, right, is just the thing with piped cotton twill pants.

"There's no business like our business."

Lenny and Nancy Assner
Norwood Franchisees

"...because we can make money and have fun doing it. Ever since we got a White Hen Franchise five years ago, we've been making more money and getting a kick out of doing it as a family. Even the kids pitch in! You ought to see if you can qualify and start making money for yourself for a change."

In times like these, with the threat of layoffs and employee dissatisfaction, more and more families are discovering the joy and the wisdom of working for themselves. White Hen Pantry is a growing convenience food store chain and we're looking for responsible people who can run their own business with the advantage of our corporate expertise.

A White Hen Franchise offers you a guaranteed annual income, a complete training program, a complete store equipment and operating package with store counseling, business insurance and advertising. To find out if you qualify, call (617) 395-6701, Monday-Friday between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

YOUR OFFICIAL MASS. INSPECTION MAINTENANCE STATIONS

Now that your car is inspected just once a year, the last number on your plate determines when.

If it's 6, you're inspected in June.

Zeros come in October, though, and plates with all letters in November.

We'll do the traditional safety checks as well as the new computerized tailpipe emissions test. Quickly and efficiently.

George E. Sawaya, a tribute

The sunset closes the day but does not mark the end of the sun — it is rather its normal way to the sunrise. So is death for the believers: it is their normal way to the eternal sunrise of life! "Whoever believes in him who sent me has eternal life. He has already passed from death to life." (John 5:24)

George Sawaya was a true believer. He "went to the Father" (John 13:1) June 13, 1983 at 4 a.m. in Boston at the age of 77, comforted with God's grace and the help of the Church's Sacraments.

Born in Worcester in 1906, he was the only son of Elias and Mary Sawaya who also had an only daughter, the late Sadie Khoury.

He studied at the Bishop's School in his family's native town, Kafarhouna, Lebanon. He assisted the pastor first as an altar boy and lter as cantor in all the various liturgical services. This was the spontaneous expression of the deep spiritual education he received at home, which was made stronger and more appealing, thanks to the good example of both his parents and his pastor.

At the age of 20, George returned to the United States to work in Detroit for three years and finally settled in Boston for the rest of his life.

George Sawaya served his country with love and dedication. He was a member of the Auxiliary Police and of the Civil Defense during World War II. He was proud of being an American while holding his native country, the Republic of Lebanon, in high esteem and deep love. He became an active member and past chairman of the World Cultural Lebanese Union in the Greater Boston Chapter.

He had two sons, Russel and Louis, and two grandchildren, Roseann and Anthony. His wife Yvonne took care of him to the very end and he used to call her "the angel of my life."

As he was faithful to his country and his family, George was also a model of love and dedication to his Melkite Catholic Church. For approximately 60 years, he served as a cantor in the liturgical prayers at Our Lady of the Annunciation, Roslindale. This church became his lifetime parish church.

Throughout the years, George served in different organizations and committees of the parish: as chairman of the Parish Council and of the Senior Citizens Committee; as president of the Men's Society and of the Melkite Organization; as co-chairman of the Hall Rental Committee and of the Bingo Committee; as a committee member for the Boy Scouts, and as a member of the Building Committee.

Thanks to his love for his Melkite Catholic Church and the Roman Catholic Church and serving both with full dedication, George enjoyed the appreciation, the friendship and the love of the late Patriarch and Cardinal, Maximos IV Saigh, the late Cardinal Cushing, the late Archbishops John Bassoul and Justin Najmy, as well as His Beatitude the Patriarch Maximos V. Hakim, Cardinal Umberto Medeiros, and Archbishop Joseph Tawil. He enjoyed also the appreciation of the Vatican which, through Pope Paul VI, bestowed upon him its high recognition, "Pro Ecclesia Et Pontifice," on Dec. 16, 1975.

George Sawaya also loved the Maronite Church whose late Patriarch, Cardinal Paul Meouchy, was his personal friend. He was filled with love for all of the different Christian rites and churches. Through the eyes of his Faith and the Faith of his spiritual vision, he saw and loved God's One and Holy Church beyond and above all its divisions.

The best part of George's love, support, appreciation and dedication went to the Basilian Salvatorian Order. Out of his admiration, he used to call the Salvatorians, "the Melkite Jesuits," and their Mother-House, "the Vatican of the Melkite Church." He did all he could to help and support morally and financially St. Basil's Seminary of the Salvatorian Fathers in Methuen, Our Lady of the Annunciation Seminary at their Mother-House in Lebanon, and their Providence Home in Lebanon also. He, himself, wanted to join the Basilian Salvatorian Order, but the then Canon Law and the Salvatorian Constitution did not help his dream come true since he was the only son of his parents. Instead, he lived up to his conviction and spent all his life as a lay Salvatorian.

George Sawaya lived as a good citizen and as a faithful Christen. He deserves to hear the voice of the Lord calling him: "Well done, good and faithful servant!...Come on in and share my happiness! (Matt 25:21).

May his memory be eternal.

Tim Sweeney starts junior T-ball

The 1983 Parkway Little League season witnessed the inauguration of the Tim Sweeney Tee Ball League for six and 7-year-olds. Over 130 boys and girls were assigned to the seven Tee Ball teams whose names waere designed to relate to these first time baseballers.

The first half of the season has seen the Gerbils leap out in front with an undefeated record, the result of fine defense and timely offense.

The following are selected games which reflect a victory for each of the seven teams during the first half of the season.

GUPPIES 11, MOSQUITOS 9: On May 7 the Guppies showed their potential on both offense and defense as they defeated the Mosquitos 11-9. They had a long list of hitters, including Chris Goodman, Brad Noonon, Craig O'Donnell, and Eric Fandel (2 hits each), Seth Evan Connors, George Connelly, Phillip Shieks, James Mazzola, Paul Corwin, Michael McCarthy, Marty McCarthy, Jeff Augusta, Jason Kordis, Eric Lowe, Rebecca Walter Gustefson, and John Boyce (1 hit each).

The Mosquitos, however, managed to keep it close, as Mathew Koenig rapped four hits in four at bats in the losing cause. Also helping out were Gayle Kaizer, Doug Climo, Chris Derven (2 hits each), John Barnes, Brian Daly, Kelly Climo, Mike Ryan, Bobbie McGregor, Peter Sylvester, and Robbie Bogie (1 hit each). Both teams played excellent defensive games, with no errors being committed on either team.

PENGUINS 32, GUPPIES 12: The following week, May 14, the Penguins exhibited their power as they simply outhit the Guppies and defeated them, 32-12. Javier Velasquez led the Penguins on offense, with a double and two singles, but he was helped by others, such as Jennifer Lucey, Gary McDonald, Steve Bernard, Candice Shea, Kim McGee, Richie Doherty, Richie Braccia (3 or more hits), Tim Laham, Joseph Dalton, Travis Halliday, Jeff LeBlanc, Marie-Christine Celeste, and David Provost.

On the losing team, the Guppies also had many contributors to the cause: Mike McCarthy, Brad Noonan, Marty McCarthy, Craig O'Donnell, Jeff Augusta, James Mazzola, Philip Shields, Eric Lowe, Eric Fandel, Seth Connors, Jason Kordis, John Boyce, George Connolly, and Chris Goodman.

BEETLES 12, PENGUINS 5: The Beetles played a defensive game on May 21, which helped them defeat the Penguins, 12-5. For the Beetles, the offense was powered by Mike Beatty, Aaron MacKinnon, Daniel MacKinnon, Justin Connolly, Rebecca Soler, Pete McFarland, Jared May, Ben Miller, and Brian Corcoran.

For the Penguins, even though the runs scored were few, many hits were provided by the bats of Steve Bernard, Marie-Christine Celeste, Robert Celeste, Joseph Dalton, Richie Doherty, Travis Halliday, John Hauck, Tim Laham, Jennifer Lucey, John Manley, Jim McGee, David Provost, Tommy Taylor, Javier Velasquez, and Gery McDonald.

SPARROWS 19, MOSQUITOS 16: On the 23rd of May, in a very tight ball game, the Sparrows mounted a fantastic comeback in the sixth inning, scoring 12 runs to win 19-16. Despite a triple play by the Mosquitos' pitcher, Robbie Bogie, the Sparrows won on the batting of Mike Cooney, Chris Dyson, Joe Fidler, David Greenwood, Maynor Herrera, Mike Leonard, Rob Lowre, Ched Lynch, Jeremiah O'Connor, Tim Robishaw, Matt Smith, Keith Kelly, Thomas an Timothy Sullivan, Joshua Keidan, Chris Kelly, Kevin Keohane and Elaine Driscoll. The Mosquitos scored ten runs in the first inning and five in the second, helped by John Barnes, Robbie Bogie, Douglas and Kelly Climo, Chris Dervan, Robert Doherty, Gayle Kaizer, William Kaveleski, Robbie MacGregor, Matt Koenig, Lisa-Marie Pepin, Michael Ryan and Peter Sylvester, but the Mosquitos offense was shut down after the second and scored only once.

Retiring

Kay Salmon, a first grade teacher at the Bowen School in Newton Centre, retired last week after 31 years in the Newton school system and 36 years of teaching.

Her motto:'Do what kids do'

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — During the recent Newton Teachers Retirement dinner, Mayor Theodore Mann asked Kay Salmon how she stays so young-looking.

"It must be that I've worked with children all my life," Salmon, age 60, responded.

Reminiscing during the annual Bowen School picnic, the energetic first grade teacher advised that teachers "should do what the kids do."

"When I come out to play with them, I'll go down the slide and do the things that they do," said Salmon, who has petite figure, a perky face and short, flattering salt and pepper hair. "You have to be active with them and do what they do because they have no conception of age."

Salmon retired recently after having taught in Newton elementary schools for 31 years. Raised in Watertown where she now lives with her sister, Salmon has been a teacher for 36 years. Immediatley following World War II, she instructed children of American military personnel in Germany. A graduate of Framingham Teacher's College, she also took a short leave in the 1950s to study differences in teaching methods in all-boy classrooms.

"Strict but fair," "Loving when it needs" and "wonderful" are how Bowen parents described Salmon. They bought her a set of luggage as a retirement gift to show their appreciation. Traveling is Salmon's "top priority" along with organizing boxes of travel photographs and visiting distant friends.

"This is a beginning," Salmon said.

Bowen picnic

Kids help classmate

NEWTON CENTRE — Bowen School sixth graders added a special touch to the school's recent annual picnic and sold baked goods and stickers to raise money for an ill classmate.

The pupils raised the money to give their friend, Kathleen Haley, 11, a special gift. Kathleen has multiple sclerosis and this year had to be tutored at home.

"She's a good student," Kathleen's dad, Pierce Haley, said. "She's always ahead in her classes."

Surrounded by friends, Kathleen smiled warmly and listened patiently as the youngsters, obvioulsy excited that Kathleen was there, chatted away.

"She has a calm nature," Mr. Haley said. "She's always been that way. We have learned through her strength and fortitude."

"This is a very warm and close community," said a parent, Mrs. Paula Emmanuel.

Some 200 pupils and their families packed picnic baskets with food and blankets and gathered on the school's spacious grounds to celebrate the onset of summer.

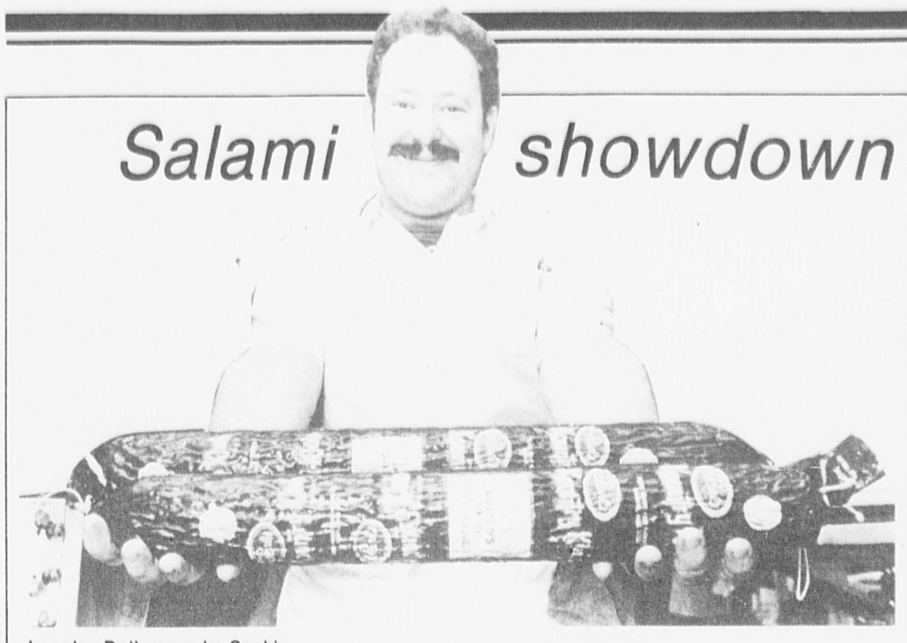
Salami showdown



Langley Deli owner Ira Seskin.

Deli fights salami rule

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The 4,000-year-old art of making salami has ground to a halt in the Garden City.

For several days now, Health Department officials have been telling grocers and deli owners they can not let their salamis hang out to dry anymore, in the manner in which the crusty comestibles have been treated since the days of ancient Babylonia.

"That's a 'no-no,'" was Health Commissioner Bernice Joyal's verdict of hanging salamis out to dry in the open air. She pointed out that the processed meats bear a message that they must be kept refrigerated. The state sanitary code requires that the message be heeded, she said.

"In some instances, a company could make a salami with enough preservatives in it that it could be hung out," Joyal said, but she added that only one chain of stores has gotten federal approval for keeping salamis unrefrigerated.

Asked if salamis have not been hanging around the city for years, Joyal responded, "If they have, I don't know about it."

Ira Seskin, owner of the Langley Food Shop in Newton Centre, says he finds it hard to believe there is a law against hanging a salami. "Here at the Langley, they've been hanging salami's for more than 30 years," he said. "Every self-respecting deli in the country has salami's hanging in it."

Standing next to the empty hooks that used to display the hard salamis in his shop, Seskin stressed that the whole process of making a salami is aimed at preserving the meat. He said that centuries-old tradition of hanging the cured, smoked meat out to dry is an essential part of that process.

"It's cooked and smoked, and it has enough salts in it" to retard any spoilage, according to Seskin.

Indeed, nominal research into the history of salami-making reveals that the name "salami" is derived from the Latin word for preserving food by treating it with a salty brine solution. Dry salami originated in hotter climates, where other methods of preserving meats proved unsuccessful.

The ancient Greeks and Romans revelled in their salamis. Plotinus, the Roman philospher, has written detailed accounts of the delights of salami, without one mention of the refrigeration which is now so important to health officials.

NEWTON CORNER — Library supporters have started a campaign to build a new central library and are hammering away at a sensitive issue — the poor condition of the 108-year-old main branch in Newton Corner.

Some local experts say the century-old main branch library is a time bomb, violating the state building code and threatening the public's safety, but government officials disagree.

"The building does not even have one stairway which fulfills minimum code requirements for safe egress (exit) in case of fire," stated local architect and engineer William E. Nast before a Friends of the Library meeting meeting in the library last week.

Meanwhile, library trustees are seeking aldermanic support for a Proposition 2½ override to exempt a city bond from the reins of the tax cap. The bond would pay for the construction of the proposed 70,000 square foot building.

"It (receiving aldermanic support for the ballot question) will depend on an organized campaign" of canvassing the supermarket and calling your friends, advised Friends of the Library president Nancy Criscitiello before the group of residents gathered in the library last week.

A two-thirds vote by the city's aldermen is required before the ballot question, exempting the cost of construction from the tax cap, can be put to the voters in November.

Library trustee Michael Lipof estimates the central library's bond will add 35 to 40 cents to the tax rate.

For the last 40 years Library Trustees have failed to receive city approval for a new central library, according to the trustees.

In 1980 a study, known as the King report recommended closing all but four of the city's nearly dozen branches in favor of a new building.

Library trustees say they will close only one or two branches and wait to see if patron traffic in the branches drops-off once the new building is up.

Library Trustee Lyman Ziegler said last year of 22 cities and towns that had a Proposition 2½ override question on the ballot to exempt a bond issue from the tax cap's constraints, 12 decided to approve such a measure.

"It's a bit of encouragement," said Ziegler, adding most people want to keep taxes to a minimum.

Comments from the audience were not favorable when it was revealed both the alderman and the mayor will have to approve the override measure before the people can pass judgement.

"I don't think we could get these political hacks to agree on a 'No Smoking' sign," said resident Carl Winograd.

Ziegler felt the aldermen would give their approval because, "they could pass the buck to the voters."

Each month 35,000 patrons use the 30,000 square foot main branch to gain access to its more than 190,000 books, according to Library Director Virginia Tashjian.

Are the patrons in danger because of the condition of the old main branch ? Library trustees say they are, but city officials disagree.

City trash pickup changes to private service July 1

NEWTON — With Friday, July 1, the first day of the changeover from a city-run residential trash collection service to that provided by a private contractor, Public Works Commissioner John Sulik is reassuring residents the quality of the service will not change.

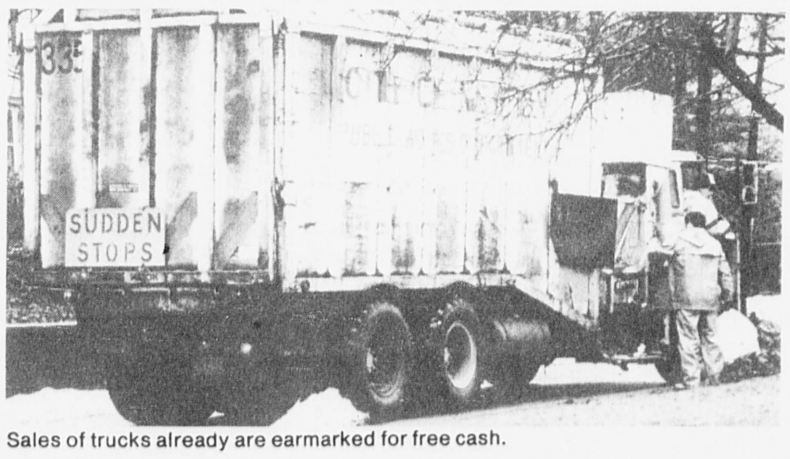
The city's own sanitation service has consistently received an "A" rating in the annual city census. Sulik says that rating will still be warranted by SCA Services, Inc., in the course of a four-year contract that "will save several millions of taxpayer dollars over the next few years."

"There will be no change in your regular collection day - at least for the time being," Sulik stated in a recent letter to residents. "However, the time of pick-up may vary from that to which you are accustomed."

He added that "it is essential" that residents comply with a city ordinance which requires that refuse be placed at the curb not earlier than 4 p.m. the day before nor later than 7 a.m. the day of collection.

"There will be no call-backs. Refuse placed at the curb after the truck has passed will not be collected," Sulik stated.

A special truck, which now picks up heavy items, will be discontinued, according to the commissioner. "Heavy items will be collected by the same truck that collects your refuse and should be placed at the curb with your refuse," he stated.



Sales of trucks already are earmarked for free cash.

Newspaper recycling will continue as usual, according to Sulik, with city crews picking up properly packaged bundles on regular trash days. "We have no market for cans," he stated, adding that they should be added to the regular refuse for pickup.

Glass recycling will also continue as usual, according to the commissioner, with clear and colored glass being picked up every two weeks. "It is important that you glass be properly segregated," Sulik cautioned. "An entire load may be rejected by our vendor if clear and colored glass are mixed."

Futher details of the changeover to private trash collection can be obtained by calling the Public Works Department at 552-7200.

The Cousens trust fund gives low-interest loans

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A $1 million city trust fund established by a turn-of-the-century local industrialist has granted a low-interest mortgage to one resident and plans are being laid to lend more, according to Alderman Sondra Shick.

Mortgage money for "industrious men and women of small means... to assist them in procuring a homestead," states the trust, is available for the first time since 1968 from the Horace Cousens Industrial Fund, said city officials on Wednesday during a trust fund committee meeting.

Money in the Horace Cousens trust fund, established in the 1900s, has been idle because the trust required loans be made for a maximum of 75 percent of a home's assessment. Before revaluation in the city many homes had a low assessment, but had a high market value making a loan impractical. The loan would not have covered the actual purchase price, according to members of a municiple trust fund committee

Heat wave draws attention to water supplies

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

Last weekend's sudden rainfall did little to chase away the reality that daily our water supply is being drawn far beyond its capacity, according to the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC).

Each day the MDC, which provides water in the Newton area, exceeds its safe limits by 43 million gallons, according to Patricia Corcoran, the MDC water conservation project manager.

Lack of measureable rainfall for a recent period of more than 20 days means the system is further burdened, according to the MDC.

But, local MDC water usage appears to be down compared to previous years and city officials are thinking of ways to conserve this precious resource.

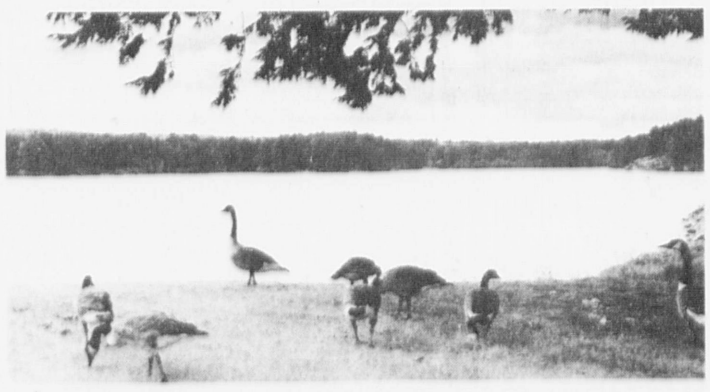
Newton residents consumed more than 4 billion gallons of MDC water in 1982, but less water is being used, according to Department of Public Works Commmissioner John Sulik. The cost of the water is $240 per million gallons, he adds.

By making water line repairs, installing computerized water meters and charging more for water, Newton expects to save even more, according to Sulik. Newton residents pay 55 cents per 750 gallons consumed up to the first 4,000 cubic feet used and then pay 65 cents there after.

The city is also looking for its own sources of water.

"We have potential well sources that could provide up to 20 percent of Newton's needs," said Sulik.

Well water was discovered this spring in the city near the banks of the Charles River, but further testing will be needed to determine its quality before Newton can plan to make use of it.



MDC Resevoirs like this one in Weston may be overburdened, according to some water specialists.

Daily 343 million gallons of water flows to 45 communties from MDC reservoirs located in the western part of the state, but leaks in the distribution system and contaminated water supplies are making increasing demands on the MDC.

The gap in our future water supplies is a subject of a $6 million study, according to the MDC.

"The only reason the towns we serve don't come up with a water deficit is we have large storage areas," said Corcoran.

Any town within 10 miles of the Boston State House is entitled to use MDC water and communities within a 15-mile radius can hook up if the MDC consents, according to state statute.

But the future remains in doubt for many communities if the water supplies continue to be overused, according to the MDC.

"On a long-term basis we have a terrible water shortage," said Waltham Public Works Director and City Engineer Edward Delaney recently.

Contamination of water supplies in towns eligible to hook-up with the MDC will put further pressure on the MDC's resources, says Corcoran.

The MDC predicts 36 communities with potential water shortages could become future users and projects by 1990 it may have to provide an additional 50 million gallons a day.

In Waltham water consumption is on the way down, according to City Engineer and Director of Public Works Delaney. He is in the process of "looking into the whole water system."

In fact Waltham with a population half that of Newton's once consumed more than the Garden City, says Delaney.

Waltham now uses about 3.9 billion gallons of water a year, but industry is a big user, says Delaney. Water rates set for residents are 80 cents per 750 gallons, he said.

Waltham industry is committed to reducing their demand on this precious fluid, according to Delaney.

Mayoral appointment draws employee's ire

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The appointment of Thomas P. Maguire as public weigher at the Rumford Avenue solid waste disposal facility has a lot of people upset.

Some public works employees are upset that Maguire got the job without any of the credentials they say they presented when they applied for it. Also, several applicants said there never were interviewed after they applied.

The entire matter is going before a civil service board of inquiry soon, and the aldermen decided June 22 to do nothing about it until the results of the inquiry are reported.

The aldermen are upset because they just found out their approval is no longer necessary for the appointment. Correspondence from the city's Law Department holds that "the mayor has authority to appoint a weigher without action of the Board of Aldermen," subject to the provisions of existing general laws.

Furthermore, Daniel Funk, the city solicitor, states that the whole question of the appointment is moot. According to him, given the terms of the 1975 contract between the city and SCA Services, Inc., the entire costs of running the transfer/haul station on Rumford Avenue should be borne by SCA.

The gripes of public works employees Robert Hamilton and Larry Zastrea, aired before the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee Wednesday night, center around the discarding of a list of civil service employees in the search for a new weigher. They both contend that, given the use of that list and the scores they received when tested for the position, they should have been given more consideration.

Hamilton, a graduate of Newton Junior College with an associate degree in business and a 27-year employee of the city, said he already has the license to perform the duties of weigher.

Zastrea said he was never interviewed for the job even though he passed a test for it almost a year ago. He added that Maguire never even took the exam for the job and had only seniority to recommend his application.

Public Works Commissioner John Sulik could not tell members of the Public Facilities Committee just why Personnel Director Dee Meissner did not recommend use of the civil service list of potential candidates for the job.

The entire matter is going before a civil service board of inquiry soon, and the aldermen decided June 22 to do nothing about it until the results of the inquiry are reported.

Aldermen wondered why their approval of the appointment of weighers was requested in the past when it was no longer required by law. According to Funk, the 1918 statute which required their approval has been changed. Now, he stated, a mayoral appointment can stand alone.

While wondering about why that was never pointed out in the past, aldermen further wondered how the city could adhere to part of the new statute and not all of it. Under the new law, the weigher is only appointed to a one-year term, and he has to be reappointed every year.

Sulik has requested that the weigher in question be appointed "for an indefinite period while employed by the City of Newton." According to Funk, "The practice has been to appoint weighers for an indefinite period of time. This practice is inconsistent with " existing state laws.

Committee member Paul Coletti complained that the city was using part of the old law and part of the new. "You can't change the ball game and use both sets of laws," he commented.

According to a letter from Funk to Sulik, the whole matter of the appointment may be irrelevant, as the responsibility for providing a weigher seems to be that of SCA Services. Funk stated that, when SCA and the city signed a contract in 1975 for the maintenance of the Rumford Avenue disposal site, the private contractor agreed to provide all labor necessary to run the operation.

Clean enough to swim in

More than 30 swimmers gathered for the Charles River Watershed Association swim to Fox Island over the weekend. The early cool temperatures and rain didn't stop such hardy participants as the shivering O.J. McGarrahan, who beat the cool winds by keeping his face above water as pictured immediately above. Below, McGarrahan and Matthew Burstein, 16, stand shivering in the cold morning air. The Watershed Association has been working for several years to clean up the Charles River, and to bring attention to the gradually restored health of the river which winds through parts of Newton.

Church seeks to preserve clock

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — In the belfry of The Newton Highlands Congregational Church hangs a venerable old clock whose four faces look out over the Newton Highlands Square, over the Hyde School, over to Route 9 and over to the MBTA station.

Placed there 77 years ago in 1906 when the then-new Congregational Church was built with granite from quarries in Hingham, it has weathered many a storm. The four faces are showing their age, the hands need covering of golf leaf...those who cared for it years ago acknowledged that it was community property but since it was located in the church tower, they voted to assume "technical responsibility for its maintenance."

Thirty years ago a group of men started a project to raise funds to keep the clock going and so the Village Clock Fund was established.

Now in the 1980s the church is appealing to merchants, businessmen and friends in the Highlands Square to help with donations to paint the faces and to cover the weathered hands. Generous gifts have been received from the Mutual Bank for Savings, the Highland News, the Highland Hardware Company and C. H. Jonasson Corporation.

Contributions may be sent to The Newton Highlands Congregational Church, 54 Lincoln St., Newton Highlands, MA 02161, c/o the Treasurer.

Newton car crash kills disabled vet

NEWTON — A 61-year-old disabled veteran was killed in the early morning on June 24 after his car struck and uprooted a tree on Beacon Street, police said.

The victim, identified as Thomas S. Kiley of the Soldier's Home in Chelsea, died of multiple injuries, said Officer Cynthia Webster, a Newton police spokesman.

Webster said Kiley was operating his 1982 Buick at high speeds toward the Route 128 interchange at Route 16 when his car veered off the road near 1900 Beacon St. and struck a tree. The car was destroyed on impact.

Kiley, who was single, was the only person in his car and no other cars were involved in the 12:05 a.m. crash, Webster said. It had not been determined whether alcohol was involved in the crash.

Newton police and the Registry of Motor Vehicles today were investigating the crash, Webster said.

An ambulance transported Kiley to Newton-Wellesley Hospital, where he was pronounced dead, Webster said. The accident scene is only a short distance from the hospital.

Police were unsure where Kiley had lived before moving to the soldier's home.

A separate accident occured on Route 9 and Eliot Street in Newton Highlands sometime last night. State Police who responded to the scene had no details early today but a spokesman said he believed no one was seriously injured.

School committee to lay off eight teachers

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The School Committee voted Monday night to dismiss seven guidance counselors and a math teacher, and to hold in abeyance the proposed dismissal of another teacher, pending the outcome of a hearing scheduled for Aug. 29.

School committee attorney Richard Murphy informed the board that teacher Sylvia Blair had requested a hearing before the committee to contest the proposed dismissal. Murphy said Blair is claiming that the layoffs were not made necessary by budgetary constraints and declining enrollments.

Citing "the need for efficiency and economy," in addition to declining enrollment and financial constraints caused by Proposition 2½, the committee voted to place guidance counselors Rosemary Colson, Sharon Milinsky, Barbara Walsh, and William Yunker on two-year involuntary leaves of absence without compensation, culminating in their dismissal in 1985.

For the same reasons, the committee voted to dismiss math teacher Richard Burke and guidance counselors Sandra Alexander, Richard Ramsay, and Linda Wolf. Burke will continue to teach through January of 1984.

"We regret the necessity of these actions," said School Committee Chairman Nancy Mann." It is more painful for people being RIFfed (Reduction in Force) than for the School Committee, but it is painful for the School Committee as well."

In other business, the committee voted unanimously to accept School Superintendent John Strand's recommendations for two newly-created administrative positions. Betty Quinn was appointed Director of Secondary Education/Special Assistant to the Superintendent. Dr. Melvin Hines was appointed Director of Elementary Education.

A third new position, Assistant to the Superintendent for Curriculum and Instruction, remains open. Strand told the committee he wasn't completely satisfied with any of the three finalists.

"None was quite right for the position," he said. "While each finalist had strong qualifications, none had the right combination of qualities."

Noting the lengthy procedure of reference checking, preliminary and final interviews, and visits to Newton, Strand said "a decision like this is not easy to reach, after this elaborate process."

Strand said he would review possible interim candidates this week, and open a full search for applicants in the fall.

A special kind of poetry

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON - Wes Metro probably isn't the only eighth grader at Day Junior High School to write poetry. But he is surely the only one to type his poems with one finger, in a laborious process that may take up to two hours per poem.

Wes Metro is a quadriplegic, and can only move his head and one finger. He can't speak. But Wes has been mainstreamed in Newton schools since the first grade, and is planning to attend Newton North High School is September.

"He has an incredible spirit," said Student Services Chairman Vaunita Schnell, who has directed Wes' mainstreaming for the past three years.

Wes communicates via a board with key words that is affixed to his wheelchair. He wears a light beam pointer on his head, so he can point to the blackboard.

Wes has benefited from his mainstream education, said Schnell, and his presence at Day helped other students to learn to communicate with a disabled peer.

"They're not turned off by seeing a handicapped person now," she said.

Wes must be accompanied by an aide at all times, said Schnell, and his multiple disabilities, which were caused by cerebral palsy, caused "horrendous problems" when Wes reached the seventh grade. "We'd never before had a kid without speech, in a wheelchair. Some people thought he shouldn't be there," in a regular class, she recalled.

But Wes, who is of average intelligence, persisted, and received "satisfactory grades" from Day, Schnell said.

"He's been an inspiration to everybody," she said."He lifted teachers' morale. He's a nice-looking, expressive, cheerful, delightful young man."

Last week, Wes assembled a collection of his poems and presented copies to the school library and several of his teachers.

Special needs recreation events

NEWTON — The Newton Parks and Recreation Department is offering special needs programs this summer. The programs offered are:

Children-Beginning Programs

Camp Echo Bridge is offering a program which includes a day camp at Newton Centre Playground/Mason-Rice School with a residential camp component at Boston University's Sargent Camp in Peterborough, N.H.

The camp offers a variety of activities. Emphasis is on the acquisition of leisure skills stressing aquatics, camping, sports, arts, and music.

Qualified students and graduates from the fields of Special Education, Therapeutic Recreation and Adapted Physical Education provide the energy and expetise necessary. A qualified registered nurse is on duty at all times, speech therapy is provided weekly and a structured aquatics program is developed and supervised by certified Water Safety Instructors.

Camp Echo Bridge is open to those between 3 and 21 years-old. Transportation and cost are free to Newton residents. The pre-school unit meets Monday through Friday, June 29 to August 12. Unit II and Unit III meet June 29 to August 14.

Camp Arrowhead is a six week day camp operated by the Natick Recreation Department. Camp runs Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., July 4 to August 11.

Camp Arrowhead is open to physically handicapped youth, 6-21 years-old. Newton campers tuition and transportation are sponsored by the Newton Parks and Recreation Department.

Summer Multiply Handicapped Program is an afternoon summer program for school age multiply handicapped children stressing recreational, behavioral and educatonal goals. It will be held from July 5 to August 19, 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Burr School, Newton.

Children-Continuing Programs

Travel Program is an evening and weekend program for Newton special needs teens. The program includes transportation and supervision to greater Boston places of interest, such as restaurants, theatres, concerts and movies.

Independent Travel Club is an independence-oriented extension of the "Travel Program" for program participants 18 and over. Club meets at the monthly Drop-In Center, Newton Centre "Hut", Tyler Terrace, Newton Centre, the first Saturday of each month. The club plans one trip to take place later that month.

Drop-In Centre has monthly social gatherings at the Newton Centre "Hut", Tyler Terrace, Newton Centre for Independent Travel Club participants and their guests, age 18 to 26 on July 2 and August 6, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Adult Programs

Evening Swim Program is open to Newton mentally and physically disabled adults. Certified Water Safety Instructors with adapted training are on hand to offer lessons and assist participants. It will be held at Gath Pool, Albemarle Road, Newtonville which is fully accessible, including pool lift.

The program will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 p.m. to dusk from July 6 to August 10. In case of rain, Fridays will be used as a make-up day from July 8 to August 12, same time.

Special Needs News

The Travel Program and Independent Travel Club will not meet August 7 through September 18. Both programs will return in the fall.

The Hamilton Drop-In Center will not held in July, August of September. It will resume as scheduled, the third Saturday of each month, starting October 22.

Arts in the Parks brochures are now available with a full line-up of programs. Drop by the Parks and Recreation Department office at 70 Crescent St., Auburndale, to pick up a copy, or call 552-7120. Disabled individuals are invited to participate in the Arts in the Parks programs.

The Information Center for Individual's with Disabilities (ICID) has announced the availibility of a 425 page comprehensive directory entitled "Massachusetts Resources for Disabled Persons". For more information, contact ICID at 552-7120

Registration is closed in all of the above programs except for the Adult Evening Swim Program. For more information or to register for the summer swim program, please contact Lou MacDonald at 552-7120.

Program helps kids understand the handicapped

NEWTON — For children, it is tough to be different. Kids with handicaps or disabilities are often met with curiousity and cruelty from their peers.

But the Understanding Handicaps program in Newton is attempting to combat that reaction. The program uses volunteers to work with fourth grade students in all of Newton's 17 elementary schools to help them understand the problems and needs of the handicapped.

The program started in 1978 when a group of special needs children were going to be transferred to Burr Elementary. The children's parents decided to initiate a program that would familiarize the other students with handicaps and to appreciate what it is like for the disabled person.

Now the program involves more than 200 volunteers working in classrooms across the city and covering subjects such as blindness, deafness, physical disabilities and mental retardation.

More volunteers are always needed, according to Susan Gilbert Epstein, vice president of Understanding Handicaps.

A workshop to familiarize volunteers will be held July 5-8 at Countryside Elementary School, 191 Dedham St., Newton.

Classroom activities are scheduled for 20 hours over a five-month period with more time for planning. However Epstein said any donated time is appreciated.

"If somebody is interested in getting involved, there is a role for them," she said.

Interested persons may contact Epstein by June 28 by calling 969-4963.

The workshop will include lectures and seminars.

Mann still hospitalized with bronchitis condition

NEWTON — After almost two weeks of being hospitalized for bronchitis, mayor Theodore Mann remains in "fair" condition, according to a spokesperson for Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Mann entered the hospital June 17, right after he returned from the annual U.S. Conference of Mayors in Denver, Colo.

According to members of his staff, the mayor has managed to do some paperwork while in the hospital, but his visitors are being limited to his immediate family and he is receiving no phone calls.

A family member said this morning that they are still uncertain when Mann might be released from the hospital.

Let's do something

Proponents of the Newton Free Library will have their day in court tonight at 7:45 p.m. in City Hall. The issue is vital to the small, but increasingly vociferous group of backers of the library system: what to do with the main branch at Newton Corner. The building is 108 years old, is vastly overcrowded and, in short, is a disgrace to every Newton resident.

After 40 years of agitating for a new central library, defenders of the Newton Free Library want something done now. The new activist tactics of the Library Trustees, including raising questions about the safety of the Newton Corner facility, illustrate the seriousnous of the group.

Tonight they will start a campaign to convince two-thirds of the board of aldermen to approve putting a ballot question before the voters in November. The proposed ballot will ask Newton residents to pay $10 million for a new central library at the corner of Homer and Walnut Streets by exempting the construction costs from the city's Proposition 2½ tax cap.

There is the rub. Although every responsible member of the community feels the central library is a shambles, they do not believe Newton residents will vote to exempt the library from the tax cap in the face of so many other fiscal problems. Former Alderman Mark White's column on this page best represents the conventional informed point of view: that this is not the time to push for a new library.

Unfortunately there is no perfect time to hatch a new central library. Looking into the future, it is difficult to imagine a time in the next 10 to 15 years when Newton could better "afford" a new central library. If the aldermen and the mayor wait many more years they may have serious structural, or safety problems to contend with. These additional problems could reduce the possibilities for solving the problem.

It is not as if the city is without direction. Three years ago the aldermen accepted the King Report that recommended all but four of the 12 branches be closed in favor of a new building. Since then the Proposition 2½ tax cap has changed the face of municipal government by reducing the options of its governing boards. With less money to work with there are less options. But Proposition 2½ has not taken away the responsibility to govern and to solve pressing municipal problems. If the mayor and the board of aldermen are unhappy with library ballot question, then let them sit down with library proponents and work out a solution. Some tough decisions will have to be made, especially regarding the of network of branch facilities. There is a tendency to see the bond issue as the ill-advised work of the trustees. But that would be a mistake. It is the work of a group of committed residents who have grown desparate over the deterioration of its library system. Newton residents deserve some answers on the library issue, not benign neglect.

Singing the library song

by Mark White
Alderman-at-Large

Let's see! "Beautiful dreamer, wake unto me." No, that's not it. How about "Whenever I want you, all I have to do is dream." A little better, but no ring to it. Maybe "Don't Cry Out Loud." Better, but maybe a little too esoteric. I've got it! "Ain't too proud to beg?" Perfect!

Oh, hi there! Don't pay much attention to me, I'm just searching for theme songs for the new political campaign. No, it's not for any candidates it's for a referendum.

Now, I've been on the bandstand for a new main library for years. We all know that the present one belongs in the Smithsonian and should be given a decent burial...The problem, like everything else, is money.

In case you haven't heard, the hot news is the Library Trustees have come up with a way to finally construct a new main library.

Now, I've been on the bandstand for a new main library for years. We all know that the present one belongs in the Smithsonian and should be given a decent burial (the old library's song is "Shake, Rattle and Roll").

The problem, like everything else, is money (How about "Ain't got no money, honey").

But now the Library Trustees have come up with an idea to save us from illiteracy, a Proposition 2½ override!

They met with the Board of Aldermen and suggested to the Board that they approve a question on the ballot that will provide a Proposition 2½ override for interest on a bond issue for a new main library. (I like "Kiss the day goodbye").

See, after all this time, there's finally a way to get a new library. Only, one tiny, tiny problem. When was the last time a city approved a major bond issue?

So what if a million dollars was cut from the school budget. So what if people are being laid off. So what if no capital improvements can be made. I'm sure that all the citizens in Newton will dig into their own pocketbooks to pay for a brand new library. I really believe in the tooth fairy, that the Red Sox are going to win the pennant, and that Paul Tsongas will someday be president.

After 10 years, this is the solution. They've got the answer (How about "I've got plenty of nothing").

Now, before all my pro-library friends and allies get on my case and brand me a traitor ("Love on the rocks") I want to repeat: I favor a new main library and that's why I oppose this maneuver.

Now let me explain why to the trustees as clearly as I can! State it - there ain't no way! This is going down the tube! There's no chance this is going to pass ("The Impossible Dream").

We're going to put it on the ballot. It's going to lose 3-1 and whenever the issue is raised in the future, the response will be "The peole don't want it."

If you wanted to kill the issue of a library you couldn't pick a better way than this.

Now we're not even talking about the merits of the plan itself - a questionable site, the refusal to accept a rehabilitated building, the desire for a brand new modern structure ("Up where we belong").

The trustees of the library have taken a steadfast position on these issues ("My Way").

Furthermore, several neighborhoods want to maintain a branch library and the trustees have taken the tactful position "Give us the new library and then we'll decide about your branch library." ("What kind of fool am I?").

It's a shame. An important issue has been treated like a poor stepchild and continues to be the victim of child abuse.

This whole issue is a travesty and the theme song should be "Send in the Clowns."

Can't compare Memorial parades

Your news coverage, of the parade in the City of Newton on Memorial Day, in my opinion, was slightly distorted. It seems to me that your reporters found it hard in seeing the difference between the two parades, in the city on two different days, but to compare them as being alike, stinks. It seems to me that you people have a tendency to play up to the City fathers, and that is our perogative because you do own the newspaper. I just can't phantom out how this tends to sell more newspapers.

In any event, I personally think that you do the veterans a grave injustice, by this kind of reporting. The parade that was held on Monday, Memorial Day was to honor the veterans, even though it was small, you could have covered it more. Both the Tribune and Graphic had more coverage on my getting arrested, for supposedily setting up and promoting a lottery than your write-ups on both parades combined.

Just to keep the records straight, I was soliciting funds for the Nonantum Memorial Sunday parade, and if I'm found to be innocent, I would appreciate the same type of coverage. Why is it, that when it comes to the North side of the City, you people always get to minimize our activities, unless its something derogatory. Print the facts.

This is what you people printed, in the Graphic, on Wed. June 1. How can your reporters possibly write that the City parade, that was held on Monday was the same as the Nonantum Memorial Sunday parade. The time and length that it took the Nonantum parade just to pass in review, was triple to the parade that was held on Monday. Our donation to the Shriners Burn Center alone exceeded the expenses of the City parade. We had a total of 10 Color Guards, 13 marching bands, 10 marching units, along with floats and fraternal and civic groups.

Our women donated over three thousand sandwiches, for the parade marchers and we would like to thank them. Our group, on a whole, are opinionated that the reason the North and South sides of the City are split, is due partly to your newspaper reporting. We have more civic activity going on in "The Lake" than in any part of the City. All we ask of your papers is equal coverage.

Looking ahead to the school budget

Next year's Shouting about the Newton School Budget could involve even more decibels than this year's commotion.

So maybe we should already start thinking about some acceptable principles and other guidelines which might help diminish the trauma. We should also not allow ourselves to forget to recognize all costs — direct, indirect, and related — as well as the highly touted direct and indirect benefits hoped for.

The Newton Taxpayers' Association continues to advocate maintaining and improving quality and variety — within reason — in education for all who want it and can beneficially assimilate it. We also want efficiency.

To start some foundations for considering the next School Budget, the following are cited:

1. We are all indirect beneficiaries whereas only about one-third of Newton's families are both direct and indirect beneficiaries. Newton's indirect beneficiaries — families without children in school, businesses, etc. — are entitled to considerate moderation in the demands of beneficiaries who are both direct and indirect. For business real estate, a beneficiary group that must always be soley indirect, the situation is further exaggerated because their school tax is 150 percent of the average.

2. The Newton City administration's recommended dollar limit for the Fiscal Year 1984 School Budget was $39,467,722. But that figure represents only the so-called direct costs. Indirect costs in the form of school related services provided by the City add more than another $4,000,000 to the total real cost of local public education. Moreover, if we considered, for equivalent expense, the insured value of school buildings and contents as an investment, we would get a theoritical additonal education cost just for the interest on that investment of up to more than $13,000,000. Under those circumstances, an accounting figure of over $5,400 per student would be arrived at instead of the $4,181 estimated total cost per student or the $3,791 estimated direct cost per student. If we also include the cost of depreciation, an amount of up to $5 or $6,000,000 for buildings and over $2,000,000 for contents would have to be added. The total of $7 to $8,000,000 of added cost due to depreciation would mean at least another $700 per student. By those considerations we arrive at an accounted total school cost of almost $64,000,000 or of over $6,100 per student. A while back there was some excitement when the tax rate per thousand dollars of real estate assessed value was accidentally switched with the somewhat larger rate for all other City operations. It was feared that the public would object if it thought that school costs were higher than the proposed budget. It appears that the foregoing truer accounting would be more agonizing than the inadvertency.

3. Assumptions should be checked periodically and revised if desirable. One of these assumptions involves class sizes and prescribed pupil-teacher ratios. Current statistics and past studies indicate that a somewhat higher class size is not necessarily a detriment to education or other considerations as long as the average and some extremes remain within certain ample limits. Priorities should be reordered with the necessary ones for covering traditional basics and minimal traditional enrichment retained and others either omitted or subject to voluntary contributions or user fees.

In any event, there should be a ceiling — not to be breached except by vital necessity and last resort. There should be a conscientious effort to save the taxpayer's money without penalty on qualitative and quantitative adequacy of education.

It will also help to insist on receiving full value for any assets sold and on using the proceeds only for reduction of related indebtedness or adequately approved new education related capital investment. That principle should also be adhered to in other city matters so tha such funds are not disipated for other types of expenditures.

Why not finish the asbestos task?

The recent revelations about the asbestos situation on the fourth floor of Newton North High School are dismaying. Just when many of us in Newton have been congratulating ourselves for already having dealt with a problem that other schools and school systems are only now discovering, it turns out that conditions at Newton North High School are still dangerous, or potentially so.

There is certainly no excuse for not finishing the job as soon as it can be done. Why do we always have to wait for more proof of dangerous levels of asbestos fibers in the air samples? If it is not in the air now, it will be soon. The asbestos is known to exist, and vandalism and/or roof, or electrical work are acknowledged constants. It's like not installing a stop light at a dangerous intersection until a required number of pedestrians have been killed there.

The Newton School Committe should be commended for taking the new developments seriously and for pushing for a prompt follow-up. There should be no delay in taking the required action. The problem at Newton North has been with us for years; there are many of us (teachers, students, parents) who have been fighting for a solution to it for years; the feelings of frustration and anger that now arise are enormous. If the asbestos can be removed safely from three floors, it can be removed from the fourth also. Why go only halfway (or, more correctly, three-quarters?) The money will be found; Mayor Mann may be counted on. Human beings' lives are at risk. And, or course, if there is an asbestos problem at Newton South High School, as has also been reported, it, too, must be taken care of immediately.

A poor crawling space for children

Thank you for the coverage of the problems with Newton's Main Library and the recent space devoted to the meeting of the Friends of the Newton Free Library on June 21.

Your reporter was intrigued by one slide in the report and unfortunately misunderstood what I was trying to explain. By showing a floor with flaking paint and asbestos lagged pipes I was trying to show that this was not a good place for small children to crawl around. There is lead paint in this building but it would have to be tested in an area by area basis. There is no reason to believe that there is any problem from ambient or flaking asbestos. For fear of future misunderstanding, this slide and the point it makes are going to be jettisoned.

The major points of this report are that the Newton Main Library at 414 Centre St.:

1. Is about one-half the size needed to serve the adult population of Newton or to house the 190,000 volumes in the central collection;

2. Is leaking badly despite expensive ($52,000 in 1982) efforts to waterproof it;

3. Shows signs of structural problems which need to be thoroughly evaluated;

4. Has inadequate fire exits;

5. Has an antiquated wiring system, which, when combined with leaks, presents risks of both shock and fire.

The purpose of this report is the make people aware of the urgent need for a new main library.

A Team Effort

I would like to tell you the truth about the Newton Graphic's article about students sending a petition out to keep a math teacher.

I feel that the article was very good except it implied that one 11-year-old student at Oak Hill School worked on a petition when it was really the effort of a full group of thirteen year-old students at Brown Jr. High School. This group included Michael Sivlerstein, Jeff Wishnie, Chip Weintraub, Michael Fishman and many other students who helped to get signatures.

By mentioning only one student and quoting only one student, the article did not recognize that the petition was a group effort.

Caldicott changes the focus of her anti-nuclear activism

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Anti-nuclear crusader Dr. Helen Caldicott is shifting strategies for her continuing attack on the nuclear arms race. The Australian-born pediatrician, who has resigned her position as president of Physicians for Social Responsibility, will actively involve herself in the 1984 Presidential campaign and is working on a book entitled "Missile Envy."

"That summarizes it all in a neat phrase," says Caldicott. The pro-nuclear freeze organization which she headed for five years "needed another leader....I stepped down so I could be more politically active," she said, adding that she will still be associated with the organization as President Emeritus.

Starting this fall, Caldicott plans to "spend a year and a half on the road," to rally support for Presidential candidates who support a nuclear freeze. She says she won't endorse any one candidate.

"All candidates are answerable to the nuclear weapons issue. It's sacred, like Social Security. They all have to endorse the nuclear freeze," she insists.

Caldicott says she will also "teach people to use their democracy. It's not a democracy, when 79 percent (of all Americans) want a freeze and the government won't give it to them."

The Reagan administration "lives in fantasyland. They believe you can fight a nuclear war and win, because the Pentagon has a five-year plan for America to fight and win a nuclear war in six months," she says, in tones of disbelief.

"The whole world is wired like a time bomb," with underground communications systems and submarines, says Caldicott, and American foreign policy bears much of the responsibility for international tensions and instability.

She is especially critical of actions taken to "make the world safe for democracy."

"Democracy is good for Americans, but hardly for the rest of the world," she explains. "Nicaragua had a wonderful revolution going on to get rid of (Anastasio) Somoza," and American involvement in Nicaragua, she says, "is obscene. It makes my blood boil."

Arms negotiations with the Soviet Union will be fruitless, Caldicott says, "unless America can accept its dark side. It's imperative to understand that.

Caldicott's book will take the form of a patient diagnosis. "This planet is terminally ill," she says, and the prognosis is not good. Caldicott recites a litany of statistics that seem to portend imminent nuclear disaster: between three and five thousand government workers involved in the handling of nuclear materials are discharged annually because they are mentally unstable, alcoholic, or taking illicit drugs; computers are "unreliable and antiquated," and are constantly breaking down; a recent computer foul-up brought the world to within seven minutes of a nuclear war.

In fact, the movie "War Games," in which a young boy brings the world to the brink of nuclear war by tapping into an intergovernmental code while he's playing a video game, is not too far removed from reality, according to Caldicott.

"It's a realistic scenario in that the computers keep fouling up," she says.

Deli fights salami rule

Seskin pointed to the tradition of dry salami's being unrefrigerated without any problems. He said that, for many years, families sent dry salamis through the mail to soldiers overseas.

His next-door neighbor in Newton Centre, Daniel Blacker of Blacker Brothers Food Store, added that Danish salamis, which he sells in his store, are shipped to him from Denmark unrefrigerated.

Blacker said there was "no way" to create the perfect salami without letting it hang out for several months. "They get better with time," he insisted.

Alderman Joseph DePasquale, who has moved a lot of salami through his family's grocery on Adams Street, in Nonantum, said, "When you leave salami out, it ages and gets better." He said his own grandfather has been making salamis, for his own consumption, since the 1930's.

DePasquale added, "Absolutely, salamis have been hanging for years and years." He said people in his neighborhood have been making salami and aging it in a cool place "since year one."

According to DePasquale, mold might form on the outside of a salami, but it will not affect the quality of its contents.

Seskin said that, while 99.9 percent of the laws governing food establishments are "necessary," there is still "enough bureaucratic hogwash to shut down every restaurant in the city." He added that "the sheer bulk" of the laws makes this so.

"We have a good relationship with the Health Department, so we're complying with the law, but we are also going to investigate it," Seskin said.

Meanwhile, until Seskin's investigation proves that the state law is a bunch of baloney, there will be no salamis hung in the Garden City.

Cousens fund mortgages available

Residents may inquire about mortgage applications in the Cousens office in City Hall, but qualifications, guidelines or definite procedures have not been established by the fund's trustees, says Shick, chairman of an aldermanic subcomittee on Municiple Trust Funds.

Requirements of the Cousens' trust, state the loans must be made on first mortgages, be for no more than 75 percent of assessed value and cost 75 percent of the current interest rate, according to the terms of the trust established by his will.

This means to buy a house assessed at $80,000 a buyer would have to put down $20,000 and pay 9 percent in interest charges, if the current interest rate were 12 percent.

Committee members fear the $1 million trust fund will be exhausted quickly because of the high cost of homes in Newton.

Shick discovered that one mortgage has been granted by the trustees, but they failed to seek approval from both the Alderman and the mayor, which is required by a city ordinance governing the fund.

The low-interest mortgage granted for $40,000 to a person presumably meeting the requirements of the Horace Cousens Industrial Fund, was granted in April at 9 percent, according to Assistant City Solicitor Ouida Young.

There is some confusion regarding specific eligibility requirements for the low-interest loans among the trustees and the administrator of the fund, according to committee members.

"The Board of Aldermen should have approved it (the $40,000 mortgage)," said Young.

A city ordinance governing the fund states both the mayor and the Board of Aldermen must approve any loans, but the trustees unwittingly failed to comply with the law and issued the money to the individual without approval, according to Young.

"The Board of Aldermen will have to ratify it in order to protect a potentially illegal situation," said Young.

Committee members, at the request of the trustees, suggested additional guidelines for granting the low-interest mortgages. They are as follows: First-time homebuyer, special circumstances of the individual (possibly some form of hardship) and low to moderate income.

A Better Choice Than Ever...
The Gables in Newton
The Gables is one of the most successful of the long string of exceptional communities built by The Green Company. Phase III, announced just last fall, is selling so rapidly that we are underway with the additional two and three bedroom homes in the fourth and final phase. So, right now you have a better choice than ever at Newton's choicest location—The Gables, directly adjoining the Charles River Country Club.
The five distinctive styles range from a three bedroom, 3100 square foot home at $400,000 to a 1900 square foot two-bedroom at just $265,000* Exceptional values when you consider that today's average, yet very expensive, three bedroom home offers less than 1200 square feet, includes few or none of the amenities and certainly not the location of The Gables.
Homes feature unusual touches like soaring cathedral and Bermuda ceilings, a wonderful flow between rooms, unexpected fireplaces in kitchens and master bedrooms, attached two-car garages with direct indoor access, large very private deck and/or courtyard areas, and full basements. There's a private clubhouse overlooking a sunning area, swimming pool, whirlpool, and two tennis courts.
Models are open every day from 9 to 5 at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets, Newton. Telephone (617) 969-0200 for an appointment.
Developed, marketed and managed with pride by The Gables, Inc. (An important part of The Green Company family)
* Phase III prices.

Not only have we fixed the rate on your home mortgage, we've fixed the approval time, too.

The artist and free enterprise

By Carolyn Berg
Staff Writer

NEWTON - A few years ago, artist Bety Kohlberg discovered she was allergic to paint.

Unable to work in a confined space because of paint fumes, Kohlberg took the only sensible course of action: she packed her paintbox and set off for Florida, where she painted a series of abstract works inspired by the Florida Keys.

Kohlberg did all her painting outdoors, in an environment conducive to the development of artistic talent.

When Kohlberg returned home to Newton, Kenworth Moffett, curator of twentieth century art at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, paid a visit to her studio. He had followed her progress since she graduated the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in 1975, and was impressed with the "Florida Series."

Moffett was so impressed, in fact, that he chose one of Kohlberg's Florida paintings to be the first acquisition of a unique new program involving a partnership between the MFA and Hines Industrial, a large investment development firm headquartered in Houston, Texas. Hines will purchase paintings and sculptures by national, international, and local artists who are considered promising new talent. The works will be then exhibited for five years in the lobby of Hines' University Place Project, which is under construction in Harvard Square. Finally, the works of art will be offered as a gift to the Museum for its permanent collection.

Artist Kohlberg uses the garage as studio and opens the door for air.

"I really worked with the forces of nature, incorporated those forces," Kohlberg recalls, comfortably curled up on her living room couch. Those forces literally left their mark on the paintings. The hot sun caused the water in the acrylic gel and water mixture to evaporate faster than the gel, creating deep cracks and crevices in the painting.

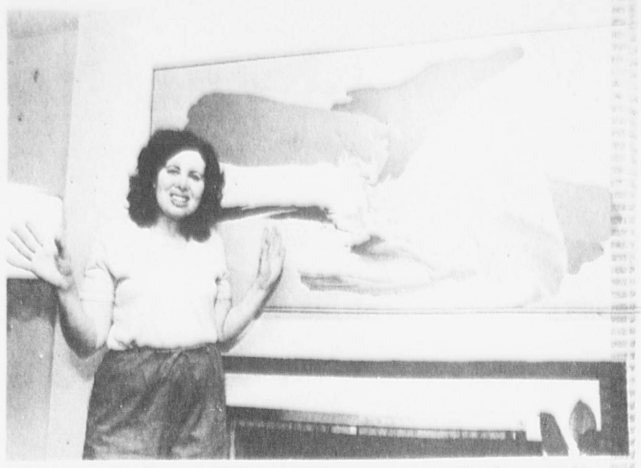
Wildlife, in the form of insects, also made a contribution. "This is the path of the bug," she says, tracing a curving ridge of paint in a work entitled "Cedar Key," which hangs on the living room wall. "I came out the next morning (after finishing the painting), and it was dead right on the painting. I practically cried when I saw that bug."

Kohlberg's "Siesta Key" was unveiled Tuesday night at an elegant party at the Museum. Over four hundred guests nibbled smoked sturgeon and raw oysters as Jan Fontein, director of the Museum, praised the new acquisition program as " a creative solution to the perennial problem" of young artists who seek recognition.

R. John Griefen, principal of Hines Industrial's Boston office, said the program, which was conceived by himself and Kenworth Moffett, "will allow the Museum to acquire a collection of very exciting art at no cost or risk...it's an imaginative approach to corporate giving, an opportunity to encourage new and young artists."

Kenworth Moffett had high praise for both the painting and the artist. "I hope (the painting) will grace the interior with life, vitality, spontaneity....these are the things I look for in a work. I always liked Bety's vitality, optimism, and spirit, but I didn't like her pictures."

Despite their graceful composition and harmonious colors, Kohlberg's paintings have been involved in some controversy. A recent show of "Abstract Artists of New England" at the Danforth Museum in Framingham was harshly panned by several art critics. Moffett was the show's curator. A critical review in the Boston Globe was accompanied by a picture of a Kohlberg painting, but the artist wasn't mentioned in the text.



Fresh air artist Bety Kohlbern explains her inspiration for one of her paintings in her living room.

Kohlberg dismisses the criticism as a "personal vendetta against Ken Moffett. Ken has integrity; he's not trendy. He's a classical, twentieth century curator who won't compromise."

She terms her own style "process painting," which involves four steps. The first is "taking stock of previous paintings, living with them, getting to know them as friends," she said. Next is a "gathering up of internal energies." Then the colors are mixed, a step which Kohlberg describes as "very exciting and intense - it could take a whole day." After the canvas is cut and primed with a ground color, Kohlberg pours bucket of paint on the canvas and manipulates the canvas "for blends and solids and directional movement."

The most crucial skill, she says, is "knowing when to stop."

Kohlberg has taught at Massachussetts College of Art, and is presently a "special student" at Tufts University, working toward a Masters Degree or a Ph. D. - she's not sure which - in Music History and Theory.

Main library gallery features local potters

NEWTON A group show by potters-in-residence at The Potters Shop in Newton Highlands, "Ten Potters — Ten Dimensions," will be the featured exhibit in the Newton Free Library Gallery, 414 Centre St., July 6-August 3. There will be a reception Wednesday, July 6, 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The pieces in the exhibitions include a variety of styles and techniques ranging from handbuild porcelain with carved relief decorations and raku vases to decorative and functional wheel-thrown porcelain and stoneware.

The show includes work by Steve Branfman, Carol Temkin, Jodie Kuhlman, Ron Boisvert, Claudio Schwartz, Rhona Barlevy, Bill Ganick, Susan MacMillan, Debbie Freed and Leyla Goldstein.

Branfman, the founder and director of The Potters Shop, also teaches at Thayer Academy. He works on large scale pots, making them from thrown porcelain and raku.

Temkin, the studio manager, has been working in clay for ten years. She throws functional and decorative porcelain.

Kuhlman handbuilds creations large and small and also does functional pieces on the wheel. She is the Potters Shop studio assistant.

Boisvert orginally trained as a biologist and photographer. He produces functional and decorative stoneware and works as a studio assistant at the shop.

Schwartz has been working in clay for seven years, producing functional stoneware and raku.

Barlevy works in procelain, doing both sculptural and functional work. She teaches adult classes at the Potters Shop.

Ganick is well known for the creative calligraphic designs on his pottery. Formerly he was the creative director and Senior Vice-President at Harold Cabot and Co. Advertising.

MacMillan works in handbuilt carved porcelain which is cleverly decorated.

Freed works in colored clay, handbuilding and throwing a variety of forms.

Goldstein works in earthenware and porcelain producing both functional and decorative ware.

The Potters Shop was established in 1977 to provide a place for people of all ages and abilities to work in clay. It has grown to house a school, gallery, studio space and a pottery book and supply store. Current membership includes professional potters and hobbyists working in the Shops' extensive facilities.

Main Library hours are Monday through Thursday 9-9; Friday 9-6. For more information call 552-7145.

First roadblocks going up

Area police plan to nab drunk drivers

By Joseph Mapother
Staff Writer

A precedent-setting statewide roadblock check for drunk drivers during the 4th of July weekend announced by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis is expected to see various degrees of participation from area police departments.

Watertown police will begin setting up roadblocks tonight rather than concentrate on the holiday weekend when many motorists will be out of town, said Police Capt. Robert Kelly.

The Watertown operation will avoid full-scale roadblocks, using instead four-man details equipped with radar, said Kelly. The checks will be set up along sections of road where the speed limit is moderate and where cars can be safely pulled over, he added.

While looking for speeders and other traffic violations, the emphasis will be on curbing the incidents of drunk driving, said Kelly. The locations of the checks will be determined by factors such as the accident rate, type of violation and time of motor vehicle incidents as based on records, said Kelly.

The police units will use "visual observation" as well as radar to pull over offenders, according to Kelly. The increased surveillance was made possible by a recent $8,000 state grant to Watertown and will continue until Labor Day, he said.

Statewide, motorists will be pulled over for a check on a numbered basis, possibly every fifth or tenth car, said Barbara Kopans, spokesperson for the state Department of Public Safety.

Plans are expected to be finalized next week, she said.

The selection process will conform to a recent Supreme Judicial Court ruling that held a 1982 roadblock action by Revere police was illegal.

Guidelines laid down by the court in the wake of that action allow the numerical selection.

Newton Police Capt. Thomas Dargan said, "I'm sure we will be," participating in the roadblock action. Plans are being discussed for the holiday weekend, he said.

Waltham Police Capt. John Benson said Thursday a final decision on participation has yet to be taken.

In Weston, police plan to double up on radar patrols between 4 p.m. and 2 a.m. on holiday weekend nights, said Officer Robert Miller.

The statewide plan is the first massive attempt to control holiday drunk drivers and will involve the State, Metropolitan and Registry of Motor Vehicles police.

High-speed roads will be avoided as roadblock candidates with the exception of the Massachusetts Turnpike, said Kopans.

State police will man checkpoints at tollbooths to approach motorists and inspect the contents of the car while passing out literature explaining the changes tightening the state drunk driving law, according to Kopans.

At roadblock locations, at least four police cruisers will be involved and notice of the roadblock will be posted down the road, said Kopans. She expected a trooper would be stationed at the sign to watch for illegal U-turns and other evasive actions by motorists.

"We're not looking to catch a lot of people," the state spokesperson said. The action was intended largely as a deterrent during the holidays, she said.

Smoke fills building, residents evacuated

NEWTON — Residents of Imperial Towers, 200 Boylston St., may have had some anxious moments last Tuesday morning when smoke spread through the top five floors of their building.

Firefighters sped to the scene and helped evacuate the 10-story building. There were no injuries, according to a fire official.

Firefighters found that the smoke was coming from the incinerator in the basement, according to a fire official.

The doors of the incinerator were not closed properly, allowing the smoke to rise through the building and accumulate on the top floors about 9:40 a.m.

Firefighters from Engines 3, 6, 7, Ladder 1, 3 and the auxiliary lighting plant were at the scene for about 1½ hours venting the smoke. The lighting plant carries a powerful exhaust fan for clearing smoke.

In other fire news, firefighters went to the city yard on Crafts Street to extinguish a window fire in one of the buildings. The fire caused minor damage, according to a fire official who was unaware of how the fire started.

Firefighters also went to extinguish brush fires at 131 Warwick Rd. about 2 p.m. and at Dudley Road about 2:25 p.m.

And at 5:20 p.m., firefighters went to Maple and Central Streets to extinguish a car fire.

Library issue

Admitting there are a few minor code violations, Fire Chief Edward Reilly said, the building's condition is not a hazard. Building Commissioner James Cameron also said the structure poses no public danger.

"Each day this condition exists (of unprotected stairways) you are not only operating in violation of minimum safety standards, but you are gambling with lives and safety of those who use this antiquated structure," states local architect and engineer Nast in a letter to Mayor Theodore Mann.

A slide presentation by Mary Adelstein compiled for the Friends of the Library to aid in their campaign, shows the building does have two exits, but the stairways are open and could become chimneys during a fire, she said. Adelstein believes the city is planning to enclose one of stairways.

The state building code states fire exit stairways must be be enclosed to allow safe passage, according to Nast.

The two exits that serve the 190 foot long building's five levels are located in the wood frame addition of the building, are 40 feet apart and on the same side, says Adelstein.

Adelstein said the building's front door can be ruled out as a suitable fire exit because it has a turnstyle in the way.

Old metal fire safety doors in the rear area of the building shut when tripped by intense heat and effectively trap any individuals in the section, said Adelstein.

Plexiglass windows, installed to save energy, make it very hard for someone seeking fresh air during a fire to break them open, said Adelstein.

Loose electric outlets, numerous substandard extension cords hung around the building and extension cords plugged into outlets in wet walls, were noted in Adelstein's talk to the group.

Leaks from the ceiling, even though the city spent $50,000 to repair the roof this year still persist, said Adelstein.

Adelstein enlisted architects, fire safety experts and engineers in the brief study of the building.

In addition, Adelstein says she had a positive test result from the state (lead paint) lab from flaking lead paint she found in the rear section of the building near the stacks.

"It's not necessarily a hazard for adults, but it could present problems for children," said Adelstein.

Lead paint can be poisonous if ingested in sufficient quantity, according to published reports.

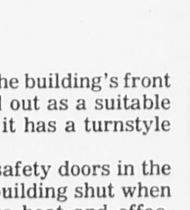
Design & Decor



Nothing clutters up counter space faster than the cutting and slicing associated with salad preparation. One ingenious method for dealing with this messy task is to provide a square cut-out in the counter top. A butcher block cutting board can fit securely over the cut-out so as to provide a cutting surface. Scraps and crumbs can then be disposed of by lifting the cutting board and dumping them into a plastic waste bin that lives beneath the cut-out. The bin can be easily disguised with a drawer front. When the drawer is opened, the bin can be removed for easy disposal.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton J. Yanofsky

Pamela A. Zaccaria weds Milton Yanofsky

Pamela A. Zaccaria and Milton J. Yanofsky were married recently at Belmont Country Club in Belmont.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Zaccaria of Dedham; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Yanofsky of West Newton.

For her wedding, the bride wore a designer gown fashioned in taffeta. The bodice was fitted and the skirt was A-line with a cathedral train. Her orange blossom headpiece had a fingertip length silk illusion veil.

Linda and Victoria Zaccaria were maids of honor, and Carla and Gina Zaccaria were bridesmaids. All attendants, sisters of the bride, wore peach taffeta tea length gowns.

Serving as best men were the groom's brothers, Norman and Richard Yanofsky. Ushers included Robert Borzakian, Andrew Cable, Philip Donaghey and Stephen Narva.

The Yanofskys went to Acapulco for their wedding trip.

Boy born to the Rochas

A new baby boy, Timothy John, was born June 14 at Winchester Hospital to Mr. and Mrs. (Marilyn Drew) Anthony J. Rocha Jr. of Nashua, New Hampshire.

The grandparents are William F. Drew of Newton and Edith Shore of Nashua, New Hampshire.

The new baby is the couples third child and second son.

New officers are elected

At the 1982-83 spring wrap-up meeting, the Newton Cultural Affairs Commission elected officers for the coming year.

Maudyea Campbell will serve as chairman, Marcia Massimo as vice-chairman, and Yvonne Pepe as secretary.

The commissio members celebrated a Tenth Anniversary Springfest at the Jackson Homestead recently. Commission and board members discussed the Newton Cultural Affairs, Inc., a body formed to enable the commission to purchase from the city of Newton the abandoned church building in Newtonville which is now the Newton Arts Center.

Debra J. Gomberg

Mrs. Craig Goldman

Marsha Holzman of Newton weds Craig Edward Goldman

Marsha Fay Holzman and Craig Edward Goldman were married June 5 at the Marriott Hotel in Newton.

Miss Holzman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holzman of Newton Centre, is a graduate of Simmons College, class of 1980. The bride was attended by her sister, Joyce Holzman-Lieblich as Matron of Honor, and Miss Elaine Goldman served as bridesmaid.

Mr. Goldman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Goldman of Framingham, is a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was attended by his brother, Henry Goldman, and ushers Matthew Goldman, Edward Harris and Dr. Neil S. Lieblich.

Military

Airman Michael A. Miller, son of Dr. Martin A. Miller of Stow, and Mrs. Wynne W. Miller of Waban, has been assigned to Brooks Air force Base, Texas, after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

The airman will now receive specialized instruction in the medical services field.

Airman Debra J. Gomberg, daughter of Ralph L. and Sydelle R. Gomberg of 264 Mill St., Newtonville, has been assigned to Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

She is a 1975 graduate of The Cambridge High School in Weston.

Sgt. Dana J. Foley III, son of Dana J. and June R. Foley of 27 Eddy St., West Newton, has reenlisted in the U.S. Army at Fort Lewis, Wash., for an additional four years military service.

Foley, a squad leader with the 9th Infantry Division, is a 1975 graduate of Newton North High School.

Linda Maureen Mead to wed Robert W. Jones in November

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Mead Jr. of Newell Road, Auburndale, announce the engagement of their daughter, Linda Maureen to Mr. Robert W. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip F. Jones of Bonmar Circle, Auburndale.

Miss Mead is a 1980 graduate of Newton North High School and is employed at the Watertown Answering Service.

Mr. Jones is a 1979 graduate of Newton North High School and Richard & Robert School of Beauty in Waltham. He is presently employed at Zayre Corporation in Waltham.

A November wedding is planned.

The World of Travel
by Hank Fleming
"LION COUNTRY" — PALM BEACH, FLORIDA
Trespassers Will Be Eaten." — A sign that is read just before entering Lion Country, located just 20 miles west of Palm Beach, on US 98, in tall pine country. This section appears an almost exact replica of the African veldt. The animals give it that little added touch of atmosphere so that if one closed his eyes in Palm Beach and did not open them again, until he was in the midst of Lion Country, he'd swear by some miracle he had been bewitched into the middle of Africa. Lion Country is an experience, an adventure of incomparable consequences. You don't drive far inside the guard-locked gates of Lion Country before you come upon its chief occupants — giant lions lazying in the Florida sun. They roam wild here and if you don't think they really mean business, just try getting out of your car. On second thought, don't try it, for the lions don't get you, the roving guards will.

Cookie sales and camp keep Girl Scouts busy

NEWTON — Patriots Trail Girl Scout Council's local Service Unit Cookie Chairman Mrs. Nancy Grissom said Newton Scouts sold 32,925 boxes of cookies during the 1983 sale.

The Newton Girl Scouts earned $9,877 from the sale.

The total translates into more and better programs provided by the Council, as well as expanded opportunities for the individual troops for special events such as camping, traveling and service projects, said Mrs. Grissom.

Record sales were made by Brownie Troop 2334 of Horace Mann School, Newtonville, which sold 1,428 boxes; Auburndale Junior Girl Scout Troop 2620, 4,452 boxes and Cadette Troop 2395 the Travel Troop, 4,800 boxes.

Girl Scouts who sold the most cookies for their particular level of scouting were: Jennifer Vereker of Brownie Troop 2334, more than any Brownie Scout. Junior G.S. Cindy Spaudling of Troop 2326, 338 boxes, topping sales by all juniors. Kirsten Karogosian of 2395 won double honors for selling the most cookies for Newton Cadettes and for selling the most of any Girl Scout in Newton this year, 647 boxes.

Service Recognized: Adult Girl Scout volunteer, recent chairman of Newton G.S. Community, Mrs. Hillie Kern, was awarded the highest recognition in national Scouting, the "Thanks Badge" at 1983 Annual Patriots Trail G.S. Council Meeting.

Junior G.S. Overnight: In mid-May, 125 Junior Girl Scouts from Newton troops gathered for a junior overnight at Camp Virginia, Bolton, Mass. A couple of 6th grade groups went early on Friday and stayed late on Sunday. Activities were planned and coordinated by Mrs. Margi Maynard, Mrs. Linda Wurm, Mrs. Hillie Kern, Mrs. Jan Wallace, Mrs. Marsha Eldredge and her firemaking competition crew of Scouts from Troop 2326, Mrs. Barbara Cassett and her Cadettes, and supported by many scouts and leaders.

Growth: The community has been cited among the top four cities and towns in Patriots Trail Council for increasing its membership the most this year. It has grown to 380 girls, 100 adults.

Cedar Hill Museum: There is now a museum for Girl Scouting at Cedar Hill in Waltham. The grand opening included tours, Cedar Hill's history in slides, a play "The Spirit of Juliet Low," the founder of Girl Scouts and a choice of inside or outside luncheon.

Massachusetts Bay Community College recently held its commencement exercises. The new president of the college, Mr. Roger A. Van Winkle, presided over the ceremony at which 478 degrees were awarded. Local residents receiving associate's degrees included:

Deborah C. Colucci, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Phillipson of Newton, and wife of Joseph Colucci Jr.

Cheryl A. York, daughter of Philip and Barbara York of Linwood Ave., Newton, in Early Childhood Education.

Charles H. Bell, son of Mrs. Evelyn A. Bell of Auburndale, in Business Administration.

Jewell M. DiDucca, daughter of Alfred and Barbara DiDucca of John St., Newton Centre, in Business Administration.

Suzanne Malkasian, daughter of George and Rose Malkasian of Wetherell St., Newton Upper Falls, in General Business.

Putting her all into hospital volunteerism

By Catherine Enns
In Focus Editor

It's hard to get Anne Jacobson to talk about herself. She is more likely to talk about how special she thinks other people are. But that says something about her, too.

Anne Jacobson is a person who reaches out. At age 68, the Newton resident's days are filled with work and volunteer activities. She is constantly trying to fit in one more thing on an already busy calendar.

She looks a decade younger than she is. Mrs. Jacobson says she exercises daily and constantly watches what she eats. "I'm a health food nut," she admits.

Not that it has been easy. Her first husband died at the age of 51 of multiple sclerosis, which he suffered from for 11 years. Several years after his death, she joined a widow and widowers' support group and met her second husband. They were married nine years when he died of bladder cancer.

But her acquaintance with hospitals and the handicapped has made her the perfect person for the work she has volunteered to do.

As a patient representative for Newton-Wellesly Hospital, she acts as a go-between for patients and the hospital's departments. She interviews patients who are at the hospital for an extended stay to find out if they have any complaints or suggestions for the hospital staff. Then she brings that information to the department and tries to work out a solution.

Recently she was honored for five years of work as a patient representative. "I was very surprised," she said. "I hadn't realized I had been there for five years."

Another program she is involved in, which she found out through the Retired Seniors Volunteer Program (RSVP), is the Understanding Handicaps program for fourth graders in Newton public schools.

The program uses senior citizens to help acquaint fourth graders with the problems and needs of the handicapped.

"My husband was in a wheelchair, and I know what it's like for people to be in one," she said. She is adept at manuevering a wheelchair, a skill she passes on to students at Angier School.

Her latest project is helping to get together an oral history program of West Newton and Newtonville through the Jackson Homestead. The history will chronicle the civic and community affairs and how they affected the residents of the two Newton villages since the 1930s.

Mrs. Jacobson is not used to being idle. "I worked all my life," she says proudly. She was a bookkeeper, but stopped when her son was born. While her son and daughter were small, she worked as a telephone solicitor.

She retired again from her full-time job as a bookkeeper in 1977. "I stayed home about a month and got bored," she says. She went back to work part time for an area company. "I'm a bookkeeper, but my boss calls me the office manager," she says.

In between her work and activities, Mrs. Jacobson makes a point of spending time with her two granddaughters.

"All my friends want to know where I get my energy," she says.

Gifted pianist

WEST NEWTON — Susan Worters, 13, a student at Warren Jr. High, recently won first place in the state division of the Junior Baldwin National Piano Competition. She will represent Massachusetts in the eastern regional division in February, competing with representatives from 13 other states. The contest is sponsored by the National Music Teachers Association and the Baldwin Piano Company to encourage gifted young pianists. Susan studies at the New England Conservatory in the preparatory division with Sylvia Chambless. She is a resident of West Newton.

Recreation

The Newton Parks and Recreation Department offers something for everyone. The following is its summer calendar of events:

New Summer Playground Program: The program will operate at 10 different supervised playgrounds beginning Tuesday, July 5 and continuing through Aug. 19. The hours for these playgrounds will be Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The 7-week program will feature seven weekly themes: Scavenger Hunt Week (July 5-8), Fitness Week (July 11-15), Gong Show Week (July 18-22), Civic Week (July 25-29), Games Week (Aug. 1-5), Field Trip Week (Aug. 8-12), and Trip Week (Aug. 15-19). There will also be a series of clinics (baseball, softball, basketball, volleyball, soccer, and football), arts and crafts, games, trips and a variety of other activities for children.

Farmers' Market- The Farmers' Market will be opening for its fourth season on Tuesday, July 12. The Market is open every Tuesday through October 25 from 2:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. in the Newton City Hall War Memorial Circle. Featured are fresh fruits and vegetables, flowers, plants, dried flowers, herbs, fresh frozen turkey pies, eggs, maple syrup, and honey.

Tennis Lessons: The Newton Parks and Recreation Department will sponsor summer tennis lessons (July-August) for children and adults. Registration will be held Monday, June 27, and Wednesday, June 29, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Newton Centre Hut on Tyler Terrace in Newton Centre. There will be day and evening lessons. The registration fee for the 7-week session (7 lessons) will be $20 for adults and $10 for children. For further information, call Sue King at 552-7120.

Softball The kids won when they battled the adults at a recent softball game at the Episcopal Parish of the Messiah. Both teams are pictured. The youths won 12-8.

New parking stickers for seniors ready

NEWTON — The new senior citizen parking stickers, which are blue in color, are now available.

The old stickers expire June 30, but there will be a grace period until Sept. 1 to give seniors an opportunity to purchase a new sticker.

According to Howard J. Lipton, Director of Human Services, the stickers will be available weekdays at the Beethoven Dropin Center in Newtonville and Newton Corner Drop-in Centers from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. (except during the noon lunch hour). The stickers may also be picked up at the Department of Human Services in City Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The new stickers cost $1 and will be good for one year. The sticker entitles seniors to park their personal cars free in municipal parking lots.

Applicants must be at least 65 years old, reside in Newton and they will be asked to present their current driver's license and car registration with the same Newton address.

Jazz band and kids games, highlight July 4 celebration

NEWTON CENTRE — On Sunday, July 3, the Heritage Jazz Band, will perform a free concert at night in the Newton Centre Playground. The event is part of Newton's annual Fourth of July celebration.

On Monday, July 4, The Arts in the Parks program holds a Fourth July Kid's Morning starting at 10 a.m. with a pet parade, a promenade of doll carriages and relay races. From 5:15 to 6:15 p.m., jugglers and magicians will entertain the kids. Brigham's and McDonald's provide free icecreams and drinks.

Parents are asked to come early to help decorate and volunteer in various ways. Call 552-7120 for more information.

Business associations are helping to sponsor the July 4 program. Arts in the Parks is part of the Newton Recreation Department.

Newton Police Department retires four of its finest

The face of the Newton Police Department keeps changing and there are four faces leaving as of June 30.

"As each one of these officers leaves to join the ranks of the retired, they shall be leaving an unfilled void," stated Police Chief William F. Quinn.

Mario Marino

Officer Mario Marino, born on the island Atina off the coast of Italy, came the U.S. at the age of four and became a citizen when his parents attained theirs. At that time he was attending Our Lady Help of Christians School from which he graduated. He and his brothers were outstanding baseball and basketball players under the coaching of the late Father Russell Haley. Following graduation, Marino saw service as an M.P. in England, France and Belgium, during World War II. Upon returing home, he worked in the sheet metal industry awaiting an appointment by Chief Nicholas Veduccio to the Newton force.

Marino, according to Chief Quinn, has worked in all parts of the city in every capacity and most recently in Nonantum where he and his entire family live. His talent goes beyond police work, although he is an exceptional community service officer whose presence where ever he worked created a feeling of safety and serenity among the residents.

Officer Frederick Fraini, 35 years of service, who was recruited by a neighbor, Lt. Charles Feeley, while driving a truck for the Rose-Derry Mattress Company of Nonantum.

Fred Fraini is a Newton native, was educated in Newton schools and excelled in baseball, football and basketball. Following graduation, he entered the U.S. Marines and served four years with the First Marine Division and was a Staff Sergeant upon separation.

Frederick Fraini

Fraini's excellence with weapons was apparent and he joined with the Newton Police instructors team of Joseph Greeley, Sgt. David Dalton, Frank Lovely, all retired, and Joseph Smith, deceased, teaching defensive weaponry. In addition, the team was famous throughout New England as "trick shot" experts and entertained Police and community groups as far south as Washigton, D.C.

Fraini himself was a Medalist in every competition he entered and has, under the direction of Chief Quinn, helped developed hostage teams, a "Swat" team and has been an instructor for 34 of his 35 years as a police officer.

More recently he was assigned to conduct a firearms course for people applying for firearms licensing. Fraini intends to maintain his association with the Newton Police firearms training program.

Charles F. Rivers, 32 year veteran of Patrol, Dectective, Desk Officer and for the past 16 years, Animal Control Officer in the first such unit in New England, is a Newton native, educated in the Newton schools, served three years in the U.S. Army and was discharged as a Sergeant.

When Chief Quinn, as a captain, appealed to the then-Mayor Monte G. Basbas and the Board of Aldermen for an Animal Control Unit within the police department to originally control roving bands of dogs, some of which were in a semi-wild state, the Aldermanic Hearings on the Control Unit and the accompanying leash law had the greatest attendance of any hearing. Most of those present were in opposition and Chief Quinn has stated, "without the sincere effort of Officer Charles Rivers, who was at all times a police officer, in his devotion to a control act beneficial to the city's dogs and children, it could not have been successful."

In addition to handling dogs which is his principal job, he had some experience with Boa constrictors, a rare monkey known as a Kink-a-jou, a pig in a poke - actually a live pig in a burlap sack, and Australian Dingo dog, which is an Australian coyote and is illegal in the United States; skunks, deer, raccoons, horses, ponies, hawks, pheasants, squirrels, and bats galore.

Charles Rivers

Although his work for Animal Control Unit principally concerned animals of all species, he has always responded to police calls and one time while serving a warrant to a resident who was living in the house where he, Rivers, was born, the resident took a shot at him. Rivers was quoted as saying, "If his aim was better, I'd be the only cop born and killed at the same house in the police world."

The fourth officer to leave is Salvatore Arico, born and raised in Watertown, and educated there. He entered the U.S. Army in 1942 and saw service until 1946.

He became a Newton resident when he married a Newton girl, Phyllis Gentile, and joined the police department in 1951, serving 13 years as a patrol officer in

Salvatore Arico

Waban and Newton Highlands. He subsequently was assigned to the Traffic Bureau and was a Traffic Inspector.

During his career he attended Boston State College and was certified as a Driving Education Instructor and taught at Newton High School for five years.

Later he was selected by Newton College of the Sacred Heart as one of 11 officers to institute co-educational study at the formerly all-female college. He received a B.A., from Boston College, which had taken over Newton College at the time of graduation.

He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, Past Commander of the American Legion Post 440, a member of the Nonantum Christmas Party Association and is a member of Police Associations.

Newton newsmakers

Lisa Jan Fruitt of Somerville, a graduate of Newton North High School, has been named an officer for the Board of The Friends of the Kennedy Library.

Dr. Bertha Offenbach of Newton Centre was honored at the recent meeting of the American Women's Medical Association. The citation was "in recognition of outstanding service to women in medicine." The Boston Branch resolved to make this award each year in the name of Bertha Offenbach.

Dr. Offenbach is in private practice of opthalmology. She is president of the New England Society of Clinical Hypnosis and is past president of the American Women's Medical Association, branch 39.

Roger L. Clifton was elected to the Board of Trustees of the Mass. Cultural Alliance at its 14th annual meeting. The Alliance, established in 1969, is a non-profit organization serving a membership of 225 Massachusetts cultural groups as a facilitator for collaboration and communication, and a support structure for increasing public awareness of, and participation in the arts and humanities.

Clifton is a member of the Board of Directors of the FRM Corp, Boston, Trustee of the Boston Psychoanalytic Society-Institute, and Trustee of and Treasurer of MacDuffie School.

Kerkor Kassabian, self-professed Super Jock and the alleged "Godfather" of New England College of athletic trainers, recently was inducted into the National Trainers Assn. Hall of Fame, at the NTA's 38th annual convention at the Hilton Convention Center in Denver.

Newton Catholic's Scott McAdam

Newton Graphic Sports

Hamill Award to McAdam

NEWTON — Scott McAdam, Newton Catholic's sluggling shortstop, has been selected at the 14th winner of the annual Bill Hamill Award, given each year to the outstanding high school baseball player in Newton.

McAdam, who was selected the Most Valuable Player of the Catholic Suburban League in his junior year and a is first team selection this year, had a tremendous season for the Lancers. A co-captain, Scott has been the team's Most Valuable Player for the past two seasons.

Scott is only the second baseball player from Newton Catholic to win the Hamill Award. Lancer Tom Carey won the award in 1977.

Scott was the top batter in the Catholic Suburban League this season with a .593 mark. He had 35 hits in 59 trips to the plate including seven homers, 12 extra base hits, and 27 RBIs. He was also one of the better fielding shortstops in the league.

"Scott performed beyond my wildest dreams," said former Newton Catholic Coach Chuck Enos. "He has improved from year-to-year. His stats tell only part of the story, however. He hit the ball hard nearly every time he stepped up to the plate. Most of his hitting was also done against the league's better pitchers. He is by far the best major league prospect I have seen."

Despite hitting for power, Scott was not a free swinger at bat. He struck only twice during the season and the outs he did make forced the opposition to make a good play. A four-year player for the Lancers, McAdam became a regular as a sophomore. He batted .400 his junior season and his hitting continued to improve his senior season.

"Scott's overall play and desire to win makes him deserving of this award," said Newton Catholic Athletic Director Don Dabenigno. "He was the leader of a young team. Each game he was called upon to be team leader and he handled this role extremely well. His leadership qualities brought out the best in his teammates."

Like Hamill, McAdam was a three-sport athlete. He was a dominant offensive end and linebacker for the football team. McAdam was also a forward on the basketball team.

The Hamill Award, which will be presented by the Kiwanis Club Wednesday, June 29, at noon at Valle's Restaurant in Newton, is given in memory of the late Billy Hamill, who was a three-sport star at Newton High from 1952 to 1955. He played baseball for two years at Holy Cross before signing with the Boston Red Sox organization in 1957. He played four years at Allenton, Pa. of the Eastern League before retiring. Hamill died suddenly of a massive hemorrhage in February of 1969.

The award is voted by a committee of prominent people, which includes Moe Maloney, Watertown High coach; Bill Matthews, Ed Fraktman, Howie Ferguson, former Newton North coach, Russ Halloran, a teammate of Hamill's at Newton High, Paul Burke, Dick McGrath.

Previous winners of the award have been Joe Slamin of Newton North (1982), Gary Frechette of Newton North and Mike Dwyer of Newton South (1980), Chris Chaloff of Newton South (1979), Bobby LeBlanc of Newton North and Mike Reddish of St. Sebastian's (1978), Tom Carey of Newton Catholic (1977), Bruce Jennings of Newton South (1976), Steve DeBenedetto of Newton North (1975 and 1974), Ned Moan of Newton South (1973), Dave Boyajian of Newton North (1972) and Jethro Mills of Newton North (1971 and 1970).

Phillies capture Central LL crown

NEWTON — Scott Devore and Rob Wilkinson powered the Phillies to a 10-6 victory over the Yankees to win the Newton Central Little League Championship Wednesday night at Cabot Park. The Phillies swept the best-of-three series.

Devore slugged his eighth homer of the year in the third inning and Rob Wilkinson follwed suit in that inning with hso sixth home run of the year. The tow hitters put the Phillies to an early 2-1 lead.

The Phillies clinched the game in the top of the sixth. Devore led the inning off with a single. Jay Burke drilled a double to knock Devore home. Bill McCarthy singled in Burke and Steve Leonard smacked out a hit to put runners on first and second. Jeff Pike finished things off when he hit a single and drove in the third run of the inning.

The fourth was also a big inning for the Phillies. They added five more runs when Rob McCarley singled and Devore followed with a walk. Mike Cosgrove knocked McCarley in to score and Wilkinson lined a double to left for two more RBIs.

Jay Burke added to the string of runs with a one run double. Bill McCarthy hit a sharp single to right field to score Burke.

The Yankees tried for a rally in the bottom of the fifthstarting with a John Redman hit. Yankee hurler, Peter Hinteregger, who went through the game without walking anyone, followed with a double to left field. Thad Peterson drove in the two runs with a single.

Steve Leonard pitched the win for his seventh without a loss. He struck out 11 Yankee batters on his way to the victory. The summaries:

PHILLIES(10)- Devore 3-3; Cosgrove 4-1; Wilkinson 4-3; Burke 4-2; McCarthy 4-3; Leonard 4-1; Pike 4-1; McCarley 4-2; Murphy 3-0. Tot.34- 16.

Mosca comeback sinks C & K

NEWTON — Mark Paglia had three hits, while John Toyias homered and earned his first win as the Mosca Club downed National League rival C & K Components, 15-8, at Del Ryan Field Friday night.

The Mosca Club trailed, 8-7, before exploding for six runs in the bottom of the fourth inning. Paglia and Jerry Marcus each had run-scoring doubles, and Steve Stoller singled a run home to key the rally.

Toyias, who scattered eight hits and fanned five, hit a three-run homer in the first. Tony Bran and Kevin Walsh each had two hits for C & K.

St. Bernard's and the Norumbega Chiefs battled it out to 15-15 tie Thursday in an Newton National League game at West Newton Common Playground.

Norumbega was up 4-3 going into the bottom of the fourth when St. Bernard's exploded with a 12 inning rally. Jamie Blue strted the onslaught with a two run homer with nobody out. Corey Rubin and Fred Delacandro ech drove two more runs in with two-baggers.

Norumbega stormed right back in the top of the fifth with 12 runs. Danny Domeniconi led off with a triple. Kenny Castriota went to first on an infield hit. Bobby Antonellis let loose and walloped a three run homer and Norumbega went on to tie it up.

Billy McHugh saved the tie for Norumbega in the last in the last inning. He whiffed the St. Bernard's batters in a row to retire the side before they could make a comeback.

Boys' Club started out ahead and put down a Barry Brothers rally in the fifth to win the game, 10-6, at Upper Falls playground.

Boys' Club started out strong when Chris Pachus smacked a double and Joe Slamin drove him in with a single.

Boys' Club pulled farther ahead in the second with one run on an error and a two run single by Slamin.

Slamin got the ball at third and threw to Joe King at second who tossed it to first baseman Bill Arsenault to end the inning.

John Stewart powered a home run in the seventh inning to give Auburndale Sports Shop a come-from-behind 9-6 win over C & K Components at Del Ryan field.

Auburndale was trailing 6-4 going into the seventh inning. Rick Keyes started things out with a double to left that drove Tony Panaggio in for the first run of what became the winning inning. David Bucley walked and Don Fox doubled to right field sending Keyes in to score and moving Buclkey to third.

John Stewart took care of things from there. He smacked a homer to right field to give Auburndale a final 9-6 lead.

The second was C&K's big inning with hits from Kevin Walsh, Dave Gish, Dan Pill and Mike Noble.

Tigers clinch South series

NEWTON — Ty Rawls belted a pair of three-run homers to lead the Tigers to a 13-6 triumph over the Yankees Thursday night in the "rubber" final game of the Newton South Little League championship series at Richardson Field. The Tigers had a 2-1 edge in the best-of-three playoff.

Rawls' first homer, a shot to center field, gave the Tigers a 5-2 lead in the bottom of the fourth. The Yankees scored four times in the top of the fifth to regain the lead, but Rawls sparked an eight-run explosion in the bottom of the inning with his second three-run shot.

Bruce Lowrey, Bruce Lindsay, Steven Sprich, Bill Hagar and Rawls all had three hits for the Tigers. Gavin Dreyer got the win to finish at 10-0.

The Yankees got a triple and a double from Larry Kalis, and Dan Shugrue also had two hits.

Farina-Butler Woodland victors

NEWTON — Vin Farina and Dick Butler pooled their talents to capture first-ever Woodland Member-Member Golf Tournament Sunday at the Woodland Golf Club.

Farina and Butler finished with 17 points to outdistance their nearest competition by three points in the best-ball tourney. The Woodland Member-Guest was scheduled for this past weekend, but the fire forced the postponement of the tourney.

The members made due, however. Farina and Butler have been playing together for five years. They know what the other can do and they combined their respective strengths to form a winning combination.

"Vin kept outdriving everybody," said Butler of Newton. "We knew we were in contention for the top spot, but we didn't take anything for granted. I just kept telling Vin to take it one hole at a time."

"He told me that about 64 times," said Farina, also of Newton. "Dick was putting great for the entire tourney and between us we kept it going. The biggest key for us was we kept picking each other up.

"It almost seemed like we were taking turns," Farina continued. "Dick would have a good hole and then I'd come back with a good hole. We just kept it up for the entire tourney and it worked well."

"Yes, we helped each other quite a bit," said Butler. "We both were playing well, but it always seemed we were able to back each other up. We didn't have any spectacular holes, but we also didn't have any terrible holes. We just played steady, consistent golf and it turned out to be good enough to win."

Farina and Butler's score of 17 points vaulted them to the championship of the Augusta Flight. The overall tourney runnerups Sean Kelly Sr. and Woodland Golf Club President Len Tocci with a score of 14. Tocci and Kelly did capture first place in the Pebble Beach Flight.

John Gildea and Frank Demambro scored 10 points to take top honors in the Muirfield Flight. Jack McGourty and Dick Harrison were the winners of the Merion Flight with 13 points, which also put them in third place overall.

Jack Flanagan and Robert Muse, Jr. finished first in the Oakmont Flight with 12 points to finish tied for fourth overall. Barry Jones and Bill Mannix finished first in the Baltustrol Flight with 12 points (to tie for fourth place).

Dr. Stephen Alphus and his son Stephen copped top spot in the Firestone Flight with six points.

Pitching strength keys Tigers

By Steve Tiberi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — It may be too early for this statement, but the fortunes of the next Newton North baseball team will rest greatly upon the performance of the pitching staff.

The Tigers will have their five top pitchers back for next season. Coach Dick Walker hopes that a year of growth and maturity will imrpove his staff.

"We've definitely got a nucleus for a strong, deep pitching staff," said Walker, whose team finished with an 8-10 record on the season. "We never really had that senior stopper on this year's staff and I'm hoping to develop one for next season. I feel that was the one ingredient this past season's team was missing."

Walker will have a host of experienced and talented hurlers to choose from and mold to his expectations. He has them all working on off-season strength programs as well as pitching regularly in the Newton International and National Leagues.

"I believe a year's maturity will make a big difference in our pitching staff," said Walker. "I allowed these younger pitchers to fend for themselves a bit this year. I let them stay in the game in all type of situations to see how they'd react. Next season I'll be looking for a little more production. They've been through it this season."

The most promising pitcher on the Newton North horizon maybe junior-to-be Greg Larson. At 6-4, Larson has the size and the arm to be a dominant pitcher in the Suburban League. The rangy right-hander compiled a 3-3 record on the year.

"Greg had an outstanding season as a sophomore," said Walker. "He has the potential to be a force in the league for the next two seasons. He has to work hard on bearing down on batters and not giving them a good pitch when he's up on the count. He's got the strong arm."

The leader of the staff next season, however, will be senior-to-be Dave Boyle. He doesn't possess the size of Larson, but he's got a wicked curve ball. He posted a 3-4 record in the past campaign and he has proven he can beat anyone.

"Dave can be a big winner," said Walker. "He showed that this season by beating teams like Natick. He just has to learn to get into his rythmn a little quicker. He's had trouble in the early innings, but then seems to settle down."

Joe King was 2-2 for the Tigers this past season. He put together a brilliant seven-inning performance to beat Quincy this season. "Joe just needs to grow a little bit and add to his fastball," said Walker. "He's got a great knowledge of the game and with a year's maturity he'll help us next season."

Jeff Robinson is much like King. He must improve his strength to add to his fastball. Other hurlers with a shot at next year's staff include Bob Connerney and Bob Martin (who were on the varsity, but didn't pitch). Dave Gish, who pitched for the junior varsity, will also make a big to crack the staff along with sophomore Ray Gladu.

The Tiger pitching staff is back, but the middle of the defense wil have to be replaced. Walker must find a new catcher, second baseman, shortstop and centerfielder or in other words the heart of the defense.

"There's no question that the players filling those positions will have quite a load to carry," said Walker. "But, I know we have the personnel returning on the varsity and up from the junior varsity to more than do the job."

The catcher position will be a toss up between sophomores Chirs Bercury and Colin Ryan and junior Sean Gardner. Bercury played in the final game of the season against Weymouth South and showed good defensive form throwing out a base runner. Ryan, meanwhile, impressed on the jayvee level. Bercury spent the entire season with the varsity.

At second base, King may be the answer. He'll be pushed by a number of candidates up from the junior varsity. Connerney, who saw limited action on the varsity, will be the key player in the scheme of next season's infield. Connerney can play either shortstop or third base.

Jim Proia, Corey Rubin, Chuck Proia and Tom Dalicandro (all sophomores) will be vying for the other infield slot. All played infield for the jayvee. Also Boule, who batted .333 this past season, is a possibility for an infield slot.

At first base, Chip Guiney (who hit .316 on the year) will be back. He has excellent mechanics. Jim Arsenault, who has good size, played for the junior varsity and he may be the power hitter the Tigers need. Arsenault will press Guiney for the starting assignment at first.

The outfield has one starter back and a part-time starter back. Chris Pachus played left field for the Tigers for the entire season and where he plays next year depends on the performance of the junior varsity products.

Bob Martin played at the beginning of the season in right field. Martin has good speed and is a solid defensive outfielder. He may be moved into center. There are some super quick sophomores ready to break into the lineup. Sophomores Don Natale and Alex DeNucci are a pair of ball hawks. Junior Dave White can also chase them down and all three will be fighting for a starting job on the varsity.

"The Suburban League figures to be tough next year," said Walker. "Waltham, Cambridge and Brockton all have a lot of key people back. We're going to have to rely on our pitching and defense. On offense, we may be looking to scratch out runs more. We'll have a little speed and I'd like to use it."

League elects new leadership

NEWTON — The league of Women Voters of Newton recently held its June Annual Meeting at which time the membership elected a new Board, confirmed its current policies and positions, passed its 1983-1984 budget, and voted to conduct a new study on the size of the Newton Board of Alderman.

During a lively discussion on local program, the members agreed to conduct a six-week summer study on the size of the Board of Aldermen. This item, which was introduced by League member and Alderman Ethel Sheeham, received a great deal of discussion as it is an issue on which the League does not currently hold a position. By conducting this study and arriving a position on the issue, the League will be able to actively participate in the public debate of this topic this fall.

The Jane Leighton Volunteer Award was presented to Mary Adelstein, one of the League's most active and respected members. For the past 25 years she has been involved in local and state League activities and her special interest has been environmental quality. For the last four years she has served as local action chair and her responsibilities have included overseeing over fifty different action efforts on local issues in Newton. The Jane Leighton Volunteer Award is presented annually to a League member who has given generously of herself to the League, contributed vision and strength, and brought good will and good humor to all who have worked with her.

"The state of the League is great," outgoing President Sandy Butzel indicated in her final address. She credited this situation to the large number of highly successful voters service activities that the League has conducted over the past two years. These have included the Frank-Heckler Debate, the "Pizza 'n Politics" Mayoral Sebate, the voters guides in the newspapers, voter registration information, and much more. Butzel ended by indicating that she "really loved being your president and having the privilege of representing the League in the community and receiving instant respect because of the high esteem accorded the organization."

Newly elected president of the League of Women Voters of Newton Ann Grantham, left, accepts the gavel from outgoing President Sandy Butzel during the organization's annual meeting in June.

The newly elected officers for the 1983-1984 year include Ann Grantham, President, Shari Arntz, Vice-President, Nancy Crowley, Vice-President, Judy Jaffe, VIce-President, Joan Bates, Recording Secretary, Helen Jordan, Corresponding Secretary, Regina Vivardo, Treasurer. The new Directors are Marygrace Barber, Eleanor BLumberg, Bonnie Carter, Terri Cohen, Callie Egan, Marsha Francis, Elaine Freidan, Carol Hall, Anne Hayden, Margaret LeBlanc, Linda Morrison, Susan Rosenbloom, Elaine Shooman, Joyce Smith, Miriam Stewart, and Myra Tattenbaum.

City to sell abandoned vehicles

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Scofflaws beware, if you refuse to claim your car once it has towed, the city can eventually sell it.

The new city policy begins today, said Alderman Joseph DePasquale chairman of the aldermanic Public Safety and Transportation Committee.

Local tow companies have wanted legislative action to remedy their dilemma of having to store cars that people refuse to claim, because the auto's value is not worth the cost of the tow company's storage fees and the city's parking fines.

Monday's Public Safety and Transportation Committee meeting gave the tow companies the relief they wanted.

The city's "tow and hold" ordinance enacted this April, allows private tow companies, authorized by the police, to haul away a vehicle for having five or more parking tickets, but the service companies have encountered people who refuse to claim their cars.

Storage fees at $10 a day quickly add up and often overtake the vehicle's value, say tow company officials.

Assistant City Solicitor Michael Baseman told the committee that the state statute is all Newton needs to sell abandoned property. The statute pertains to any kind of abandoned property, Baseman added.

To sell a car is a complicated legal procedure and takes nearly a month to complete, said Baseman. The added time means more storage fees.

State statute requires that first, the auto's value be estimated, then a registered letter is sent to the owner giving them a 10-day response period, next the city's intent to sell the vehicle is published for three weeks in a newspaper and finally it is sold at a auction, according to Baseman.

Baseman estimates by the time all the above steps have been taken the combined storage fees and fines will have accumulated to about $400.

Tow companies have first claim to any money collected from the sale and the remainder ends up in city coffers, according to Baseman.

If the vehicle's value is appraised at less than the accumulated fees and fines it can be scrapped by Director of Public Works John Sulik and the two companies cannot collect their charges from the city, according to Baseman. In a court case against the City of Boston, a private tow company lost when it tried to collect the fees for storing worthless autos, he added.

Arts in the Parks offers music, crafts and theater for kids and adults

NEWTON — Newton Arts in the Parks will be sponsored again this year by the Newton Parks and Recreation Department.

Registration has begun for classes in knitting, basketry, herbs, crocheting, sewing, yoga, quilting and needlepoint. Workshops for children include art, music, drama, clowning and puppets.

Linda Plaut, program director, said "Arts in the Parks has grown because it has fulfilled a need. We offer programs of high quality with an affordable fee structure."

This summer's program features a Wednesday afternoon Children's Theatre Series and Tuesday Evening Concerts at the Jackson Homestead. The concert series will feature artists such as the Klezmer Conservatory Band, Joe Val and the New England Bluegrass Boys, Gary Rosen and Bill Schontz, Bill Staines and Jeanie Stahl and Mason Daring. There will also be Sunday evening concerts on the Newton Centre Green.

"It is a wonderful, enriching experience to have events such as summer concerts available right here in Newton," said Marion Pollock, co-president of Warmlines, a Newton based parent resource center.

Another program is "Partners" which is designed to introduce two and three year olds to art and music along with an adult in their life — parent, babysitter or friend.

According to Pollock, Partners was "the first formal program I took my daughter Sara to and it was quality time with my child. She developed a love for music in the class."

Keren Milner, "Partners" music instructor, said, "Five years ago we decided on a dare to try working with young children, starting out informally with 12 couples, adult and child." Through word of mouth, "Partners" grew into a complete art and music program with two classes and 24 couples.

Milner said, "The parents become friends too. The great value of the course is an outlet for mothers, and we have had fathers in the program too."

Chinch bug infestation

NEWTON — Each year, many lawns become infested and damaged by chinch bugs, the Middlesex County Extension Service reports.

These tiny insects feed on grass tissue causing stress and eventual death of lawns. Since these are a serious lawn pest in Massachusetts, homeowners should recognize potential chinch bug invasion and take necessary controls.

Adult chinch bugs are black, 1/6 inches long with while markings. In the immature stages, they have the same shape, but lack wings and have red or orange markings. However, both the immature and adult insects are harmful to lawns, causing damage by sucking plant juices from the tender growing grass. Damage appears especially in sunny locations and is recognized as brown patches in the lawn from mid June until fall.

One way to detect chinch bugs in your lawn is to examine the grass by spreading it to look at the soil surface for these insects. Another way of detection is to remove both ends of a tin can, insert it into the ground at the edge of the brown grass areas, leaving four to five inches above ground, fill the can with water, and within ten minutes, if chinch bugs are present, they will float to the water surface.

For control of chinch bugs, insecticides such as carbaryl or diazinon should be applied in early to mid June and once again two to three weeks later. In some cases, a later summer application (early August) may be necessary. If possible, the lawn should be watered before treating, and if granular material is used, water thoroughly after treatment.

If chinch bugs are a problem in your lawn, now is the time to apply controls. For further information, request a "Chinch Bugs" bulletin from the Middlesex County Extension Service, 105 Everett St., Concord, 01742.

Single parents

NEWTON — Being a single parent is a difficult and lonely experience. But,it does have its rewarding moments as participants in Single Parents groups sponsored by Jewish Family and Childrens's Service discover about themselves.

JFACS is forming a new discussion group for Single Parents in the Broolkine and Newton area. Led by an agency social worker, the group meets once a week for 5-6 weeks. Members not only share their experiences; they meet new friends who understand and empathize with their situations.

For further information on date, time and location of the Single Parents Group, call Naomi Mittel at 235-8997.

Campus Notes

Two local students were among the 76 seniors graduated from the Pomfret School in Pomfret, Ct., in ceremonies held June 4. Receiving diplomas were: Jeffrey L. Goldings, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Goldings of West Newton, who will attend Trinity College in Hartford; and Jessica L. Slosberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Myles Slosberg of Chestnut Hill, who will attend Dartmouth College in Hanover, NH. Miss Slosberg was also elected this year to the school's chapter of the cum laude society and she was the recipient of an award for excellence in drama.

Joan E. Lewis, daughter of Atty. and Mrs. Charles H. Lewis, graduated cum laude from Tufts University on May 29. She was also the recipient of the Thurgood Marshall Law Award from the Afro-American Center of Tufts University.

On June 12 the Masachusetts School of Professional Psychology (MSPP) conferred the Doctor of Psychology (Psy.D.) degree on its third graduating class of 17 students.

Graduation ceremonies were held at the school's Newton campus, 785 Centre Street. The keynote speaker was Dr. George Albee, a professor of psychology at the University of Vermont, and a past-president of the American Psychological Association. Pauline Gerson was the student speaker.

MSPP, which was founded in 1974 as a non-profit free-standing institution, is the first school in New England to grant the Psy.D. degree, which represents completion of doctoral education specifically geared to the preparation of psychological practitioners.

College students representing 21 different schools met at the Museum of Science where they learned what their responsibilities would be as Yankee interns for 12 weeks this summer at various locations throughout New England. The Yankee Intern Program is a joint effort of Yankee Publishing Incorporated of Dublin, NH, and The National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Alan Tafapolsky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Tafapolsky of Newton, has been assigned to a project in Boston. He is a recent graduate of Connecticut College in New London with a major in Anthropology. Tafapolsky will be a laboratory and field assistant for Boston University's Center for Archeological Studies, working with an excavation project at the Blackstone Block in downtown Boston. He will conserve and catalogue the finds from the site.

Alison R. Reder, the daughter of Mrs. Naomi M. Stearns of 56 Fisher Ave., Newton, and Dr. Sanford M. Reder of 14 Myrtle St., Jamaica Plain, recently graduated from The Williston Northampton School, an independent co-ed preparatory school located in Easthampton.

At a recent academic awards assembly, Reder was presented the Dickinson Prize for the best single dramatic performance. She plans to attend Connecticut College.

Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute awarded Robert Edward Alexander of 82 Miller Rd., Newton, a bachelor of science degree in computer science.

George Shinn, president of Rutledge College, a chain of 22 business schools from coast to coast, was the commencement speaker at the 69th commencement exercises of Johnson & Wales College, Providence, R.I.

A total of 1679 degrees and 12 diplomas were awarded to graduates of the college's business and culinary arts divisions, and two new programs, the Equine Studies program and the Pastry Arts program. Women represented 42 percent of the graduating class. In culinary arts, women earned 31 percent of the degrees, confirming an increasing trend. Eric A. Tonkonogy, of 102 McCarthy Rd., Newton, received an associate in science in culinary arts degree. He is the son of Jason and Sybil Tonkonogy of Newton.

The Acadia Institute of Oceanography at Seal Harbor, Me., is pleased to announce that Dylan Steer of 55 Miller Rd., Newton Centre, will be attending the 1983 summer session in marine studies.

Dylan will be in 10th grade at Newton South High School, and has been recommended by Mr. Charles L. Hurwitz of the Science Department.

YOUR OFFICIAL MASS. INSPECTION MAINTENANCE STATIONS

Now that your car is inspected just once a year, the last number on your plate determines when.

If it's 7, you're inspected in July.

Zeros come in October, though, and plates with all letters in November.

We'll do the traditional safety checks as well as the new computerized tailpipe emissions test. Quickly and efficiently.

Docket No. 500098
NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Thomas P. Beal late of Newton, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the first and second accounts of State Street Bank and Trust Company and May Morgan Beal as Trustees (the fiduciaries) under article 7 para 2 of the will of said deceased for the benefit of Cynthia M. Nadai and others have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Cambridge on or before the thirteenth day of July, 1983, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciaries, or to the attorney for the fiduciaries, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciaries pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

Witness, Sheila E. McGovern, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this 17th day of June, 1983.
